House boat takes cruise along Interstate 20 bridge

By LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer

A house boat took an unauthorized cruise on Interstate 20 this morning before coming to rest partially off the mile marker 171 bridge.

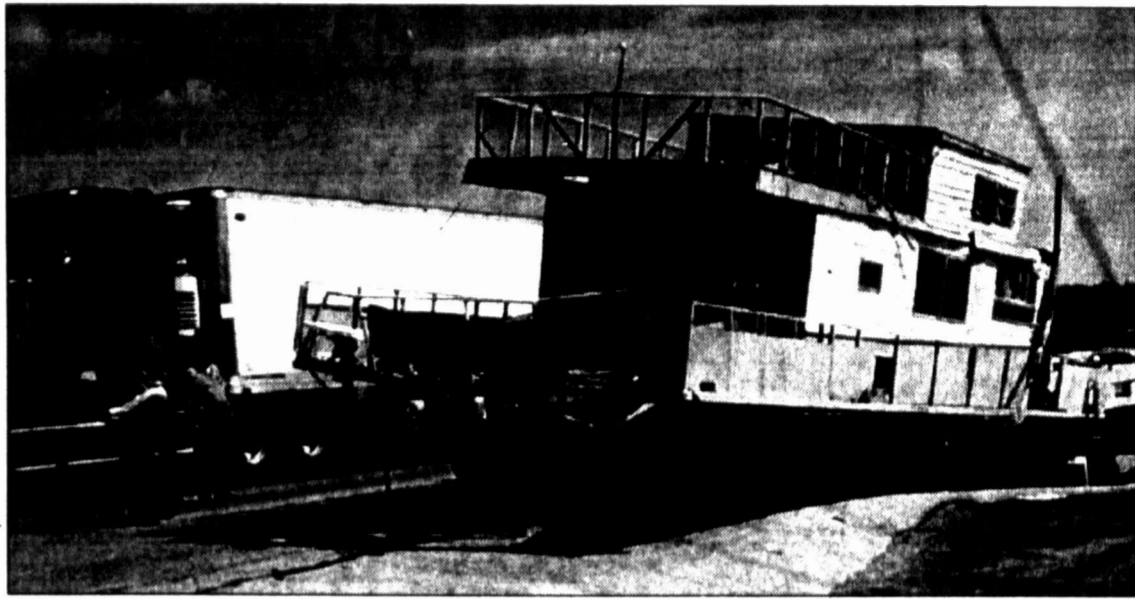

According to Department of Safety Trooper Marc Couch, Gary Froenke of Odessa was hauling his house boat east on Interstate 20 to take it in for renovations.

"The driver had stopped to fix a flat by mile marker 172," Couch said.

When the jack was up, the hitch came off the ball. Couch said, and Froenke did not check the chain before continuing on the interstate.

As the semi continued east on the interstate, the chain connecting the vehicle with the trailer broke.

Mishap downs power line for short time

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

A downed power line spanning FM 700 affected almost 700 customers including Wal-Mart Thursday.

"Thursday afternoon, I believe between 5:30 and 5:40 p.m., a track excavator working on the FM 700 project came into contact with one of the overhead power lines and caused it to short out and drop across the four lanes of FM 700 as well as the service roads," Big Spring Fire Marshal Carl Condray said.

Condray said that units from the fire and police departments, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Texas Department of Highways responded to the scene and redirected traffic around the area.

Oncor technicians Devry Kidd, left, and Nick Roberson work to repair a power line over FM 700 Thursday evening. The line was downed when a track excavator came into contact with it, causing a short circuit. The incident affected 697 customers, and left six, including Wal-Mart, powerless for about an hour.

"Oncor was notified within just a very few minutes," he said. "They brought their equipment out and repaired the high line back up over FM 700, and traffic resumed."

Rodeo board to be honored with dinner on Monday

By LYNDEL MOODY

Staff Writer

Current and former members of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion and Rodeo board will be honored Monday during a dinner held by the Heritage Museum to kick off rodeo week.

"We hope that this is the beginning of a tradition," said JoAnne Forest, a member of the Heritage Museum board. "The rodeo in itself is well known and well respected. We have world champions compete at our rodeo and numerous athletes from across the nation."

Museum board committee members have named the event Legends and Legacies.

"We are inviting the whole public, rodeo members and fans of the rodeo to come," said Katie Cathey, Heritage Museum board president.

This year's radio announcer, Mike Mathis, will be master of ceremonies for the event and Miss Rodeo Texas Teen Cassie Lynn Graham of Wills Point will make an appearance.

The dinner will begin at 6 p.m. and will be served by museum board members and their spouses on the museum's patio, 510 Scurry.

Old Sorehead Trade Days slated over weekend

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

Stanton will once again pay homage to its "few old soreheads" this weekend by throwing a big party and shopping extravaganza.

This year

marks the 10th anniversary of the Old Sorehead Trade Days, and most of Stanton's 3,000 friendly people, plus others from Martin and Howard counties and all over, will gather in the downtown area to have fun and shop "until they can't," according to Martin County Extension Agent for Family and Consumer Sciences Kathryn Burch.

"Our June show is proba-ly our smallest show, but that show is growing," she said. "We're working at getting more fine art. One of the people that's coming does Western pen-and-ink, and he does outstanding art work. I think people will enjoy visiting with him and seeing his art."

Burch said three local antique dealers will be open and taking part in the Trade Days, offering antique furniture, quilts, lamps, western toy sewing machines, clocks, glassware and dishes.

