New ordinance will restrict restroom use

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

An ordinance making it illegal to enter a public restroom designated for members of the opposite sex was passed unanimously by Midland City Council Monday, injecting the city code into an area previously governed only by decorum.

Fred Poe, assistant city manager, said the ordinance was drafted after a man peeked over a stall and frightened a woman in a Wilco Building bathroom almost two weeks ago. Several similar incidents have been reported in downtown women's bathrooms earlier this month.

Poe said the man was later apprehended and admitted his involvement in the bathroom incident. Poe said, however, that criminal charges weren't filed on the man because city and county officials were unable to determine which, if any, law had been broken.

Related story, Page 1C

Meanwhile, some women who work in the downtown area, including Marylyn Gibbs and Linda Brown, urged the city's legal department and the City Council to find a means for prosecuting such activity.

The county attorney's office decided to file criminal trespass charges against the man March 21, according to Poe, who added that the city already had begun drafting its own ordinance to make entering the wrong public restroom a Class C misdemeanor punishable by up to a $200 fine.

The ordinance makes it "unlawful for any person to knowingly and intentionally enter any public restroom designated for the exclusive use of the opposite sex...without the permission of the owner, tenant, manager, lessee, or other person in charge of the premises."

Councilman Tom Sloan questioned whether the ordinance could pose difficulties for cleaning people and mothers with small children who may need to enter either bathroom.

Poe suggested the law will probably not need to be enforced unless a complaint is made, which wouldn't likely occur in the case of janitors performing their work or mothers helping children to the bathroom.

Sloan also suggested he'd like to see a state law drafted that would provide a punishment stiffer than the $200 maximum fine that can be levied in municipal court. Crimes greater than Class C misdemeanors must be tried in a court other than municipal court.

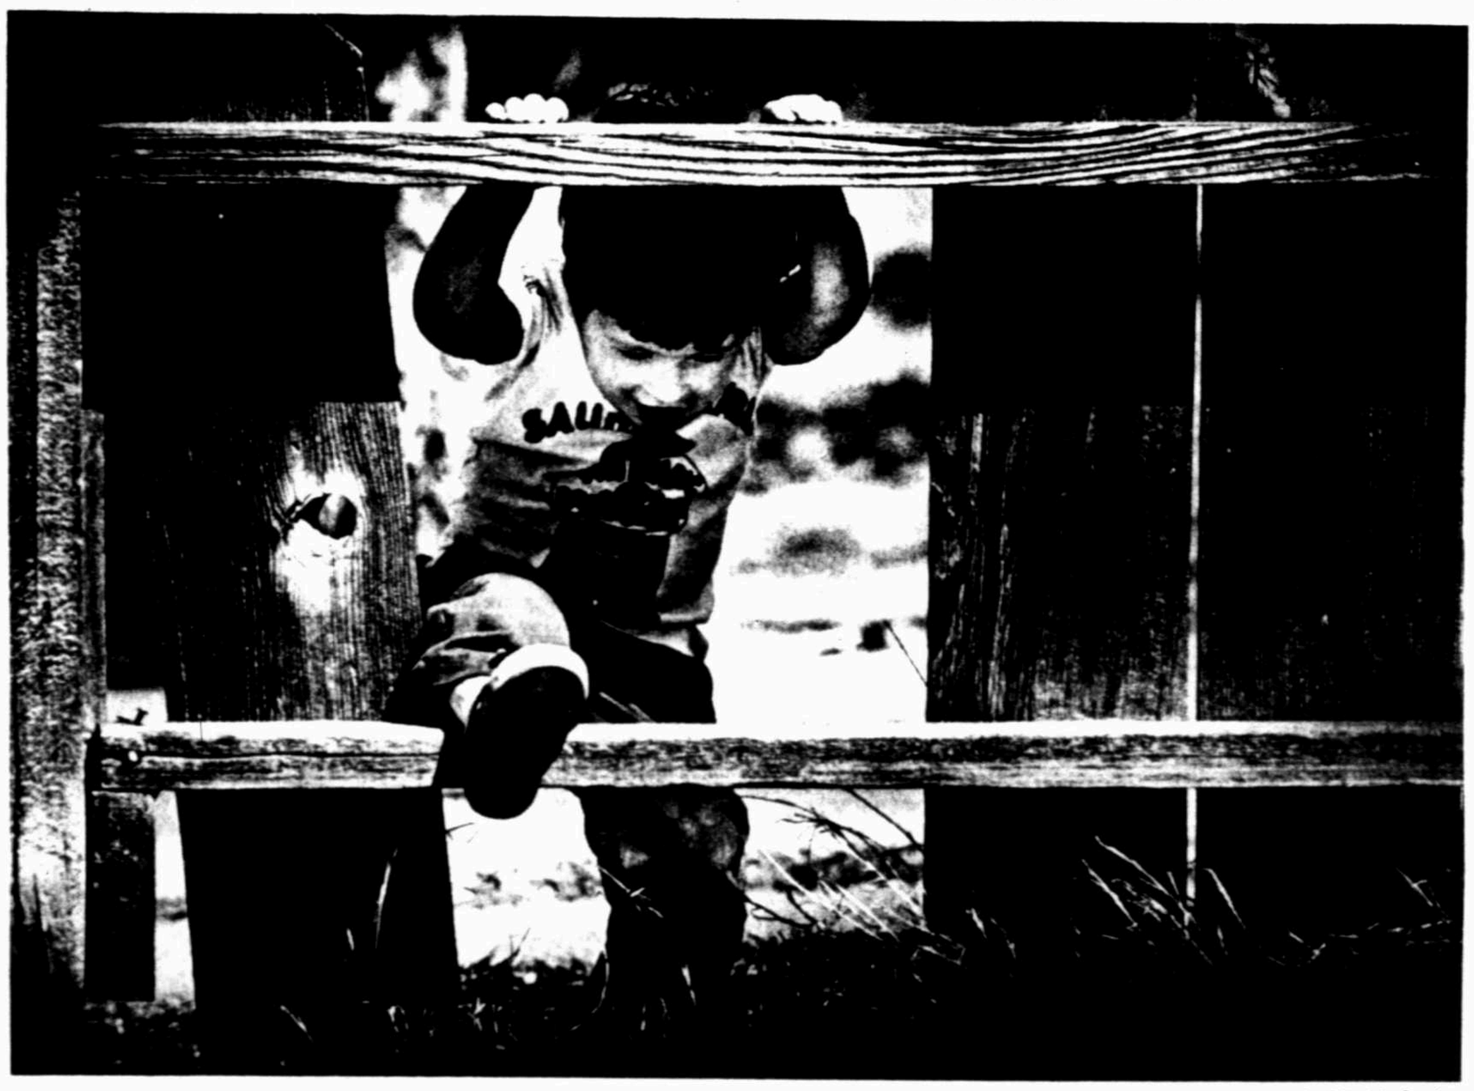

Mrs. Gibbs and Ms. Brown appeared before the City Council Tuesday morning to voice their support for the ordinance.

Ms. Brown said she was a victim in a bathroom peeping incident at Midland Savings Building earlier this month. She said the man peeked over the top of an adjacent stall, didn't speak or touch her, "but it was very frightening, both emotionally and physically."

Mrs. Gibbs said she was on the next floor up when she heard Ms. Brown scream. "We need this law," Mrs. Gibbs told the council. "It's a very frightening experience to have a man come crawling over the stall while you're going to the bathroom. We need an ordinance that protects us from him being in there in the first place."

"We represent just a few of the women downtown who feel this same way," Ms. Brown said, after the council passed the ordinance unanimously on first reading.

The new law will get a second reading at the April 12 City Council meeting.

Only two jurors chosen for trial in 1977 killing

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Only two jurors have been picked in two days of jury selection in the capital murder case of Clarence Allen Lackey of Lubbock.

Lackey, 28, is charged with raping and then slashing the throat of Toni Diane Kumpf, a 23-year-old Texas Tech University secretary, after he allegedly broke through her apartment door about 6 a.m. on July 31, 1977. A farmer found her body later that morning in a cotton field near Lubbock.

Through Tuesday, a 32-year-old accountant and a groundskeeper had been selected from 10 prospective jurors to serve on the jury. The prosecution and defense attorney will be individually examining up to more than 100 prospective jurors until 12 "fair and impartial" jurors and two alternate jurors are selected.

Presiding Judge Robert Wright of Lubbock's 137th State District Court is allowing the prosecution and defense each 15 strikes in the jury selection-process. By their strikes, the attorneys can eliminate prospective jurors without cause.

Each prospective juror is interviewed for about an hour on his background, concepts and attitudes toward the laws, and on his views on capital punishment.

"They will ask you difficult or soul-searching questions," Wright tells each prospective juror of the defense and prosecuting attorneys.

By law, a person who is convicted of capital murder must either be sentenced to die by lethal injection or to life in prison. Texas law provides that the death penalty may be exacted if the defendant is convicted of murder in the course of aggravated rape, kidnapping, burglary, robbery, arson or escaping from a penal institution, or in the murder of a law enforcement officer, fireman or penal officer, and in a murder-for-hire scheme.

Among prospective jurors dismissed was a 22-year-old housewife who said she believes in the death penalty.

"I don't think it's used enough," she said under questioning of the prosecutor, Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell.

The defense asked the woman if her church had any doctrines on capital punishment.

"It really wouldn't make any difference to me," she said. The defense challenged her selection as a juror, and the judge dismissed her from the jury panel.

Another prospect who was rejected by the defense was an engineer who advocated capital punishment.

Reagan offers to limit NATO missile deployment

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today offered to cut back on the planned deployment of new medium-range missiles in Europe if the Soviet Union agreed to reduce its arsenal of nuclear rocket warheads targeted on NATO countries.

Under the proposal, the Soviets would also have to cut their worldwide stock of nuclear missile warheads.

Even if the proposal is accepted, the United States would begin installing new, single-warhead Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe late this year as scheduled, while the Soviet Union would be required to dismantle or modify some of its multiple-warhead medium-range weapons. The Kremlin's chief arms negotiator, asked about the offer Tuesday, said, "I'm not optimistic."

Revealing a compromise plan to his "zero-zero" proposal to eliminate all medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, Reagan said in a nationally broadcast statement from the White House that "it would be better to have none than to have some. But, if there must be some, it is better to have few than to have many.

"If the Soviets will not now agree to the total elimination of these weapons," Reagan said, "I hope they will at least join us in an interim agreement that would substantially reduce these forces to equal levels on both sides."

The Soviets have flatly rejected the zero-zero proposal and The United States' NATO allies have urged that the Reagan administration make a scaled-down proposal.

Reagan did not propose a specific limit on the number of weapons. A senior administration official who spoke on condition he not be named said the numbers of missiles and warheads allowed under the new U.S. proposal would be the subject of negotiations with the Soviets.