"Obviously I've left a few things off the list, since it did not go on for six pages," Burch said. "You can find almost anything antique you are looking for."

Antiques will not be the only items for the buying.

Funtastic Fourth booth spaces filling up quickly

By ROGER CLINE

Staff Writer

Preparations are well under way for the debut of the Funtastic Fourth Festival, but members of the group organizing the Independence Day event say there is still plenty of booth space available for vendors.

"They're going fast," said Funtastic Fourth Festival chairwoman Vickie Dahmer of the Downtown Revitalization Association. "We have already sold approximately 75 booths and we still have more vendor booths available."

The booths, organizers noted, can be used for just about anything.

"It can't be immoral and it can't be hazardous to our health," said DRA Treasurer Ellen Barefoot, adding that examples of things that won't be allowed are pornography and alcoholic beverages.

"(Alcohol) isn't allowed anywhere in the festival," she said.

Dahmer listed some of the types of vendors signed up so far.

"These booths are for fund-raisers, we're doing charities, we're doing businesses that are advertising their business," she said. "We're doing vendors that are selling products."

Barefoot added to the list. "They can have garage sales, they can have information booths to tell people about their business, they can have a drawing," she said. "They can have fundraisers. We have sold several for Relay For Life that are already starting now even though it's just finished. There's a lot of different needs. Some of them are arts and crafts, or whatever."

No spots for food vendors are left, Dahmer said.

"We have 27 food booths," she said.

Dahmer said that nobody that comes to the festival should leave hungry.

"We have lots of different good stuff," she said.

The 10-foot by 10-foot booths that are still available are $10 each and don't have electricity or water.

The festival is also selling banners and signs for advertising.

"People are going to want these 12,000 people that are going to be coming to this to see their signs up everywhere," Dahmer said. "So the banners are two by six (feet) and they're $100. Then we've got a smaller sign that's going to be in, like, flowerboxes and all over. They are $30. They're 12 by 12 (inches)."

Those who aren't ready to have a booth this year should call soon to sign up for next year, Dahmer said.

"If people cannot do it this year, they need to sign up for next year, because of the way this is going and the size of this event," she said. "It's large. Next year it's going to be very difficult to get a place to rent. It's going to be hard to get a booth, so they need to sign up for a booth now for next year."

The DRA is planning to make next year's festival a two-day event, she said.

The absolute deadline to sign up for booths is June 21, but those waiting until the last minute could be out of luck, Dahmer said.

"I don't like to give deadlines, really, because they're filling up early," she said.

The deadline for signs and banners is June 26.

For more information or to sign up for booths, signs or banners, call Barefoot at 268-9070 or Vickie Dahmer at 267-5223, or stop by Nannie's Attic at 117 N. Main or Dahmer's Antiques at 206 N. Main.

Condray said no one was injured during the incident. "The operator of the excavator was not hurt," he said. "There were no injuries reported. We transported or treated no one."

The line was spliced back together and operational, and the scene was cleared within about an hour, he said.

Jan Hensen of Oncor said while 697 customers were affected, only Wal-Mart and five other customers remained down the entire hour.

"It was down at, like, 5:37 and we had it back on at 6:30," she said.

Hensen said the excavator did not actually break the power line, but when it contacted the line, it caused a short-circuit, melting the line in two.

Open your Bible and discover the expertise of Jesus of Nazareth

A few years ago a popular hit single, "Where have all the Cowboys gone?" dominated the airwaves. The artist just needs to move to West Texas. A better question for our society is: "Where have all the experts gone?" Actually, they're not gone, just ignored. We live in a society where trust in experts has all but vanished. No longer do Americans look to the intelligentsia for knowledge and advice, now we look to the guy sitting next to us at the "wisdom table" in the local coffee shop who seems to know quite a bit about most everything. We Americans are proud of our "common sense," a phrase that derives from the notion of "community sense." As long as we have common sense, then why do we need the opinions of experts? We are the experts! Just like we know better how to call plays for the Dallas Cowboys on Monday morning, so do we all "know" what's best for America. As George Burns slyly noted, "Too bad that all the people who know how to run the country are busy driving taxicabs and cutting hair." (No offense to either cab drivers or cos-metologists!) I am writing this not to belittle something as American as apple pie, but only to support my belief that certain types of expertise are usually either ignored or deemed unnecessary. But is our "common sense" really common sense? That is, is it something that derives from absolute principles based on reason and rationality to which all thinking persons would agree? Or is our common sense really just "community sense," something based on the relative assumptions of our society and culture? Do we need experts (people who are able to criticize our assumptions) or not? If we do need them, are we too proud or too deceived to accept them? My favorite sociologist, C. Wright Mills, became famous for noting how the BIG THREE (government, military, and corporations) bypass the expertise of the intelligentsia by using the media (all forms) in order to control the ideology of the masses. Mills believed that the majority is always wrong. Sometimes I think he is right. He seems to echo a profound thought I encountered a few years ago: Common sense is not all it's cracked up to be! In fact, Jesus spent his entire ministry doing his best to overcome the common sense of his day. Scholars like to distinguish between "common" or "traditional" wisdom and "subversive" wisdom. Jesus was all about the latter. His wisdom was "uncommon." Ours should be as well. When you think about it, for those of us who call ourselves "Christian," Jesus should be held up as the "expert." Unfortunately, for many people (both church and un-church), Jesus' teachings have become about as irrelevant as the view of America's intelligentsia. C. Wright Mills would probably agree with many Christian thinkers today (of the subversive kind) who say that our religious views and interpretations of the Gospel have been clouded by the traditional values of our society, including materialism, consumerism, security by force, and the ethics of exclusion. In other words, our "community sense" may be the biggest obstacle in our search for the kingdom of God, as taught by Jesus. So, if tomorrow morning you are rubbing elbows with your friends in the coffee shop and you discover that they agree with you, rest assured that you are sitting next to either the most authentic group of disciples of Jesus in Big Spring, Texas, or, for the sake of "fitting in," you have sold out to good old common sense. If the latter is the case, then open your Bible and discover the "expertise" of Jesus of Nazareth.

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — At 63, Philip Brockmyre has become the oldest man ever ordained a priest in the local Roman Catholic diocese. The widower, who has eight children and 17 grandchildren, is also thought to be the first priest ordained locally after raising a family. When his wife died of pancreatic cancer in 1998, the former social worker applied to the Rochester, N.Y., diocese, where he lived, but it has an age limit of 50 for seminarians. Brockmyre studied at Pope John XXIII National Seminary near Boston, which caters to second-career clergy.

YOUR VIEWS

TO THE EDITOR:
Loyce Phillips is and will always be the best teacher I have ever known. I have been teaching for 21 years and I have seen and known some wonderful teachers. She is the best. I taught first grade for seven years, so I know the job. I also taught second grade and received her students. They were also loved, complimented, encouraged and confident enough to try new things.

She has taught in West Texas for 42 years, 36 of those years here at Kentwood Elementary. She has served on numerous committees throughout the years. We have all benefited from her knowledge and experience when making curriculum decisions. She is well thought of in the community and active in her church.

I have so many wonderful memories of working with Loyce. She always picked characters for her plays by drawing names out of a hat instead of picking the "best for the part." She said, "Everyone gets to be best" regardless of their talent or speaking ability. This practice made for some very lively characters and plays. I remember getting so tickled while trying to discipline our children. No matter the offense, we always saw humor and fun in their little faces.

Loyce, for all those times when people would answer with "ohhh" when you told them you teach first grade as if all you do is this sweet, little job. They have never known how much intelligence, talent, courage, patience and hard work it takes to teach first grade. It is the hardest grade because you have to have such knowledge and perception about how children learn and what they are capable of learning. Maybe the world will never know or "get" what you do but know this: "I get it". With all the work, frustration, fear, joy and patience, you have taught me how to teach. If I can take some of this to heart, maybe my next 20 won't be so difficult.

Global warming and the non-solution

Throwing around words like "fantastic" and "stupefying" is considered bad form outside the tabloid press. But I'm damned if I know what else to say about the news that the Bush administration has decided that global warming is indeed taking place and they are planning to do exactly nothing about it.

MOLLY IVINS

Here we are in the middle of wallowing in this, "What didn't they know and why didn't they know it?" debate — this maddening, haunting and probably useless exercise in "Why didn't somebody do something?" September 11 left quite a bit of spilt milk on the floor, but even that disaster will pale against the consequences of unchecked global warming. Yet here is the Bush government announcing right here and now that it knows this disaster is coming but it will not do anything to stop it. They will not even do anything to slow it down or soften its impact. What can you call that except fantastically irresponsible?

According to The New York Times, the United States has reported to the United Nations that that global warming will substantially alter our climate in the next few decades, but the report "recommends adapting to inevitable changes. It does not recommend making rapid reductions in greenhouse gases to limit warming, the approach favored by many environmental groups and countries that have accepted the Kyoto Protocol, a climate treaty written in the Clinton administration that was rejected by Mr. Bush." For the first time, the Bush administration acknowledges that global warming is mostly caused by humans burning fossil fuels, but it proposes to do exactly nothing about it.

"Adapt to the inevitable changes?" The changes are not inevitable. The changes, according to scientists, can be mitigated, the effects ameliorated and at the very least we can stop aggravating the potential catastrophe. The First Rule of Holes is that when you are in one, you should stop digging. To keep right on doing what is already causing disastrous consequences is either insane or profoundly stupid.

Environmentalists do not underestimate the difficulties the United States faces in trying to wean itself from fossil fuel. Pretty much our entire transportation grid is based on the gasoline engine. "Lay rail," is one thing we could do. Switch to cars with hybrid engines, increase fuel-efficiency standards, change as rapidly as possible to renewable energy sources — the menu of alternative behaviors is already long and it works. We can cut greenhouse gases; we can even do it dramatically. We are not helpless.

We are, however, currently governed by an administration of oil executives and people whose main guiding principle seems to be opposing anything Bill Clinton favored. This is both pathetic and ridiculous. Kert Davies, director of Greenpeace USA's global warming campaign, said, "The Bush administration's climate policy smells like Exxon-Mobil."

That's not conspiratorial thinking or a politically motivated crack against Bush. Greenpeace has a new report out, "Denial and Deception: A Chronicle of Exxon-Mobil's Efforts to Corrupt the Global Warming Debate." Exxon-Mobil and the other oil giants have spent millions of dollars to undermine the science of global warming. They are not in denial, a perfectly understandable reaction to bad news, but acting out of greed-driven duplicity.