Accusing Moscow of failing to offer any serious alternatives to the zero-zero formula, Reagan said, "Their failure to make such a proposal is a source of deep disappointment to all of us who have wished that these weapons might be eliminated — or at least significantly reduced.

"But I do not intend to let this shadow that has been cast over the Geneva negotiations further darken our search for peace," Reagan said.

Reagan's announcement confirmed earlier reports that a new proposal was put on the bargaining table in Geneva on Tuesday.

Accompanying Reagan's announcement was a White House statement saying the NATO allies "welcome and strongly support the new American intermediate nuclear force negotiating initiative announced by the president today.

"It represents a significant step designed to move the INF negotiations toward conclusion of an equal, fair and verifiable arms control agreement," the statement said.

Reagan announced his new strategy in a speech to NATO ambassadors, gathered in the East Room.

Loeffler predicts veto of Democrats' 'ridiculous' budget resolution

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler, paying his first official visit to Midland as 21st District congressional representative, blasted a recently passed budget resolution as "the most ridiculous and irresponsible budget resolution ever presented to the House."

Loeffler said the Democrat-sponsored resolution would add $45 billion in domestic spending, $25 billion in tax increases, raise deficits by about $8 billion and cut about $9 billion in defense spending.

Over five years, the resolution would add $181 billion in domestic spending and increase taxes by more than $265 billion, according to Loeffler, who spoke at a morning news conference in the George Mahon Federal Building here.

He said the resolution "drives a sword into the heart" of the nation's economic recovery, and predicted that Reagan would veto the legislation.

Loeffler said the resolution would be "a return to the past," and would repeal the 10 percent tax cut due in July and rescind tax relief achieved on the windfall profits and estates taxes.

He lumped a $5 billion jobs bill recently passed by Congress in the same category as the budget resolution, saying that only private industry — not the federal government — can create "real and lasting" jobs.

A 10 percent tax on savings and dividends which recently cleared Congress should be repealed, according to Loeffler, who called the tax "an interest free loan to the federal government." He said attempts are under way in both the House and Senate to pass legislation repealing the tax.

"I'm very comfortable that we'll be able to pass repeal legislation. Taxes should not be paid until they're due."

Loeffler's office received about 20,000 pieces of mail — about half its average annual total — asking for repeal of the tax.

Although he favors decontrol of natural gas and supports the intent of President Reagan's recently proposed decontrol bill, Loeffler said he has some difficulty with specific provisions in the bill — including tossing out price agreements on all existing gas contracts.

Candidates see streets as issue

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of articles examining candidates and issues in local eletions, which will be decided by voters Saturday. This part deals with the Midland City Council.

Godfrey

Marcum

Hatfield

Salazar

The first man broached the subject carefully. "They talk about all the red tape with the federal government. The city government has just as much."

The other two men unabashedly agreed.

Three seats are open on the Midland City Council this year — Place 1, 2 and 3 — and only Carroll Thomas elected not to serve again. One of the major problems agreed on by three candidates is too much red tape.

Jesse Hatfield is going for a second term to Place 1, Gordon Marcum II is wanting a fourth term in Place 2 with Raul Jiminez Salazar challenging him and newcomer David Godfrey is seeking Thomas's vacated Place 3.

Two years ago when these places were up for election, the city was in the midst of a boom that would continue skyrocketing until mid-1982. The City Council was trying to harness the accompanying problems but also was enjoying increased revenues and a budget surplus.

Today, Midland's economic bottom has dropped out and resulting problems have fallen into the council's lap like a ton of lead. A shortfall in budgeted revenues has forced the council to pull in the belt a few notches. And those reduced funds already have affected every area of the city.

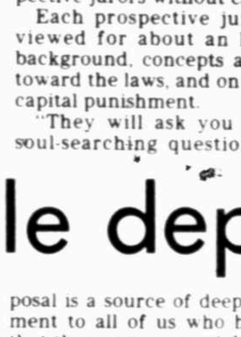

THREE MEN — Godfrey, Hatfield and Marcum — asked separately, immediately voiced streets as being the city's number one problem. After that comes the need for a master plan, possible increase in the tax rate next year and a possible change in the council's duties by placing more decision-making powers in the hands of city staff. The string tying up that bundle of problems is what the three men called "too much red tape."

Godfrey, 33, who is serving on the volunteer Planning and Zoning Commission, said he felt it was time take his government service one step farther. And since he announced his candidacy, Godfrey has been hearing complaints — most of them about the city streets.

Reagan, Brady 'hold no grudges'

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and White House Press Secretary James Brady say they don't hold any grudges against John W. Hinckley Jr. for shooting them two years ago, but Brady adds, "I hope he doesn't win the Irish sweepstakes."

Reagan, in an interview with The Washington Post published today, said he has accepted the assassination attempt as "something that goes with the territory" of being president.

It was two years ago today that Hinckley tried to kill Reagan as the president was leaving the Washington Hilton. Reagan, Brady, Secret Service agent Timothy McCarthy and police officer Thomas Delahanty were wounded.

All but Brady, who was hit in the brain, have fully recovered.

Hinckley was acquitted by reason of insanity last year and is being held in St. Elizabeths, a federal mental hospital.

"I don't hold any grudge or anything," Reagan said of Hinckley.

"I just think it would be fine if he could be cured, also."

Reagan also said that "whatever time I have, I owe the Lord."

"I think someone was watching out for me," the president said.

Reagan was struck in the chest by a single .22-caliber bullet, and collapsed as he was escorted into the George Washington University hospital. At one point he was close to death as surgeons struggled to find the bullet and patch a punctured lung.

In the interview, Reagan discussed legislation he sent to Congress last year that would abolish the plea of not guilty by reason of insanity. He said he favors changing the law so that a defendant could be found "guilty but insane."

"There seems to be something wrong with 'not guilty by reason of insanity' when the person has performed the deed, which to me 'not guilty' has always meant," Reagan said.

AP Laserphoto

White House Press Secretary James Brady is pictured with his wife Sarah and son Scott.

Reagan also said that while he doesn't think about the assassination attempt too much these days, it does sometimes concern his wife, Nancy.

"I knew it was much worse for her," Reagan said, referring to one-day trips outside the White House. "... She didn't reveal it too much, but I knew what she was thinking."

Brady said in an interview for this morning's "Today Show" on NBC, that he doesn't wish Hinckley "any evil," but gets angry about the shooting "when I think they are going to let him go."

He said, "Every day in therapy, I'm there and taking my pain-ridden body around the gymnasium and hurting every step of the way. It's pretty difficult to do that without thinking of why you're there.

"Dwelling on the past smacks of revenge but I hope he doesn't win the Irish sweepstakes ... I'm not really wishing him any evil."

Jerry Parr, the Secret Service agent who was in charge of Reagan's protective detail the day of the shooting, says he would hate to see Hinckley released.

"I think he is a very sick, maladjusted young man, and I'm fairly sure, as I'm sitting here, that he's not well-adjusted yet," said Parr. The agent added he did not harbor "any hatred as far as I can consciously feel toward him, or even any anger toward him."

"I don't have really, truly any significant feelings except that I would not like to see him out on the street. On the other hand, I was not shot by him, either."

Parr shared his reflections of the attack in an interview with high school students at the Old Executive Office Building, next door to the White House, in a program sponsored by Close-Up, a non-profit foundation that conducts seminars to help students understand the workings of government.

The program was to be aired today by the Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network, or C-Span.

House sales still indicate recovery

By ROBERT BURNS
AP Business Writer

Sales of new single-family houses fell 5.9 percent last month, but economists say the U.S. housing industry remains on course to financial recovery.

The drop reported Tuesday by the Commerce Department followed a 12.7 percent surge the month before. In each case sales are compared with the previous month's.

Separately, the Commerce Department reported that the U.S. foreign trade deficit rose slightly last month to $3.58 billion, mainly because of a sharp rise in imports of Japanese goods. Nearly two-thirds of the deficit was in U.S.-Japan trade.

In its home sales report, the government said the seasonally adjusted rate of sales was 558,000 houses, compared with 593,000 in January. The February rate, though lower than the month before, was 48.8 percent higher than in February 1982.

"The rate of new home sales recorded during February is further evidence that the housing recovery is picking up momentum with each passing month," said Harry Pryde, president of the National Association of Home Builders.

Michael Sumichrast, chief economist for the home builders group, said he saw "a very, very good chance" that mortgage interest rates would start falling again before long.

"Builders are still very bullish," he said.

The median sales price of a new home, meanwhile, rose to a record $75,100 in February from a revised $74,200 the month before.

In its report on the U.S. trade deficit, the government said the gap in trade with Japan soared $888 million from January to $2.22 billion.

The overall trade deficit of $3.58 billion compared with $3.57 billion the month before. The deficit last year was a record $42.6 billion.

The value of U.S. oil imports from all sources plunged 32.7 percent from January to a seasonally adjusted $3.19 billion. The volume of oil imports fell 29.5 percent to 104.7 million barrels. The average price paid was $30.49 a barrel compared with $31.92 in January, a reflection of declining world oil prices.

Employee tax plan proposed in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Under a bill on its way to the full House, Texas employers would pay a one-time average tax of $1.80 per employee so the state can borrow another $300 million from the federal government to pay unemployment claims.

The emergency employers tax was approved Tuesday by the House Labor and Employment Relations Committee. The tax would be due with the employers' first-quarter 1983 taxes.

Rep. Lloyd Criss, D-LaMarque, who sponsored the measure, said the tax was calculated at 5 percent of the unemployment tax paid by employers in 1982.

Texas has had to borrow $383 million from the federal government already because of escalating state unemployment and a corresponding drain on Texas' unemployment fund.

Employment officials have told Gov. Mark White the state will need another $300 million by mid-May to pay 1983 unemployment claims.

Last year, the Legislature met in a special session to change the formula used to calculate employer taxes to avoid a huge tax hike. Legislators also, however, decreed that the state cannot borrow additional money from the federal government unless it can guarantee payment of the 10 percent interest the government charges the state.

Criss said his bill would provide enough money to back the new loan request.

Although unhappy about the situation, representatives of business groups who testified before the House Labor and Employment Relations Committee Tuesday said Criss' bill is the best alternative for coming up with the interest money.

Loeffler, on Midland visit, predicts budget plan veto

"In no way do I want to see the existing prices, under contract, rolled back," he said. Hearings on the legislation are being conducted in the Senate Energy and the House Energy and Commerce committees.

Loeffler stressed the gas decontrol issue should be "disposed of, one way or the other, before next year." He said he fears presidential politics will muddle the issue if it's not decided before 1984.