Here's an idea. Under the right-wing legal doctrine of "takings," whenever the government does something that reduces the value of your property, you have a right to sue. Bush is in fact busily appointing judges who uphold this doctrine. One thing global warming will do is destroy an awful lot of property value. So let's sue the government now. To fail to take action in the face of a recognized threat is not only incredibly stupid, but also legally actionable. Misfeasance, malfeasance and nonfeasance can all be alleged, reckless, irresponsible conduct, failure of duty ... a litany of charges.

The eternal complaint, "Everybody complains about the weather but nobody does anything about it," is about to be stood on its head. No point in complaining about global warming if you don't do something about it.

"In the next few decades ..." says the report. Let's call it 20 years, so most of us can expect we'll still be here. We'll live to see the meadows and the marshlands gone, the coasts going under and blasted by hurricanes, the Southwest dead of thirst and the whole problem getting worse because nothing has been done to stop it. And when they hold the great congressional investigation in 20 years to find out who knew and who should have done something about it, they won't have to subpoena documents from the CIA and the FBI, no energy company will need to shred the evidence, the White House won't have to stonewall, no cover-up will be needed — because we will find that it was all on the front pages 20 years ago.

And whom will we blame then for not doing something in time?

Why Britain should keep the monarchy

The British have occasionally flirted with the idea of abolishing the monarchy. This is not new. They actually did abolish it in 1649, when King Charles I was defeated by Parliament in the English Civil War. Eleven years later they brought the beheaded king's son, Charles II, back in the Restoration, albeit with fewer kingly powers than his father had.

JACK ANDERSON

This week, the British are celebrating Queen Elizabeth II's Golden Jubilee — 50 years on the throne. And once again discussion is raised about doing away with British royalty. It has happened before during her reign. During the 1960s, the gilded carriages, horse guards, and matronly dress were considered out of touch with the modern era. The queen altered her manner, acquired a more human touch, and the storm passed.

Then came Princess Diana, the late wife of Prince Charles, heir to the throne. She was the most beloved of the royals since Queen Elizabeth I ruled three centuries earlier. Not even the Queen Mother (Queen Elizabeth II's mother), who recently passed away, was more popular. Diana combined beauty and charm with a common touch the people understood, and the more trouble she had with Prince Charles and the queen, the more questions were raised about the viability of the monarchy.

Then, when Princess Diana was killed in an automobile crash in Paris, the queen was viewed as lacking sufficient compassion. Once again, the queen adapted, and once again the storm passed.

But is the monarchy really that fragile? It is not. Besides the two most-quoted justifications for retaining the monarchy — tourism and tradition — lies the most important reason: it is essential to the British form of government.

When the United States Constitution was written, John Adams and other founding fathers insisted upon a bicameral legislature. The House of Representatives would represent the people; the Senate would represent the states. They feared the tyranny of the majority, and their fears were borne out when the French Revolution erupted in 1789.

The French National Assembly, which represented the people, was not balanced by another branch. The result was that tyranny ensued and gave rise to Napoleon Bonaparte, who eventually crowned himself emperor.

It was Bonapartism that struck fear in the hearts of an emerging democracy like America and an evolving democracy like Great Britain.

Whereas three separate branches of government and two legislative wings prevented a French experiment in America, it was the monarchy that did so in Great Britain. And to this day the British monarch continues to provide that legislative leavening so essential for orderliness. Queen Elizabeth II is no mere figurehead. The prime minister consults with her regularly; she holds a special position with regard to British intelligence services; she is the living symbol of her country; and, most of all, the public realizes that their monarch represents them, and that she would expose any government that was running amuck.

So the British monarchy is not the powerless position people sometimes believe it to be. Rather, it is an essential branch of the British government, without which that government would have to create a replacement or risk falling into the chaos John Adams feared and the French Revolution produced.

Prediction: The British people have a political, familial and psychological bond with their monarchy, which they are not going to give up. They have no current alternative.

Congregation of nuns uses Internet, TV ads to attract potential sisters

ADRIAN, Mich. (AP)

Life is short. Eternity isn't.

That's the message a congregation of nuns is preaching through a major Internet, TV, billboard and mail campaign.

The four-month effort, the most far-reaching in the history of the Adrian Dominican Sisters — possibly the most extensive of any order's — is designed to attract recruits and increase awareness of the order at a time when the number of nuns across the country is declining.

"It's another way to carry out our mission to preach the good news," said Sister Corinne Sanders, the congregation's formation director.

Nationally, the number of sisters has dropped 57 percent from 179,954 in 1965 to 78,094 in 2001, according to the Center for Applied Research in the Apostolate at Georgetown University.

And the median age of the nation's nuns is on the rise:

from 63 in 1985 to 69 in 1999, according to the center's most recent statistics.

The Adrian Sisters are considered the largest Dominican congregation in the United States, and with a total worldwide membership of more than 1,000 sisters. Yet they also are seeing their numbers drop.

Just one woman made her first profession of vows during the fiscal year ending June 30, 2001, according to the order's 2000-2001 annual report. The congregation's median age was 70 and 37 sisters died during the year.

But Sanders said the marketing campaign isn't about boosting membership — it's about reaching out to women who are being called by God to the sisterhood.

"My concern is not numbers," she said. "If there is a woman who may be called to religious life, does she know we're there? And can she contact us? That, for me, is the reason to become more visible."

Reid named new head coach at Sands

Tommy Wells
Sports Editor

The Sands Mustangs have a tradition: They like to win ... a lot. That should be welcome news for new head football coach Larry Reid. He has a passion for it, too.