The Social Security reform legislation awaiting Reagan's signature is skewed too heavily toward tax increases and not enough toward reducing benefits, according to Loeffler, who voted against the package.

He said additional taxes on self-employed individuals, and taxes in benefits for the first time, were not the long-term solution for the system. He added that allowing general funds to slip into the system — which until now has been sustained through a trust fund — is "opening up a Pandora's box" by eliminating a valuable control on Social Security spending.

Although he disagrees with the idea of an immediate, unilateral freeze on nuclear weapons production by the U.S., Loeffler said the freeze debate is valuable in encouraging serious discussion of arms control.

An unilateral freeze would send "a wrong signal to the world," said Loeffler, who favors instead mutually verifiable weapons reduction with on-site inspections.

Loeffler called U.S. aid to El Salvador's government "of utmost importance to the United States." He said that while he can't guarantee U.S. aid will lead to a democratic government in the Central American country, he contended that without the aid democracy definitely will not prevail.

Loeffler also introduced his Midland representative, Marsha Nickel, who will staff the Midland office, Room 230 in the Mahon Building, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Marcum, trying for an eight-year stretch of service, agrees on the poor condition of numerous streets. Even though $800,000 for rebuilding major thoroughfares was dropped out of the current budget because of falling sales tax rebates, Marcum said the basic street budget includes money to repair potholes and seal-coating.

Hatfield is hoping that $800,000 can be put back in next year's budget, and pointed out that not one councilman wanted to eliminate the item.

BECAUSE OF belt-tightening measures, the possibility of a tax increase next year has raised its head. Hatfield noted "a lot depends on when we go into our budget hearings," while Marcum surmised that raising taxes wouldn't be accepted by the taxpayer.

"We have to maintain a quality of services and be conservative with our tax dollars," he says. Marcum also sees his six years on the council as an asset "to help us through these bad times. Midland is at a critical stage in its economic downturn. My experience can help determine where we can cut."

Godfrey hasn't looked at the budget yet, but feels his experience as a businessman can help in dealing with the multi-million dollar figures.

When the boom hit, no master plan was available to direct developers with major subdivisions. The three candidates agree it might have helped some on planning and zoning items, while one said it probably would be of more help in the bust times.

"I have a problem with what is a master plan," said Godfrey. "How much right does the city have to plan someone's property. But it would be a plus; if a guy bought a piece of property he would know how it could be used."

A preliminary master plan should be completed by September, according to Marcum. "Sometimes a master plan is more important in a slowdown. You have a tendency to let someone put in a building because of bad times. With a master plan, we wouldn't get lost in the forest."

HATFIELD AGREED the master plan would have helped the council during the boom times, also. "I don't think we were prepared for that fast growth."

The three men acknowledged another of their biggest complaints centers on planning and zoning and the length of time required for someone's land to make it to the final stage. It is here the red tape seems to get stickier and stickier. But none of the candidates had an answer.

Noting that the economic slowdown has eliminated the backlog of planning and zoning cases, Godfrey said, "Government bureaucracy in Midland adds to the cost of the development. We holler about the federal bureaucracy. But it ultimately hurts the consumer and adds to the price of a house."

"One of the biggest complaints I get is the slowness in getting zoning items through the bureaucracy," said Marcum. "We've been trying to streamline the P&Z process."

Hatfield agreed that "we're too slow on P&Z items. I'm not throwing stones at anyone, but sometimes it takes too long."

Tied to that "slow" problem is the length of time on council meetings. A study by the Texas Research League last fall concluded that the council needs to turn more day-to-day operations of the city over to the city manager and staff and focus itself to policy.

"YOU OUGHT TO hire good people and have confidence in them to make decisions," said Godfrey. "I certainly don't have the expertise in planning or public works, for sure."

A change will have to come about some day, said Marcum. "The council will only have to deal with policy matters and have someone to handle the budget. With that, we would be able to get away from details and would stick to broader policies and future planning."

Hatfield commented that the council "gets strung out a bit" in its meetings. But part of that he sees as coming from the public hearings in which the "citizens are allowed to have their say. I don't think the people can say the council doesn't listen to them."

Salazar could not be reached for comment.

Two jurors chosen as trial begins in 1977 death of Texas Tech coed

"I believe, in certain crimes, the death penalty probably is the best penalty that can be meted out by society," he said.

The defense counsel — Jack Stoffregen, Rick Wardroup and Mark Withrow — asked the engineer if he envisioned any "good purpose" served by the death penalty.

He suggested that "certain individuals," including "terrorists and others," might be deterred by threat of a death penalty.

"Rather than keeping them penned up for the rest of their lives, which I think is inhumane in itself, it's better to execute them," he said.

The defense objected to the engineer serving on the jury, and he, too, was dismissed by the court.

On Monday, the presiding judge said the jury selection "probably" would take eight to 10 days.

In Lackey's 1978 trial of capital murder, the jury-selection process in San Angelo took three weeks. The jury convicted him of capital murder and sentenced him to die for killing Ms. Kumpf. But the conviction was overturned by a higher court due to a technicality in the jury selection process.

Senators urge cutback in Europe-based NATO weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fifteen senators today urged reduction in the number of short-range NATO nuclear weapons in Europe, saying the step would strengthen the West's hand in arms negotiations.

The proposal was contained in a letter to President Reagan signed by 11 Democrats and four Republicans.

Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., chairman of NATO's special committee on nuclear weapons in Europe, called a news conference today to release the letter.

The United States and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are negotiating with the Soviet Union and the Warsaw Pact for reductions in both long-range and intermediate-range missiles.

The Reagan administration has been seeking elimination of all Soviet SS-20 intermediate-range missiles aimed at Europe in return for cancellation of NATO plans to deploy Pershing II and cruise missiles on the continent in December.

The White House said Tuesday, however, that Reagan was proposing an interim step calling for some of the Soviet missiles to remain and part of the NATO missiles to be deployed.

In the meantime, the senators said in their letter to Reagan, NATO's short-range nuclear arsenal for battlefield use totals between 5,000 and 6,000 weapons.

In November, the North Atlantic Assembly, the political arm of NATO, urged the alliance to reduce its reliance on short-range nuclear weapons.

The senators told Reagan, "While alliance officials may reasonably disagree as to the relative or absolute value of these various systems, there is apparently a near-consensus that NATO would be military justified in reducing the total warhead count by considerbly more than the minimum of 572 already agreed on in principle."

Such action, they said, would "fortify public support behind NATO policy on longer-range systems, which are under negotiation."

The battlefield nuclear weapons include artillery pieces, short-range missiles, aircraft capable of carrying both nuclear and conventional weapons, anti-submarine charges and atomic demolition mines.

"Advances in technology have created expanding possibilities to substitute modern conventional weapons in roles previously assigned to short-range nuclear systems," the senators said.

Signers of the letter were Sens. Biden, Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., William S. Cohen, R-Maine, Sam Nunn, D-Ga., Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., John Glenn, D-Ohio, Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., Gary Hart, D-Colo., Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., Bill Bradley, D-N.J., Arlen Specter, R-Pa., Carl Levin, D-Mich., and Richard Lugar, R-Ind.

Mathias, Biden, Pell, Glenn, Percy, Dodd, Tsongas and Lugar are members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Annexation could hurt group, spokesman says

AUSTIN (AP) — A representative of an oil and gas association with more than 3,000 members says unchecked annexation by coastal cities could hurt development of rich offshore oil and gas resources.

"Bonus bids will be downgraded. Marginal prospects won't be drilled or developed, and older wells will be abandoned earlier," Bill Abington said in a statement.

"The end result will be lost offshore investment opportunities which cause a corresponding loss of money to the state of Texas Permanent School Fund and General Revenue Fund," said Abington, a spokesman for Texas Mid-Continent Oil & Gas Association.

Sen. Ray Farabee, sponsor of a bill that would roll back certain coastal annexations of Port Arthur, also told a Senate committee on Tuesday his bill is needed to protect the school fund.

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, quoted a Beaumont federal judge who has ruled against Port Arthur as saying the city's annexation policies represented a "land grab" and "lust for revenue."

Farabee said Port Arthur had reached nine miles into the Gulf of Mexico to annex an offshore gas well operated by Superior.

Port Arthur has appealed the federal judge's ruling to the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. A spokesman for Superior Oil Co. said the company has paid $3 million in taxes on the well, which is in escrow.

Farabee's bill would prohibit a city from extending its boundaries out more than three miles from the Texas coastline. He said this would not affect Corpus Christi or Galveston.

Farabee invited Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, to appear before the Senate Natural Resources Committee, which took testimony. Chairman Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, indicated the bill would remain in subcommittee for a week.

Parker said he had been "physically assaulted" by a six-footer who identified himself as an employee of Superior — "This is a hot issue with me personally as well as representing my district."

Parker said unlike former Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, new Land Commissioner Garry Mauro does not view Port Arthur's annexation as "robbing the school children of Texas."

Farabee said although the city had annexed the area it provides no city services to the Superior production platform. "A line has to be drawn somewhere, and the line has to have some relationship to services," Farabee said.

Joe McKinney, manager of Superior's offshore division, said Superior had acquired the leases offshore from Sabine Pass in 1971 and production began in 1979.

McKinney said the state receives a 55 percent royalty from Superior — taking gas instead of cash, and the value of the gas the state has received is $200 million.

Parker said Superior filed suit after in federal court after it had lost in the Texas Supreme Court, and the ruling against Port Arthur was "by the same judge who ordered busing of school children."

"I get wrought up over this," said Parker. "What you do affects the taxes on my house and how we share the wealth" in Texas.

Doctor's killer may have been hired

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — A 24-year-old Dayton man has been arrested in connection with what Dayton police describe as a contract slaying of a prominent Texas surgeon.

An arrest warrant for Wavil Bernard Lewis Jr. was issued Monday in Brownsville in connection with the Aug. 31 slaying of Dr. Narciso Cortez, according to Ralph J. Beutle Sr., chief investigator for the Montgomery County prosecutor's office.

Lewis was in custody in the Montgomery County Jail today.

Beutle, Dayton police and Brownsville authorities say their investigation indicates a feud over property involving Cortez and a wealthy Texas family.

The investigation indicates the feud eventually led to the payment of $15,000 for Cortez' murder, authorities said.

Cortez, a 52-year-old Brownsville surgeon, was shot repeatedly and investigators recovered eight .22-caliber bullet casings. Police believe an automatic weapon equipped with a silencer was used.

Cortez died five days after the shooting without ever regaining consciousness.

Heath talks to students

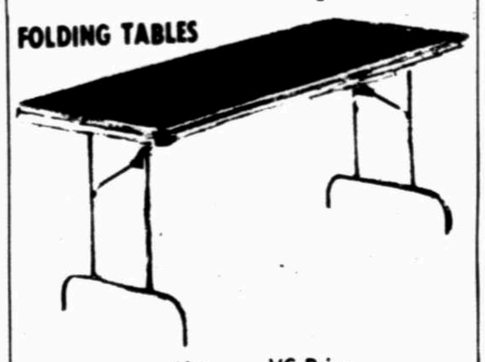

HOUSTON (AP) — The United States is obsessed with the threat of Communism, a fact that concerns members of the European Economic Community, former British Prime Minister Edward Heath says.

"One has to realize that one is in a world with this (Soviet) bloc and one has got to live with it," he told students and faculty at Rice University Tuesday.

Heath, prime minister from 1970-74 and leader of the Conservative Party from 1965-75, said he personally opposes a nuclear arms freeze.

Memory of Yankee matron lives on in poem

FREDERICK, Md. (AP) — A feisty Yankee matron in a black dress carved a niche in history when she waved the Union flag as Confederate soldiers marched past her home in this west Maryland city.

Since that day in September 1862, Barbara Fritchie's memory has lived on in a poem and in the reconstructed house where she lived.

She was 95 when she had the confrontation with the soldiers that inspired John Greenleaf Whittier to pen the poem bearing her name. He attributed to her the ringing line: "Shoot if you must, this old gray head, But spare your country's flag."

The West Patrick Street house where Mrs. Fritchie spent most of her days, and from which she waved the Union flag as the Rebel soldiers passed, was destroyed by a flood in 1868. It was rebuilt in 1927 and has become a museum for Barbara Fritchie memorabilia.

Since the 1960s, the house has been owned and operated by Richard Kline and his wife, Margaret.

"I bought properties across the street and I looked over and saw the shingles were coming off (the Fritchie house) and I thought somebody was losing interest," Kline said.

In time, he purchased the property and remodeled the house three times, once after a flood in 1976, he said.

Kline said the restoration is a patriotic venture and hasn't made money.

"It has not been commercial at all," said Kline. "It has been a loser."

About 12,000 people visit the Fritchie house annually, he said.

One visitor was Winston Churchill, who is said to have stood outside the house and recited the entire Whittier poem, which historians believe took poetic liberties with the actual events involving Mrs. Fitchie.

The poem suggests the Confederate leader who Mrs. Fritchie defied was Gen. Stonewall Jackson, but some say he had taken a shortcut and rejoined his troops without passing the Fritchie house.

Accounts differ on whether Mrs. Fritchie waved the Stars and Stripes from an upstairs window or from the porch of her house on the day of her encounter with the Confederates.

Wherever the truth lies, the Fritchie legend continues.

Visitors to the Fritchie house are given a tour, which includes a brief slide presentation relating details of the life of Barbara Hauer Fritchie, who is depicted as having been a well-informed, attractive woman with a sharp tongue.

The tour that follows includes the Hauer house where Barbara grew up and lived until, at the age of 40, she married 26-year-old John Fritchie, and continues into the Fritchie house next door, where the couple spent the remainder of their lives.

The houses include Fritchie mementos, including the bed where Mrs. Fritchie died, a German Bible with her signature, and a cane she is said to have used to chase Confederate soldiers from her porch.

Museum details history of flight

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — More than a million people visit the U.S. Air Force Museum each year, making it Dayton's top tourist attraction.

Many spend hours gazing at vast exhibits, tracing in their minds the history of aviation — particularly combat airplanes used in World War I, World War II and the Korean conflict.

From Sopwith "Camel," to "Spitfire," "Marauder," and "Flying Fortress," the names and sights conjure up visions of colorful aviation pioneers.

A tour starts with man's earliest known attempts at flight and moves quickly to the work of Orville and Wilbur Wright, the Dayton bicycle makers who made the dream of flight a reality.

The Wrights' first flight was at Kitty Hawk, N.C. — parts of that first plane are on display — but much of their early work was done on Huffman Prairie, an area now part of Wright-Patterson Air Force Base.

For Jack Hilliard, curator of the museum for about a year after being curator of the U.S. Marine Corps Museum in Washington 20 years, taking care of the old war birds is like living among friends.

"In the Korean War, I got into the service and went into flying training," Hilliard said. "It's been a love affair the rest of my life."

Hilliard is one of his own best customers, often visiting the nostalgic display area below his office. He considers the B-29, nicknamed "Bockscar," which dropped the second atomic bomb on Nagasaki, Japan; Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's Medal of Honor, and the Apollo 15 capsule that went to the moon among the museum's most important "one of a kind, or at least one of a very rare breed" items.

The museum began in 1923 in a corner of old McCook field at Dayton, but had no permanent home for almost half a century.

It was shuffled to Wright Field in 1935, and later to Patterson Field. The two were eventually combined, and the museum returned to a 400-acre site on the former Wright Field in 1971.

It is the largest military air museum in the country, and its displays, along with those at the Smithsonian Institution and the National Air and Space Museum, provide a comprehensive history of aviation.

"Their collection is...aimed at all of aviation history, to document the technological advances, whereas we're more interested in telling the history of the Air Force and military aviation," Hilliard said. To that end, it has several rocket-shaped space vehicles standing sentry duty just outside the museum building.

The museum also lends displays to some 20 other specialized air museums operated by the Air Force.

"A great many of our visitors are former Air Force people or ones who are currently in the service," Hilliard said.

Hilliard piloted big bomber-cargo planes as a member of the Air Force Reserve. He still belongs to a private aviation club and flies for recreation.

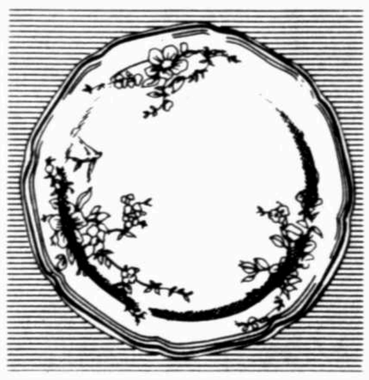

He remembers his old planes fondly. "I suppose one of the best is the Douglas World Cruiser, simply because it's an example of a really rare airplane and one in which the people did kind of an heroic job, five months on the road, flying around the world."

That bi-plane was one of four that began a 26,000-mile circumnavigation of the earth in April 1924. Only two made it. "We've got one; the other one is in the Smithsonian. The others are gone," Hilliard said.

Tower: Technology could aid Soviets

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The logo for a conference on the commercial use of defense research at Florida State University shows an eagle being transformed into a dollar sign.

But U.S. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, is worried the dollar sign could turn into a hammer and sickle.

The Senate Armed Services Committee chairman warned corporate executives earlier this week to be cautious about seeking new military technology spinoffs that could fall into the hands of the Soviet Union.

Tower said American technological superiority in weapons is a myth and that the Soviets are equal to or lead the United States in several areas, including submarines, tanks and ground-to-air and ground-to-ground missiles.

"My purpose in discussing with you the status of Soviet military technology and their ability to acquire our technology is not to throw cold water on the desirablity of continuing to promote techology transfer between defense and the private sector," Tower said.

But he said the United States cannot afford "business as usual" in the treatment of technological areas in which it still has the edge, including high speed integrated circuits, computers and radar avoiding stealth aircraft.

"The major shortfall in this area is the lack of focus for this issue in our governmental structure," Tower said. "No one in the administration has total responsiblity for technology transfer."

Tower said that as soon as Congress completes work on the 1984 budget, his committee would conduct hearings on legislation to create a new office of strategic trade that would be responsible for protecting scientific and technological know-how from falling into the wrong hands.

The bill (S434) is sponsored by Tower and Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah.

"Our days of technological monopoly are over," Tower said. "We do a great disservice to the American people by improperly perpetuating the myth that the Soviets have simply opted for large numbers of cheap, simple systems."

Laxalt buffer between sides

An Analysis

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Paul Laxalt occupies a unique position in a city where power — or proximity to it — often is the standard by which people are judged.

"One of President Reagan's closest friends," is how the Nevada senator most often is described, which is a pretty good tag for a Republican politician to carry after his name.

Laxalt's relationship with the president was built during the years they were governors of neighboring states, and later when Laxalt served as chairman of Reagan's 1976 and 1980 presidential campaigns.

Now the affable, gray-haired senator is trying to be a buffer between competing factions within a Republican Party that many observers believe could engage in a bloodbath if Reagan decides not to run for re-election in 1984.

A staunch conservative, Laxalt commands the loyalty of the cadre of political operatives throughout the country who have spent much of their adult lives planning for and working on Reagan presidential campaigns.

MANY OF those Reagan loyalists are growing restless. They want a signal from the White House that he is ready to campaign for another term. And they are worried that people they were fighting against in the early primaries and caucuses in 1980 will take over the 1984 campaign.

For many weeks Laxalt has quietly moved around the country trying to calm their fears.

"I tell them he's a horse, to stay loose and in a few months we'll let them know," Laxalt said in an interview in his Senate office.

He also tells the Reaganites one other thing they are anxious to hear.

"I tell them I've been delegated for calling the shots and they seem satisfied by that."

Laxalt and White House aides are anxious to play down concern among conservatives over the role James A. Baker III might play in a Reagan re-election campaign.

But the fact is that concern is out there and is never likely to be fully calmed.

NO MATTER what Laxalt is able to tell the president's political supporters around the country about his role in calling the shots in a re-election campaign, it is clear that Baker, as White House chief of staff, will play a critical role, even if a less visible one.

What is likely to develop is a situation that is common when incumbent presidents campaign for re-election, a tug of war between the White House staff and campaign staff for control of his time.

"I don't see the White House being excluded," said Laxalt. "But by the same token, I don't think even the people in the White House feel that they should be running this campaign.

"Jim would concede that in a moment. He's got too many other things to do."

But those "other things" all involve the president's time and attention and are likely to conflict with the demands of a political campaign.