One of the winningest six-man coaches in the past decade, Reid will be taking the reins of the SHS program later this month. The Sands position came available when Clint Lowery accepted the head coaching duties at Grandfalls-Royalty.

"We ecstatic about getting him," said Sands Consolidated School District Superintendent Wayne Blount. "He's a quality coach who has ran a quality program for the past 8 or 9 years."

In Sands, Reid will be taking over the helm of one of the state's top six-man programs. Last season, the Mustangs advanced to the state quarterfinals before falling to Whitharral, the eventual state — and national — six-man champion.

Reid is no stranger to the state playoffs, either. In his six years at Groom High School, he guided the Tigers to the postseason each year, including a trip to the state finals two years ago.

Prior to coaching at Groom, Reid spent two seasons at Ropes High School, leading the Eagles to a 7-3 mark in his first year.

"He's proven he's a winning coach," said Blount. "We think he can have the same type of success here. Our kids have been successful in the past, and we think he will help keep that tradition going."

Reid will have a veteran coaching staff surrounding him at Sands. The school lost only one member of its coaching staff from last year when Lisa Lowery, the spouse of the new Grandfalls-Royalty head coach, resigned as the girls basketball coach. Colby Waldrop will handle the coaching duties for both SHS hoops programs this year.

UT, UH battling for CWS berth

AUSTIN (AP) — When Texas and Houston renew their baseball rivalry from the old Southwest Conference on Friday, there will be a lot more on the line than just bragging rights.

The winner of the best-of-three NCAA super regional earns a berth in the College World Series and a shot at the national championship.

For Texas (51-14), it's a chance to return to the site of their two-game blowout in 2000 when the Longhorns were perhaps lucky to be there after a long drought. For Houston (47-15), it's a chance to earn the Cougars' first trip to the CWS in Omaha, Neb., since 1967.

"They have a good balance of speed and power. They're a well-constructed college baseball team," said Texas coach Augie Garrido, whose team won the only previous matchup this season, 7-6, back in February. Both teams had impressive runs through the first round of the NCAA tournament. The Longhorns swept through a four-team regional on its home field, including a pair of wins over Big 12 rival Baylor. Houston was equally dominating, going undefeated in winning its regional in Arizona.

Both teams come in with rosters full of draft picks.

Texas had nine players selected in the draft, including Friday's starter Brad Halsey and likely Sunday starter Alan Bomer both of whom who were picked by the New York Yankees.

The Cougars had two players selected in the second round, including catcher Chris Snyder and shortstop Jesse Crain.

Steers claim Texas Tech 7-on-7 crown with 49-28 romp over Lubbock Monterey

The Big Spring Steers probably felt as if they were in the drive-thru line at a fast food restaurant last week. They simply had everything their way at the Texas Tech 7-on-7 Invitational.

The Steers, riding the arm of quarterback Tye Butler, dominated the 24-team event, posting a 3-0 mark in pool play before dismantling Lubbock Monterey in the finals by a 49-28 margin.

The Steers opened the 7-on-7 tournament with relative ease. Aided by strong performances from Butler, Eric Chavez, Jordan Cobb and Ramone Ford, Big Spring powered its way to a 37-24 win over Lubbock Cooper. They blasted Hereford in the second round of pool play, winning 50-28, before nailing down a berth in the Championship bracket with a Frenship, 48-30.

The Steers didn't let up from there.

After drawing a bye in the first round, Big Spring opened its title quest with a 48-37 victory over Canyon Randall. The 11-point victory propelled the BSHS squad into a semifinal showdown with Spearman.

The Steers had no trouble ending Spearman's hopes. Big Spring rode Butler's arm to an easy 32-12 victory.

Big Spring, a quarterfinalist in last year's state 7-on-7 competition, nailed down the Texas Tech title with a solid performance in the finals. They dispatched Lubbock Monterey by a 49-28 margin.

Butler was named the tournament's top performer, winning MVP honors after leading the Steers to five consecutive victories.

Joining Butler, Chavez, Cobb and Ford on the BSHS team were Marcus Gray, Jared Phillips, Wes Smith, Curtis Woodruff, Jesse Woodruff, Howard Johnson, Mike Shockley, Ronnie Johnson, Josh Mathews, Brandon Mendoza, Mike Ornales and Dustyn Beauchamp. The team was coached by Randy Phillips, Mark Choate and Phillip Smith.

The 2002 state 7-on-7 tournament will be held later this summer in College Station on the campus of Texas A&M University.

Shaq only gets better as the playoffs go deeper

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Everybody already knew Shaquille O'Neal is really, really big and really, really good.

What has become apparent each June over the past three years is that Shaq gets even better in the NBA Finals. Part of his motivation is the memory of his humiliation the first time he tried for a championship in 1995.

"When I was in Orlando and we got swept, I made a promise to myself and my family that if I ever get back to the Finals, that won't happen again," O'Neal said Thursday. "When I'm playing that way, it's because I'm on a mission. Right now, my mission is to win No. 3."

O'Neal's 36 points in the Lakers' Game 1 victory Wednesday night upped his average in the past three Finals to 35.5 — nearly eight points above his 27.6 average during his 10 NBA seasons.

The New Jersey Nets decided to defend him primarily with single coverage in Game 1, and they were coy Thursday when asked whether they planned to double-team more in Game 2 Friday night at Staples Center. Tipoff is approximately 9:20 p.m. EDT.