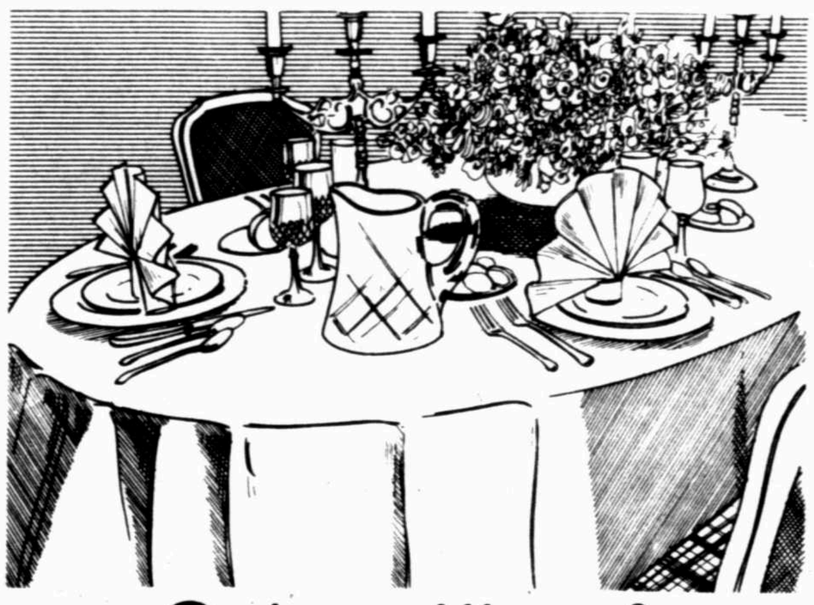

There seems little question now that Laxalt will, as he says, be the person to decide who is the day-to-day campaign manager if Reagan runs in 1984, and he will be able to make good on his promise to Reaganites that "those who served us loyally in the past should be included again," which is a way of saying that most of the veterans can expect to have their old state or regional campaign jobs again.

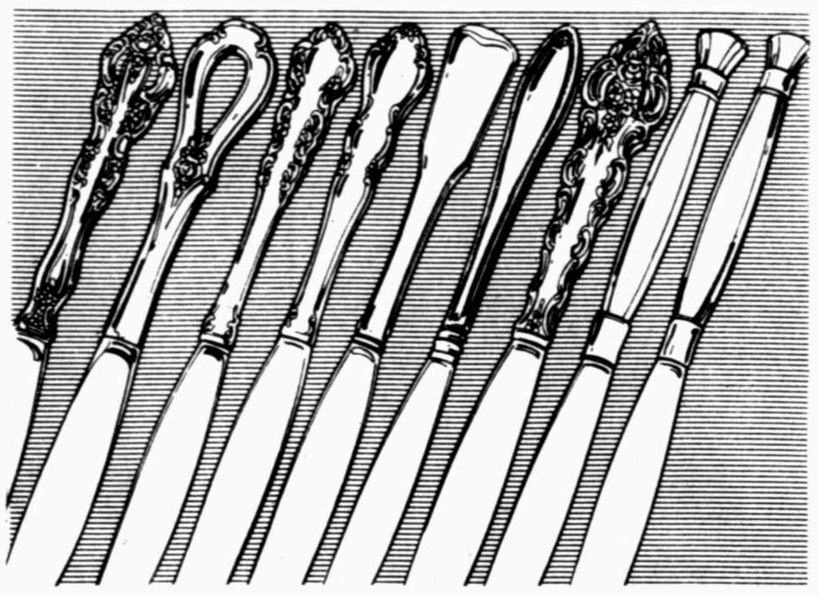

But that may not prevent a power struggle between the old Reagan friend with ready access to the Oval Office and the powerful aide who works at the side of the president.

Space telescope over budget

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The space telescope that space agency chief James M. Beggs believes will be "the most important scientific instrument ever flown" has experienced so much developmental difficulty that it will cost $200 million more and reach earth orbit a year later than expected, according to a House staff report.

The report concluded that the space telescope will cost the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $1 billion by the time it flies. Its current estimated cost is $797.2 million, which is $225 million more than expected when the program began in 1977.

The report also concluded that the space telescope will be carried into earth orbit by the space shuttle no earlier than April 1986, a year later than planned. If it reaches earth orbit any later, the telescope will miss Halley's Comet when it swings around the sun that year. Halley's Comet was to be one of the telescope's first demanding assignments.

The report, by the House Appropriations Committee's surveys and investigations staff, said that there are so many "outstanding questions" about the design of three "fine guidance sensors" for locking the telescope onto distant stars that an internal review committee has recommended that the half-completed instrument be tested for at least a year and that a new instrument be built based on the test.

The device is being developed by Perkin-Elmer Corp. of Danbury, Conn. Perkin-Elmer and California's Lockheed Corp. are the project's two major contractors.

"If this recommendation is accepted, a one-year delay in the program will occur, costing $100 million," the report said. "A launch will then be delayed until at least April 1986."

A device called the orbital replacement unit, for aligning and securing the scientific instruments in the telescope, must also be redesigned, the report said.

Una Loy Clark, on the arms of her son Stephen, left, follows the casket of her late husband, artificial heart recipient Barney Clark, as it is rolled to a cemetery ceremony near Federal Way, Wash., Tuesday afternoon.

Clark remembered as selfless pioneer

FEDERAL WAY, Wash. (AP) — Barney Clark, laid to rest as a cold rain fell on 1,300 mourners, was eulogized as "our hero in this chapter of history" who blazed a medical trail with his artificial heart that thousands of patients will someday follow.

"In time, 50,000 men and women per year will be restored to a worthwhile existence with the artificial heart in the United States alone," said Dr. Willem Kolff, director of the University of Utah Division of Artificial Organs, as Clark was buried Tuesday near his home town.

About 1,300 people turned out in cold, driving rain for the funeral service at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Stake Center, south of Seattle, where the retired dentist was eulogized as a selfless hero.

"To a world increasingly filled with hopelessness and despair, he stood quietly and resolutely for an entirely different view of life," said Elder Neal A. Maxwell of the Mormon Church's Council of the Twelve Apostles. "His impact was immense — greater than he could possibly know."

He called the 62-year-old Clark "a selfless pioneer, adding a new dimension to the Mormon pioneer tradition in which those who lost their loved ones crossing the plains nevertheless picked up their handcarts and headed west."

Clark, the walls of his diseased heart as thin as tissue paper, on Dec. 2 traded a peaceful, imminent death for a painful future with the experimental, air-driven heart.

Rarely without pain after the operation at the University of Utah Medical Center, an uncomplaining Clark shook off death time and again for 112 days until circulatory collapse and multiple organ failure overtook him a week ago today.

Future recipients of the plastic heart "will experience that their borrowed days, weeks, months or years of survival are a precious gift which they owe to Barney Clark and (his wife) Una Loy," said Kolff.

In remarks directed to Mrs. Clark, Kolff spoke of the operation and its effect on the patient, his family and the doctors.

"It is not so much life we wanted to prolong, but happiness we wanted to create...We had hoped we could have given Dr. Barney Clark a higher quality of life," Kolff said.

Poultry farmers fried over McDonald's decision

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Old McDonald's bought some eggs, ee-i-ee-i-o.

It used those eggs in its Egg McMuffins, ee-i-ee-i-o.

It was white eggs here, and white eggs there. Here an egg, there an egg, everywhere a white egg — except in New England, where 9 million hens lay almost 2 billion BROWN eggs every year.

Old McDonald has a problem, ee-i-ee-i-o.

The poultry farmers who own those 9 million chickens in Maine, New Hampshire and Massachusetts are feeling fried over the fast-food chain's decision to use white eggs instead of brown eggs in a nationwide giveaway in May.

In the McDonald's promotion, customers will receive half a dozen fresh white eggs with certain purchases, the idea being to put to rest any suspicion that McDonald's uses powdered or processed eggs.

Nice idea, say the poultry farmers, but why white? Nearly all of New Hampshire's 600,000 laying hens produce brown eggs, said Thomas Danko, poultry specialist for the New Hampshire Extension Service.

Last week, the New England Brown Egg Council tried unsuccessfully to convince McDonald's it should use brown eggs, at least in New England, in its giveaway.

McDonald's had already agreed to buy its eggs for the promotion from Connecticut white-egg producers, who supply all the eggs for the chain's New England restaurants.

"Naturally, we are disappointed," Jerry LaFlamme, president of the New Hampshire Poultry Growers' Association, said Monday. "Relying on local people for business at McDonald's, you'd think they would want to use our eggs. But they don't."

"Obviously, they want to buy all their eggs from one place," Danko said. "But you'd think they would bend a little in this case."

Telephone calls to McDonald's corporate headquarters in Oak Brook, Ill., went unanswered Tuesday night.

Some New England politicians, including Rep. Norman D'Amours, D-N.H., wrote letters of complaint to McDonald's. Rep. John R. McKernan, R-Maine, appealed to McDonald's to "understand the potential damage the white egg giveaway could do to our egg industry." He said more than 80 percent of egg buyers in New England preferred brown eggs.

"We're fighting for our survival," said LaFlamme, who runs a poultry farm in Monroe.

Senator cares too much to live

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The weekend before she killed herself, state Sen. Audrey Beck worked day and night devising a tax package to pull Connecticut out of its fiscal quagmire — a feat she had pulled off before.

It was also an important time in the 51-year-old economist's personal life: At week's end, she was to marry her neighbor, English professor Charles McLaughlin.

To friends, it looked as though Ms. Beck had recovered from a divorce and suicide attempt three years before, when her husband of 18 years left her for McLaughlin's wife.

But on March 11, two days before her wedding, Ms. Beck drove up a dirt trail in Willington, a few miles from her home. She walked several hundred yards into the woods, slashed her wrists and lay down to die.

For colleagues, there are no easy answers about why she took her life.

They agree that Ms. Beck, the Democratic co-chairman of the legislative Finance Committee, agonized over state finances. She was known as an intense, powerful, compassionate lawmaker who strongly advocated tax reform and a progressive income tax.

But year after year, the Democratic leadership refused to accept an income tax, leaving Connecticut dependent on a 7½ percent sales tax that is the highest for any state. And Ms. Beck was left to help pull together a patchwork of taxes that she personally opposed.

She was also known as a very private, sometimes moody person, who was haunted by self-doubt.

"She didn't recognize herself as the strong, capable person that everybody else knew her to be," said Betty Tianti, a state labor leader and close friend.

"Clearly, some personal things going on in her life were difficult and were tearing her soul apart," said House Speaker Irving Stolberg, Ms. Beck's co-chairman on the Finance Committee. "And, on a secondary scale, what we're going through here in the Legislature was doing the same thing...

"Any big decision in your life, political or personal, if you can't make it and move on, but make it and continue to question it...that's a very disruptive process," Stolberg said.

Connecticut's fiscal problems have escalated to the point where Gov. William O'Neill has proposed $223 million in tax increases to make ends meet in the coming year. The package does not call for an income tax, which O'Neill adamantly opposes.

Jon Pelto, the Democratic chairman in Ms. Beck's hometown of Mansfield, said she worried that she had "sold out to the governor" by shelving an income tax proposal.

Townspeople, he said, thought Ms. Beck had overcome the depression that stemmed from her 1979 divorce.

"The only question was, was there some regret?" he said of her plan to remarry. "The more I think about it, it must have been a combination of those pressures, personal and political."

The day before she died, Ms. Beck confronted House Majority Leader John Groppo about the budget.

"I said, 'Audrey, we always had problems with it. This is nothing new,'" Groppo recalled. "She said, 'We've got to have an income tax.' I told her, 'Maybe, but there aren't the votes for an income tax.'"

John DiBiaggio, president of the University of Connecticut where Ms. Beck taught for eight years, said she was driven by "an enormous social conscience...I think her downfall was due to the fact that she cared so much."

Levee break may just be start of destruction, officials say

MANTECA, Calif. (AP) — A levee break along the San Joaquin River that routed 50 families and flooded thousands of acres of farmland may be just the start of winter-wrought destruction that could last into summer, officials say.

"There's a continuing likelihood of levee breaks as long as there is high water — and the high water is expected to continue well into June and July," said Larry Ferral, deputy hydrologist in charge for the California-Nevada River Forecast Center.

Dangerously swollen by months of rain, the San Joaquin River on Tuesday cut a 300-foot wide hole through a levee, sending 50 farm families fleeing and inundating about 4,000 acres of cornfields, orchards and vineyards.

With water standing 2 to 15 feet deep in the fields, scores of emergency workers, volunteers and crews from the California Conservation Corps began sandbagging the fragile levee and rolling out sheets of plastic in an effort to keep the flood from spreading.

Oilman, wife kill themselves

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — A retired oilman and his wife apparently died of carbon monoxide poisoning in a double suicide pact, repeating a family tragedy of last year, officials say.

The bodies of Lyle McMillin, 74, and his wife, Margaret, 70, were found inside their car in their garage, Timothy Blaney, Brown County coroner, said Monday. McMillan had been ill and "had a limited life expectancy," Blaney said.

McMillan owned and operated the McMillin Oil Co. here from 1945 until his retirement in 1973. His brother, Miles, 69, a former newspaper publisher, shot his wife and then shot and killed himself last December.

Mauled boy ruled trespasser

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — A boy who was mauled by nine hunting dogs when he chased a ball into a neighbor's yard cannot collect damages because he was trespassing, a state appeals court has ruled.

Eight Afghan hounds and a Doberman pinscher pounced on 5-year-old Jeffrey Weissensee and mauled his face in the 1977 incident, requiring his hospitalization for five weeks, according to court papers.

The Maryland Court of Special Appeals ruled Tuesday that the boy had entered the Oxon Hill property of William and Patricia Waugh without their permission and therefore was a trespasser.

Car traveling at high speed

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A sheriff's vehicle that struck a Secret Service car during Queen Elizabeth II's visit to Yosemite National Park, killing three agents, was traveling at about 75 mph, authorities said.

California Highway Patrol investigators concluded County Sheriff's Sgt. Roderick Sinclair "was traveling at excessive speed for conditions and crossed the center line of the highway and collided head-on," said a report released Tuesday.

The agents who were killed were in the second car of a three-car motorcade.

Blunt senator attempts subtle approach

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ted Stevens' reputation doesn't exactly rest on the art of gentle persuasion, but the volatile Alaska lawmaker says he'll put hard-line advocacy aside in a bid to become the next Republican leader of the Senate.

As Senate Whip, Stevens has been next-in-line for the past six years, but his elevation to the No. 1 position is far from assured. The list of potential candidates to succeed Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker has already reached the half-dozen mark.

Ted Stevens

"Past whips have gone on to become leaders. (Former Sen.) Hugh Scott (of Pennsylvania) was the latest one. I would aspire to that," Stevens said in an interview. Baker, R-Tenn., is retiring after his term ends in 1984.

Stevens, blunt-spoken and often hot-tempered, conceded that the race involves some delicate campaigning. He calls it "the toughest election in the country" and says he's not sure yet whether he can pull it off.

"You have to really have a broad-scale approach in a very subtle way to a lot of people," Stevens said.

Those who might challenge Stevens for the post include Sens. Richard Lugar of Indiana, Robert Dole of Kansas, Paul Laxalt of Nevada, James McClure of Idaho and Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico.

IF REPUBLICANS retain control of the Senate in 1984 — a feat that may not be all that easy, with 19 GOP members up for re-election — the race will be for majority leader. If Democrats regain the Senate, then the battle would be for the minority leadership.

Losing the Senate might change the cast of candidates, but Stevens says he's interested in the job either way.

But Senate sources say Stevens' temper could prove to be a major liability. "He needs to learn to control his temper better. He has the reputation of being a hothead," said one top Republican official who spoke only on the condition that he not be identified.

"Leadership races are a very special kind of politics," said potential competitor Lugar. "They involve a small constituency with all the constituents and candidates knowing each other. It's a very intimate situation."

Stevens has clashed many times on the floor with other senators. First there was his feud with former Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, including fierce battles over legislation to curb development on federal lands in Alaska. Stevens was fond of belittling Gravel as the "showhorse" and calling himself the "workhorse" of their state's delegation.

More recently Stevens has scrapped with Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, over a variety of bills. The battle escalated to a point where Stevens volunteered to go to Ohio last fall to campaign against the liberal Democrat. He never made the trip — even though Metzenbaum offered to pay his plane fare.

"IF HE HAD come maybe I could have won by a bigger margin," Metzenbaum joked.

Metzenbaum said he disapproves of Stevens' floor tactics. "I don't believe it adds anything to the dialogue to lose your temper," he says. To which Stevens responds: "I've got a temper, but they haven't seen it yet."

Stevens admits he flares up from time to time, but claims it's only his background as an ex-trial lawyer coming through. "I think some people don't understand how you can raise your voice to make a point...how you can use your temper."

Stevens has shaken the Senate rafters on many occasions, whether it's been to champion Alaska issues, to criticize Washington for not being more hospitable to members of Congress or visitors, or to advocate pay raises for government employees and members of Congress.

> "People don't seem to say anything at all about the fact that there's a football star getting $5 million. But if a member of Congress gets a $5,000 pay increase, it becomes a national issue."

"People don't seem to say anything at all about the fact that there's a football star getting $5 million. But if a member of Congress gets a $5,000 pay increase, it becomes a national issue," he said.

He's also taken the unpopular job serving as chairman of the Senate Ethics Committee, the panel that sits in judgment on misdeeds of members, a job Stevens said he feels he has the mental toughness to handle.

STEVENS ALSO chairs the Senate defense appropriations subcommittee and has been a strong advocate for increases in defense spending, although he is a political moderate — by Republican standards — on most other issues.

A former majority leader of the Alaska House, Stevens, 59, has served in the Senate since 1968. In 1978 he survived a plane crash that killed his wife of 28 years. He has since remarried.

When Baker was elected minority leader in 1977, Stevens was elected whip. After Republicans captured the Senate in 1980, the team held together, with Baker elected to majority leader and Stevens his first assistant.

Stevens claims he and Baker have worked smoothly as a team — and he hopes that fact will help him win support from colleagues. But Baker, who announced he will not seek re-election when his term expires in 1984, has declined to endorse his teammate as his successor. Aides say Baker will remain neutral in the contest.

Thunderbirds back in the air again

By ROBERT MACY

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The sleek red, white and blue Thunderbird jet rises sharply from the runway at Nellis Air Force Base, following the route flown each day by the pilots chosen to rebuild America's premier flying team.

Back to the right rise the gaming palaces of Las Vegas, to the left snow-capped Mount Charleston. Further west the Sierra Nevada snuggle the California-Nevada border. Straight ahead are target areas in a dry lake bed on the sprawling Nellis Test Range, where fighter pilots ply their deadly skills on tiny specks that become tanks, trucks and missile sites as you swoop near the ground.

Since the torrid days of summer, when desert temperatures soared above 120 degrees, Maj. Jim Latham has been molding a new Thunderbird team along this route.

After a frustrating 19-month absence, they are anxious to return to their forte — performing before crowds from Tacoma, Wash., to Tampa, Fla., and from Washington, D.C. to San Bernardino, Calif. But they are breaking tradition by holding their 1983 inaugural Saturday before an anxious hometown audience.

The Air Force is unveiling the new team in Las Vegas because the city cared deeply when the T-38s of Maj. Norm Lowry and captains Pete Peterson, Mark Melancon and Willie Mays slammed into the desert Jan. 18, 1982 during practice. Investigators blamed a mechanical failure in Lowry's lead plane.

The Air Force announced the Thunderbirds would not fly in 1982, but would be back in 1983, in exotic F-16 flying machines.

Selected as the team's "boss" was the 36-year-old Latham, a handsome, sandy-haired, highly decorated fighter pilot who first began flying over the Flint Hills of Kansas and was wounded attempting to escape a Viet Cong prison camp after being shot down on his 328th combat mission.

Joining Latham on the team are captains Steve Chealander of Bakersfield, Calif., and Howard Attarian of Fairview, Kan., and Maj. Lawrence Stellmon of Hot Springs, Mont. Solo pilots are Maj. Schumpert "Hoss" Jones of Ruston, La., and Capt. John Bostick of Water Valley, Ky.

Their faith in each other is implicit. Flying in four- and sometimes six-plane formations, they loop, roll, climb and dive at speeds up to 600 miles per hour, flying scant feet apart. Only Latham watches his plane's instruments; the other pilots fix on a spot on his plane.

Logistics officer Maj. Bob Fleer begins to trace some of the team maneuvers as our two-place T-38 climbs to 12,000 feet in two minutes, then bumps along with the wind currents whirring across the mountains surrounding Las Vegas.

He pulls into a slow roll as the mountains, the desert floor, the horizon and then the blue sky slip past your field of vision.

You try to remember the instructions as the G force doubles your body weight, then doubles it again. Lean into the turns. Tighten your muscles. Still the blood rushes to your head; your helmet seems to be shrinking, squeezing your skull.

We slide down to 2,500 feet for a closer look at the desert targets, then back up to 10,000 as the mountain peaks rush to meet us.

Fleer points the nose of the craft upward, slips it over on its back, then levels off. The loop, some 4,000 feet high, is flown at more than 400 miles per hour.

He banks the plane in a circle, speed increasing to nearly 500 miles an hour. The G force tears at your body, just as you were promised.

Fleer levels off and points the craft at a nearby mountain range. He kicks on the afterburner and the speed jumps 100 knots, sneaking up on the speed of sound.

The 45-minute flight in the path of the Thunderbirds leaves you limp, exhausted and amazed at the physical and mental stamina — and dedication — of Latham and his men.

Teacher's motivation program can save troubled families

BUTLER, Pa. (AP) — For more than five years, Ken Musko has been a master of motivation for the burned-out legions of the working world: teachers, business people, nurses, police, and even clergy who felt they couldn't continue.

Now he's turned his attention to another group whose self-image has plummeted — the American family.

"People are screaming for answers. How can I motivate my employees? How can I motivate my family?" said the Butler High School teacher. "Well, I've got the answers."