The Nets are facing the same dilemma the Philadelphia 76ers faced a year ago and the Indiana Pacers dealt with two years ago: Do they ask one player — Todd MacCulloch, Aaron Williams or Jason Collins — to try to stop the most unstoppable force in the NBA one-on-one?

Or do they drop another defender down and leave one of the other two-time defending champions open somewhere else?

It's the old pick-your-poison, and it's what makes beating the Lakers such a difficult task.

"Shaq is like a modern Wilt Chamberlain. What he does, you don't see anybody else doing in the history of the game," teammate Kobe Bryant said. "It's ridiculous."

O'Neal's numbers have risen sharply in each of the past three NBA Finals. In 2000, he went from scoring 25.9 points in the conference finals against Portland to 38.0 against Indiana.

In 2001, he went from 27.0 against the Spurs to 33.0 against Philadelphia. This year, he averaged 30.3

against Sacramento in the seven-game Western Conference finals.

When O'Neal and the Orlando Magic were swept by the Houston Rockets in 1995, O'Neal scored 26, 33, 28 and 25 in the four games, and he nearly had a triple-double in Game 1 with 16 rebounds and nine assists.

O'Neal said Bill Walton has given him pointers on passing, and said he developed his low-post game from watching, and then playing against, the best centers of the 1990s — Hakeem Olajuwon, Patrick Ewing and David Robinson.

When he was at LSU, he

Venus, Serena set up all-Williams final at French Open

PARIS (AP) — A Williams is No. 1, a Williams is No. 2, and the French Open final is Williams vs. Williams.

How's that for fulfilling a father's prophecy?

Serena Williams tossed her racket 10 feet in the air after outlasting defending champion Jennifer Capriati 3-6, 7-6 (2), 6-2 in a baseline bashfest. Just 1 1/2 hours later, older sister Venus Williams simply smiled and waved after powering past Clarisa Fernandez 6-1, 6-4 in Thursday's second semifinal. "History is definitely being made," Serena said. "Hopefully, one of us will win the French Open. Well, obviously, one of us will win the French Open."

When the new WTA Tour rankings are released Monday, they'll be the first siblings to sit 1-2: Serena's semifinal victory pushes her past Capriati to a career-best second, while Venus already was assured of overtaking Capriati at No. 1.

Not once in the 20th century did siblings meet for a Grand Slam title; now it's about to happen for the second time in nine months. Venus whipped Serena 6-2, 6-4 in September's U.S. Open final, the first at a major between sisters since Wimbledon in 1884.

That lackluster match was typical of their encounters. The sisters never play as well against each other as they do against everyone else.

"We've reached the best of our profession," said Venus, who holds a 5-2 edge in family faceoffs. "Actually, I'd like to stay No. 1, but I'd like to see Serena No. 1, also. I'm not giving it up, but I'm sure she'll get there."

Their father, Richard Williams, long has predicted — to the scoffing of some — that his daughters eventually would collect a bunch of major titles and be Nos. 1 and 2. He learned the game from magazines and videos so he could coach his girls, and he likes to say he knew when Venus was 4 she would be a star.

"Serena will be the best on the WTA Tour," he said in 1998. "But Venus has a lot of pride and nothing will get in the way of her getting to No. 1 first."

After Saturday's final, the family total will rise to six Grand Slam singles titles. Serena got the first, at the 1999 U.S. Open, while Venus has won both Wimbledon and the U.S. Open the past two years.

Shaq

Continued from Page 1B said he convinced himself that he didn't want to be a player like Kareem Abdul-Jabbar who relied on one specialty — the sky hook. "I've got 75 moves on each block that I can go to anytime," O'Neal said, playfully exaggerating the number. O'Neal's expanded repertoire was on display in Game 1 as he showed how far he has come since his early days as a guy who did little more than dunk. O'Neal executed a variety of moves leading to drop-step jumpers, baby-hook bank shots, and runners while moving both to his left and his right. O'Neal's 36-point effort didn't match his Game 1 production of the past two seasons: 44 against the 76ers; 43 against the Pacers. "Shaq and Kobe, if they get 50 to 55 points, close to 60 points, I can live with that because they're such great scorers," Nets coach Byron Scott said. "My main objective is to make sure the other guys don't hurt us. Rick Fox had 14 (points) and eight (rebounds). That hurt us." Lakers coach Phil Jackson was asked to rate his three sets of championship teams: the 1991-93 Chicago Bulls, the 1996-98 Bulls and the current Lakers. He said it was difficult to compare the teams because they were so different, one relying on the brilliance and competitiveness of Michael Jordan; the other fueled by the overwhelming physical presence of Shaq. "One thing that's magnificent in this team is the effectiveness of Shaquille O'Neal, his incredible ability to overmatch and overpower and overdominate the other team's centers," Jackson said. Jackson also politely sidestepped two other questions Thursday: Who would he pick — Jordan or O'Neal — if he was starting a team from scratch; and why he gets his clothes from designer David Rickey? (One other Jackson item: He believes Dennis Rodman should be inducted into the Basketball Hall of Fame.) The Nets did have some success in limiting O'Neal. Scott saved rookie center Jason Collins for the final eight minutes and had him foul O'Neal five times when he got the ball deep in the low post. They also pressured the ball on the wings, trying to make it more difficult for the Lakers to get entry passes inside. New Jersey's jitters were off in the second quarter, and the Nets were able to whittle a 13-point deficit to three. Bryant said he expects the Nets to play a much better game Friday night before the series shifts East for one week with Games 3, 4 and 5 in New Jersey. Jason Kidd had another triple-double in Game 1, his fourth in the past seven games. But many of the other Nets had below-par games, and several fundamentals — boxing out, making smart outlet passes — were missing in the first 16 minutes when they dug themselves a 23-point hole. "We were nervous, tense," Scott said. "Like I said last night, this is the biggest stage in basketball. That was only human nature. Once we settled down, we were OK." The problem, though, is that OK isn't good enough against the Lakers. And if the Nets aren't better than OK in Game 2, they'll be heading home with a 2-0 deficit.