Musko's unusual methods for building self-confidence — forcing participants to rappel down buildings and cliffs or be lifted 200 feet into the air by parachutes — won him educational awards, national attention and the praise of participants.

"I would make this course mandatory for all teachers, instructors and coaches in our district if I could," one teacher wrote on an evaluation form of Musko's program. "It helps us rebuild our enthusiasm for teaching."

He is convinced these methods will work for troubled families.

"I believe in it. I've seen it work in my own family," the father of three said.

To develop trust, Musko encourages spouses to blindfold their partner or children and lead them around the house. And he recommends that children fall backwards from chairs and tables into their parents' arms.

To foster cooperation, he suggests that families line up, with right feet attached to a long wooden plank and left feet tied onto another. Similar to moves made during a sack race, everyone must work together to go forward.

For families facing unemployment, he recommends overnight vacations or inexpensive restaurant meals to give hope of a better future.

And he stresses communication, physical contact and group decision-making.

"Everyone needs to feel fully appreciated.

Musko, 38, began working with students displaying behavioral problems in the mid 1970s. He soon discovered that nearly all his pupils, as well as their parents, lacked self-esteem.

After participating in the Outward Bound survival program, Musko felt that motivation and positive thinking were the keys to dealing with his students and incorporated those theories plus some of his own into a home-operated business, Beacon Guide Motivational Programs Co.

'Texas mystique' haunts Lone Star state writers

AUSTIN (AP) — The "Texas mystique" may be dead to the rest of the country but it still haunts Texas writers.

Expatriates and stubborn resident chauvinists alike joined in an unprecedented discussion last weekend at the University of Texas to claim the "mystique" does not exist — and that it will never leave them.

Larry McMurtry, author of the state's best-known modern fiction, including "Horseman Pass By" (which became the movie "Hud") and "The Last Picture Show," was the star of a panel discussion ostensibly about "the '80s," but which quickly degenerated into an argument over whether a writer must be in Texas or only born in Texas to claim the title.

"To be a Texas writer, all you have to do is be born," said A.C. Greene, a journalist, fiction writer and biographer of the late "Texana" king, J. Frank Dobie.

"I am the only Texas writer here," Greene complained. "Everybody else has left. Everybody's gotten jobs. They talk about writing in Texas. They don't do it."

The rest of the panel included Shelby Hearon ("Armadillo in the Grass"), Beverly Lowry ("Daddy's Girl") and UT professor Jose Limon.

Ms. Hearon lives in New York; Ms. Lowry is from Mississippi and recently moved to Houston. Limon said he is not a writer, but an "academic."

McMurtry, who lives in Washington, D.C., said he comes back to Texas to write, but that "it doesn't make any difference to me how much time I spend in Texas. It isn't going to change my depth of reference."

"One should guard against a regional self-pity," McMurtry continued. "You have the same task wherever you are. The essential thing — the writing — is not any easier in New York or anywhere else than it is in Texas."

Later, Greene, who made no secret of a feud with McMurtry, said he wanted to make "an unselfish statement."

"The man on my left has done more for Texas literature than anyone since 1960," he said of McMurtry. "Even when he denied it exists, he did more for it any anybody."

Texas Observer editor Joe Holley, who led the discussion, challenged the writers to come up with the great urban Texas novel and leave rural self-analysis behind.

"I think Mr. (James) Michener is going to do that and leave the rest of us to our whimsy," quipped McMurtry. Michener, a non-Texan who has turned to Texas as the latest subject of his successful, sweeping style ("Hawaii," "Chesapeake"), was in the audience but did not participate in the discussion.

A later panel discussion was aimed specifically at the elusive "Texas mystique." It included three writers who are associated more with movies than books: Bill Witliff, the screenwriter behind "Raggedy Man," "Honeysuckle Rose" and "Barbarosa," Pete Gent, author of "North Dallas Forty," and Aaron Latham, whose 1978 article in Esquire magazine spawned "Urban Cowboy."

Latham said he tried to convey both in his article and in the film that he co-wrote a direct descension of the "urban cowboy" from the ancient knights of Europe. His protagonist, he said, was supposed to be a modern-day Don Quixote, jousting with a spinning mechanic bull in place of the turning windmill.

He also suggested that the "Texas mystique" may find a resurgence this fall when the screen version of Tom Wolfe's book "The Right Stuff" is released.

"Houston and the spaceman may be the next extension of the myth," Latham said — with a rocket for a horse, a space helmet for a cowboy hat.

Witliff, who steadfastly has refused to move to Hollywood from Austin, said the mystique followed him to the West Coast.

"They assume we're all drunks and they're sure we all have killed at least one Mexican," he joked.

"You learn that it's going to be with you forever," said Gent, who came to Texas to play for the Dallas Cowboys "before they were America's team" and now lives in Wimberley.

"You become a hero and then you see what the back side is," Gent said. "Then you've got to scramble to get back on the front side. I've lived the back side. Well, this is my new front side."

Latham lives in Washington, D.C., freelancing for magazines like Rolling Stone. He told of meeting Larry King ("Best Little Whorehouse in Texas") there.

"I had spent years trying to lose my accent and then I met this guy who had spent years trying to hone his," said Latham. "I had the feeling we were both faking."

Plumes of steam rise from hot springs near the Mutnovsky Volcano on the Kamchatka Peninsula in the Soviet Union. The Soviet news agency, Tass, which released this photo, says there is a good chance that a geothermal power plant with a capacity of 200 megawatts will be built at the springs. The Kamchatka Peninsula is in the Bering Sea across from Alaska.

Grafitti mars the New York City tomb of Ulysses S. Grant. The neglected condition of presedential graves is the special interest of Leo Leavers of Buffalo, N.Y.

Many presidential graves are neglected

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Know where Martin Van Buren, Theodore Roosevelt and Herbert Hoover are buried?

Leo E. Leavers does. He's visited the gravesites of America's 35 late presidents, and he's ashamed at the conditions of some of them.

"To me they're very special people. They're treated in a very special way when they're living. Why not when they're in their final resting place?" asks Leavers, a 65-year-old retiree from Buffalo, N.Y., where Millard Fillmore rests.

To Leavers, the weather-beaten tombstone marking William H. Taft's grave at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia is a disgrace. So is the obscurity befallen James Madison, buried on private property across from the house where the future president grew up in Montpelier Station, Va.

Shamefully forgotten is Grover Cleveland, whose gravestone in Princeton, N.J., makes no mention of the office he held. And the graffiti and abandoned, wrecked cars surrounding the tomb of Ulysses S. Grant in New York City are deplorable, Leavers says.

Leavers, who winters in this Gulf Coast city, returns north each spring to a part-time job — selling cemetery plots. His interest in presidential graves, however, goes back 34 years, when as a newlywed he took his wife, Jane, to Grant's tomb.

Through the years he occasionally visited burial grounds, vowing when he retired to tour them all. He started three years ago and has logged thousands of miles through 16 states and the District of Columbia to achieve his goal.

"It was just something I wanted to do," he explains. "I wanted to go there to pay my respects. I just wanted to visit and say hello to them."

He visited the burial site of Van Buren in Kinderhook, N.Y., outside Albany; Teddy Roosevelt in Oyster Bay, on New York's Long Island; and Hoover in West Branch, Iowa, east of Des Moines.

Some of the graves are beautiful and elaborate, says Leavers, mentioning sites where Hoover, Dwight D. Eisenhower, Lyndon B. Johnson and Harry S. Truman lie.

At the Eisenhower gravesite in Abilene, Kan., there's a museum displaying gifts from royalty and nobility, a Cadillac he used as a general in Europe, a tank and memorabilia from his days at West Point.

Visitors to LBJ's grave take a 90-minute bus tour through the rolling hills of his Stonewall, Texas, ranch and listen to a tape of Johnson explaining that there comes a time in every man's life when he wants to return home.

In contrast are the sites that disturb Leavers. To find Madison's grave, he had to ask a postmaster who knew the grave was 40 or 50 miles from Montpelier, Va. No roadside markings guide the way.

"He was one of the founders of our Constitution," says Leavers. "He was well thought of, but not well taken care of."

In Princeton, Leavers had a hard time getting directions to Cleveland's grave. And when he got there, he found the 24th president remembered only by his name and the dates his life spanned.

"Upsetting. Disturbing," says Leavers.

One of Leaver's favorite spots is in Greeneville, Tenn., where a plaque at the gates to the Andrew Johnson National Cemetery reads:

"In fulfillment of his own request, Andrew Johnson's body lies wrapped in the American flag, his head resting on a copy of the Constitution. On his monument the eagle and flag symbolize his loyalty to the Union; the open Bible his faith in God and man; the scroll, his esteem for the Constitution of the United States."

Leavers likes to borrow a quote from Benjamin Franklin: "To know the character of a community I need only to visit the cemetery."

Organization can save time, money

Keep records to help with tax returns

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A little organization can save you money as well as time when you're filing in your tax return.

For many people, the approach of April 15 means a flurry of searching through drawers and closets for necessary expense records and receipts. And if you can't find what you're looking for, you may miss deductions which can trim your tax bill.

Take sales tax, for example. If you itemize deductions, you can deduct the amount you spent on sales tax. The Internal Revenue Service provides tables to use as a general guide. If you spent more than the amount listed in the tables, you can deduct more. But you must have proofs.

The record-keeping doesn't have to be complicated or expensive. A set of 12 envelopes — one for each month — is all you need for sales tax receipts. When you buy something on which you pay sales tax, put the receipt in the current month's envelope. When you're getting ready to prepare your return, simply add up each month's expenses.

If the clerk doesn't give you a receipt, ask for one. You may need it for a refund as well as for taxes. Make it a habit to check the receipts for date and amount when you put them in the appropriate envelope; it may seem like a tiresome chore at first, but it should become automatic.

Don't forget things like grocery store receipts. Food generally is not subject to sales tax, but you may pay a levy on non-food items like paper goods and the pennies add up. Meals in restaurants also are taxable in many areas; if you eat out regularly — even if you're only having a quick snack at lunch — you may be surprised at how much sales tax you pay.

Once you've learned how to keep records, you'll also have to learn how to throw them out. Too many papers can be as bad as too few.

A small file cabinet will make life easier; you should be able to find one for $40 or less that will fit into a corner.

Review records at least once a year; the best time is probably just before you get ready to file your tax return since you will have some key papers like your W-2 forms immediately available.

Divide home records into two sets — active and dead storage.

Your active file should include unpaid bills, receipts for bills you have already paid, current bank statements and cancelled checks, and any records you need for your income tax return. You should also keep employment records, credit card information, including card numbers; copies of health records, insurance policies and wills, education and Social Security information and warranties in your active file.

Things like salary statements and paycheck stubs should be kept long enough so you can check them annually against the W-2 form you get from your employer. If there is no discrepancy, throw them out.