Twins spared through 2003 with deal

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minnesota Twins will play next season as part of a deal approved Thursday that settles a lawsuit blocking baseball's contraction plan. "This definitively removes the Twins from contraction for 2003," said Bill Lester, executive director of the Metropolitan Sports Facilities Commission, which agreed to drop its lawsuit against the team and baseball. A ceremonial signing of the settlement was expected Thursday before the package was delivered to Hennepin County District Judge Harry Seymour Crump, said Andrew Shea, a commission attorney. Crump mediated the settlement talks. In a statement accompanying the settlement, baseball commissioner Bud Selig said the deal signals a commitment "by all parties to seek to continue the long tradition of the Twins' ball club." "Major league baseball looks forward to working with the Twin Cities and all of Minnesota and their efforts to build a new ballpark and create an operating climate for the Twins that will ensure the continuation of baseball in Minnesota," Selig's statement read. All claims against the Twins will be dismissed, but the stadium commission reserved the right to sue the league if it tries again to eliminate the team.

Zito leads A's past Seattle

Zito says he's just getting started

Six wins in a row, and Barry Zito isn't comfortable yet. The Oakland left-hander won his sixth straight decision, and his 13th in a row at home Thursday, pitching 6 1-3 innings as the Athletics beat the Seattle Mariners 10-4.

"I don't really feel locked in per se, like I was last season," Zito said. "I'm still trying to get a feel for the season."

When he does, he's capable of dominating stretches, like his 11-1 finish to last season.

Of course, the roll he's on right now isn't bad, either. Zito (7-2), hasn't lost since April 30 at New York.

In other American League games, it was: Boston 4, Detroit 3; Kansas City 4, Chicago 3; Toronto 5, Tampa Bay 4; Minnesota 8, Cleveland 3; and Texas 9, Anaheim 8. Baltimore at New York was rained out. In National League play, Cincinnati edged St. Louis, 3-2, and Atlanta downed New York, 3-2. Florida and Philadelphia was rained out.

Zito gave up a homer to Ichiro Suzuki on the game's first pitch. He fell behind 3-1 in the third on Bret Boone's two-run single, but he held down the Mariners after his team regained the lead in the bottom of the inning.

Zito walked three and struck out one. His 3.33 ERA puts him seventh among AL starters, and his 77 strikeouts put him third, behind Pedro Martinez and Roger Clemens.

Red Sox 4, Tigers 3

Rolando Arrojo pitched seven shutout innings and Boston completed a successful road trip with a victory over Detroit, which lost its third in a row.

The AL East-leading Red Sox went 8-2 on their swing to Toronto, New York and Detroit. Boston begins interleague play Friday night against NL West-leading Arizona at Fenway Park.

Nomar Garciaparra had three hits as the Red Sox sent Detroit seventh loss in eight games.

The Tigers had not scored in 20 innings until Robert Fick hit a three-run homer off Casey Fossum with one out in the ninth. Ugueth Urbina got two outs for his 18th save in 19 chances.

Detroit's Dmitri Young went 0-for-4, ending his career-high 18-game hitting streak.

Rangers 9, Angels 8

Juan Gonzalez highlighted a seven-run third inning with a three-run homer — his 401st — as Texas ended Anaheim's four-game winning streak.

Gonzalez went 3-for-5, as did Mike Lamb, who also hit a solo homer, helping Texas end a six-game road losing streak and avoid what would have been the Angels' first four-game sweep of the Rangers.

Garret Anderson hit a two-run homer in the ninth off reliever Anthony Telford, who survived a scare late to record his first AL save.

Twins 8, Indians 3

Torii Hunter hit a three-run homer in a five-run fifth inning to help Minnesota beat Bartolo Colon and Cleveland.

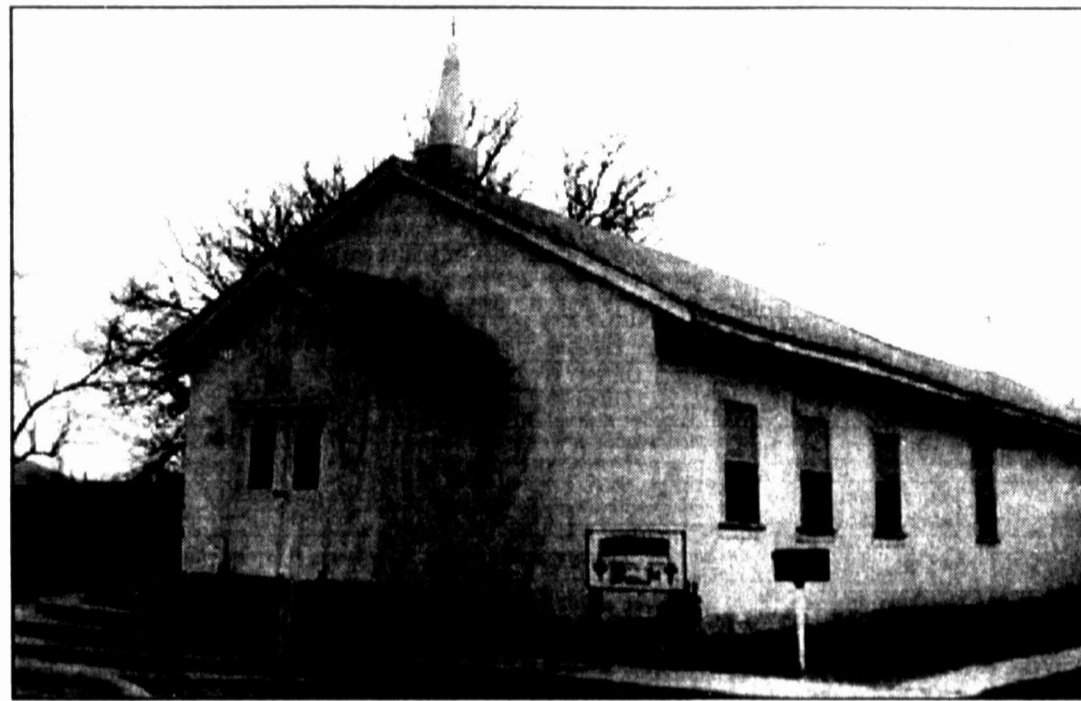

The Twins, who went 5-14 against Cleveland last year, have won five of six at home against their AL Central rival since they were swept in a four-game series in April.

Colon had his shortest outing this season at 4 2-3 innings.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, June 8:

Make the most out of a financial offer or pay raise. Though you might be inclined to spend, use good sense and start or continue investing. You have many assets that others respond to, such as intelligence and charisma. Still, you might want and need more downtime than in past years. Others will understand as long as you don't run away and cocoon. Rather, explain this trademark. If you are single, you will meet someone who could make your heart sing. Allow this relationship to develop naturally. If you are attached, your relationship will profit from special time alone together. Share your thoughts and feelings more often. TAURUS understands you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

ARIES (March 21-April 19) * Hone your sensitivity skills before you walk out the door. Others might want to clear their minds of everything. Indulge those around you or, better yet, appreciate that someone finally vents his or her feelings. Tonight: Go to a favorite spot.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) * You cannot say or do too much for those around you. Even a neighbor appreciates your efforts and sensitivity. Clear out a problem, perhaps involving a loved one and/or a child. Spending plays into this issue as well. Tonight: You're the cat's meow.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) * Really, you might want to think through a decision carefully that revolves around your personal life. "Think" is the operative word here, rather than blurting out the first thing that comes to you. Indulge a friend or loved one. You don't need to wait until his or her birthday! Tonight: Treat yourself too!

CANCER (June 21-July 22) * Put your best foot forward, and you'll notice that others will as well. You can end a conflict that started in the past few weeks. Bring a peace offering with you, whether you feel it is your fault or not. Good will makes all the difference. Tonight: Celebrate the moment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) * Don't count on another to come through for you in the way you want. Expectations can be a problem. Rather, remain grateful for another's clarity. Finally another will talk, if not today, in the near future. Understand someone else as well as yourself. Tonight: Out on the town.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) * Make plans to do something you have been putting off for a while. Invite someone to join in. Both of you gain from a day away from others just relaxing. Bonding intensifies with friends as well as loved ones. Tonight: Try something totally different.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) * A special someone makes an overture - finally. You have been waiting awhile for a change of direction. Discussions need to be highbrow, not petty. Your understanding of yourself, as well as another, can move you through a problem. Tonight: A must appearance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) * Someone goes out of his or her way for you. You could be extremely touched by this person's sharing. Make sure you want to share more of yourself with a partner. Don't indulge in "rubberband" behavior. You make yourself, as well as other, crazy. Tonight: Get tickets for a concert or movie.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) * Someone close to you makes an offer you might deem as too good to be true. Is this possible? Don't hesitate, despite recent events. Simply jump in and go with the moment. Don't worry so much about a project. Tonight: Express your intimate and nurturing side.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) * Indulge your innate playfulness and sense of humor. Before you realize it, you're not tired in fact, you're most revitalized. Perhaps now, with renewed energy and perspective, you can see how very much others care for you. Tonight: go with the action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) * Your domestic life proves to be a great source of enjoyment and caring. A project that starts up right now could be very important, not only from an investment point of view, but also in a personal way. Think in terms of gain. Tonight: Don't stress out, order in.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) * Be upbeat and positive. Not everyone thinks as clearly as you do. Just because your perspective might be one way, doesn't mean others will agree. Add a special touch to an important relationship. Dote on another as much as you want. Tonight: A good old-fashioned date.

Men aged 15-35 should perform testicular self exam

Dear Ann Landers: One of my son's friends has been diagnosed with testicular cancer. I was stunned because he is so young - in his early 20s. I decided to research the subject on the Internet and discovered that testicular cancer is the most common cancer among males aged 15-35. Yet it is curable if found and treated early.

I asked my male relatives and friends if they ever performed a testicular self-exam to check for lumps or swelling. Imagine my astonishment when not one of these guys had ever heard of it.

Ann, you are a wonderful resource for your readers. Please spread the word that men should be doing a monthly self-exam. Women can help by insisting that their husbands and sons take care of themselves. Maybe if men can get past their embarrassment about this sensitive subject, they will go to a doctor if they