Copies of your federal tax return — and the documentation to back up your claims — generally should be kept for three years. That's the amount of time the Internal Revenue Service has in which to audit your return. (The limit does not apply in some specialized cases. If you fail to report more than 25 percent of your gross income, for example, the government has six years to collect the tax or start legal procedings.)

The dead storage file is the place for records that are more than three years old and this file should be cleaned out periodically to get rid of items that are no longer applicable. There is no point, for example, in keeping the warranty for the refrigerator which wore out years ago.

A family inventory, listing vital information about all members and the whereabouts of important papers, should round out your record-keeping. Action for Independent Maturity, a division of the American Association of Retired Persons, has prepared a 28-page booklet, "Your Vital Papers Logbook," which includes a guide to the information you'll need and provides space to list each item. Copies are available for $4.95 each from AIM Logbook, P.O. Box 19269-A, Washington, D.C., 20036.

"We've got to get organized."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, March 31, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Ed Marinaro of "Hill Street Blues," Chicago Black Hawks' Bob Pulford, labor chief Cesar Chavez, hockey all-star Gordie Howe and actors Richard Chamberlain, Richard Kiley and Gabe Kaplan share your birthday. Also born on this date: the "father of the symphony" Franz Joseph Haydn and boxing great Jack Johnson. You will have good luck with a new business venture. Prove your worth in a crisis situation and you will win yourself a promotion. Big dollars follow! You gain in stature when you refuse to bow to group pressures. Stick to what you do best. Friends look to you for advice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do everything you can to build up your financial reserves. Loved ones are comforted to know that their future is secure. Travel enhances a personal relationship. Useful agreements can be reached.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Everything should be going according to plan. Although getting to the bottom of an employment problem will be difficult, persist. It is important not to waste a moment of time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do not suggest even minor changes in the way a trust is handled. Those in charge know what they are doing. Pay bills and answer correspondence before leaving work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You find a country hideaway or small town conducive to relaxation. Look for a way to escape the city permanently. A good real estate buy makes moving sound especially attractive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't be so demanding. You will lose your bounce unless you lighten your schedule. Cut down on the night life. Concentrate on work that can advance your career.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Put aside any superstitions and tackle work assignments. No important papers should be signed before next week. Devote more time to family affairs and self-improvement activities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New contacts could include government officials who help you cut through red tape. An employee who quits without notice may not have to be replaced. An infatuation turns into true love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Concentration will be difficult unless you seek a quiet environment. Working at home is a fine idea if mate is cooperative. A promotion and raise are real possibilities now.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Resist the urge to ask a lot of questions. Nervous tension could lead to over-indulgence in food or drink. Exercise greater self-discipline. Romance takes an exciting turn.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be more tactful with a difficult co-worker. Catch up with correspondence and return phone calls. A last-minute invitation adds glamor to your evening. You are delighted to get together with old friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Strive to improve the appearance and value of your property. An after-hours social event gives you a splendid opportunity to meet someone influential. Teamwork brings in extra cash.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Mutual funds should not be used to purchase luxury items. Do what you can to increase family members' comfort without breaking the bank. Make amends to a loved one you may have slighted.

Scully muses about golf

Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — Vin Scully was musing on the peculiar nature of televising a golf tournament. "It's like being a member of a verbal relay team," Vin says, "and you are forever handing off the baton. If all the great statements in history happened in a golf telecast, none of them would ever have been completed. Patrick Henry would have said, 'Give me liberty or — and now let's go to the sixteenth tee!'"

Scully calls baseball for NBC as well as anchoring five golf tournaments. Vin is paired with an analyst who has acquired some knowledge of the game.

Lee Trevino is the name and not long ago the talkative one lifted his quill to compose an eloquent autobiography titled "They Call Me Super-Mex."

"When I was told that I'd be working with Lee Trevino," Scully says, "the first thing I did was go out and buy a copy of Lee's book. I read it avidly. It seemed to me the best way to learn about my new partner first-hand."

"The one thing that struck me most forcibly (about the book)," Vin said, "is just how desperately poor Lee was as a kid growing up in Dallas. You tend to think of successful golfers learning the game from teaching pros at beautifully manicured country clubs. That wasn't Lee Trevino's life. He taught himself to play and he was, obviously, an outstanding teacher. He has enjoyed a remarkable success and he's handled it very well. Lee Trevino is special."

Scully himself once shot to a 12 handicap but his prowess on the links, owing to a dearth of playing time, has deteriorated.

"Golf," he says, "reminds me of the loneliness of the long-distance runner. A golfer coming down the stretch must face a tremendous solitary pressure. And this pressure comes from within. In baseball, a player can be intimidated by a pitcher with a wild fast ball. In football, there is the intimidation of physical contact. In boxing, your opponent is out to pound you into an unconscious state.

"In golf, the intimidation is never physical. It's all emotional and the nerves can grind. In most other sports, you have the roar of the crowd to unnerve the athlete — in golf it's the silence that can be excrutiating with thousands of fans lining the fairway, their eyes fastened on the solitary golfer aiming a chip shot at the pin. It's all a part of the story we have to tell."

Scully envisions his own job as weaving the various threads of the tapestry of the competition. This he does after intense preparation. It is typically Scully that when he received his first assignment to call the Andy Williams tournament, going back to the mid-'70s, he investigated the course and its topography. He still does this.

It is all very well to make close doubles. But you had better have the defensive skills of 1966 World Open Pairs champions Hans Kreyns and Bob Slavenburg if you want to avoid bankruptcy as a result.

Slavenburg's double of two clubs was tactical — he wanted to drive the enemy to two hearts. But after he accomplished his mission, he and his partner had to defend brilliantly to achieve a plus score.

West led a spade. East won the king and correctly shifted to a trump to cut down club ruffs in dummy. Declarer played the king and West won the ace. Now if West does not remove dummy's last trump, declarer will get home. He will finesse the jack of diamonds, then use the diamond entry to dummy to take the club finesse. After cashing the ace of clubs, declarer can then ruff a club to set up the suit and land the contract.

But it would not do to return any trump. If West returns a low trump, declarer will have two entries to dummy for two club finesses, which will allow the contract to succeed in a different way. West solved the problem by returning the jack of trumps!

Declarer finessed the jack of diamonds. East won the ace and applied the last nail to declarer's coffin. He exited with a diamond. Declarer was in dummy and he could take one club finesse. But he still had to give up a club to East. When East won the king, he continued with the ten of diamonds, and now the defenders were guaranteed two more tricks for a one-trick set no matter what declarer did.

Restoring justice

Emergency appeals have become common practice for those sentenced to die for their crimes. Those appeals have become so burdensome, in fact, the U.S. Supreme Court is getting ready to decide how to deal with appeals in death sentences. It's time because the appeals are threatening the integrity of the judicial system.

The public response to the appeals process has been understandable. The American system of justice stipulates the burden on bringing an individual to justice be on the state and that every reasonable appeal be afforded. But look at the facts regarding a recent execution and the pending appeal of Texas convict Thomas Barefoot. Before the execution of Charlie Brooks Jr. last December in Huntsville, his case had been reviewed by numerous judges over a period of six years. Had any thread of evidence indicating justification for a stay in his execution existed, it undoubtedly would have been uncovered.

Now, Barefoot is appealing a death sentence likely to write the future of emergency appeals. Already Barefoot has received three stays of execution and his case, too, has been scrutinized by more than a few judges. In fact, a law clerk at U.S. District Court here conservatively estimated at least 15 judges have studied Barefoot's case already.

This is not an instance of surprising new evidence justifying a stay of execution once again. Rather, this is an instance of a convicted man desperately trying to hang onto life and in the process, to deny other, more deserving appellants of their right to a day in court. Thus society is becoming his victim once again.

The road to justice is being impeded by last-minute appeals. But the U.S. Supreme Court is preparing to render its decision. It should be a ruling to restore justice — and timeliness — to the appeals process.

Friend of the West

One of the unanswered questions about Felipe Gonzalez when he was elected Socialist Prime Minister of Spain four months ago was the extent to which he would be a friend of the Western World. The prime minister has been doing his best to answer that question in the affirmative.

Although Spain joined the North Atlantic Treaty Organization last May, one of Gonzalez' first acts after taking office was to freeze Spain's integration into NATO's military structure. He had previously raised doubts about his international orientation by his campaign pledge to call a national referendum on continuing membership in NATO.

He has not reneged on that pledge, but he has postponed the referendum indefinitely. More than that, he has become increasingly outspoken in pledging allegiance to the alliance. After his first 100 days in office, he said:

"We will not change our policy toward NATO as long as we are, in 1983 and 1984, in a period of tensions between East and West."

His most encouraging words, for the United States and the rest of the West, were made in a nationwide broadcast. "Spain is clearly a Western country," he said, "with obligations to the West in our political, economic, Institutional and ... defense aspects."

It takes time for a nation that has been a monarchy and a dictatorship to become a full partner in the community of free nations, but Spain's Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez is showing that it can happen.

Another View: Anatomy of payoff

President Reagan's keister seems to be making an unusual number of public appearances these days. First it was the place that Reagan announced he had it up to when he angrily ordered efforts to stop news leaks from within his administration.

Now, according to Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the presidential keister has once more been invoked, this time to express the limits of Reagan's patience with bankers who are trying to kill a new withholding tax on interest and dividends.

Give Reagan credit for being able to prevent his ire from rising to the higher altitudes. Lesser mortals, pushed to the breaking point, may announce that they have had it up to their necks, their ears, their eyebrows. Not Reagan. His choler apparently stops at the belt line. That is no doubt very useful in keeping the mind free from unnecessary agitation. Frankly, we think that it shows an admirable awareness of what belongs where.

Larry Speakes, the deputy press secretary at the White House, is more concerned with Reagan's image than with his sense of proportion. Dole, he says, got it wrong in reporting the president's comments at a meeting with congressional Republicans. The keister comment applied to what the bankers are sitting on "when they should be lowering interest rates." Reagan's unhappiness with the bankers' lobbying against the withholding tax was expressed less colorfully and more conventionally.

We ask you, would Harry Truman ever have sent his press secretary out to make a denial like that? For that matter, would Truman have used a word like keister, when a shorter one was readily at hand?

The spectacle of a Republican president denouncing bankers may not be unique; it is simply that no other recorded instances of such comments are known to exist. In the present case, this venting of wrath can be regarded as more than justified.

The banking lobby has mounted a ferocious and costly blitzkrieg against the withholding tax. In the process, it has misled and scared half out of their wits a lot of small depositors, while succeeding through its beholden Senate allies in tying up a lot of important legislation. The point that has got lost in all this is that withholding is not a new tax at all, but just a better way to collect taxes that are due. In plain words, it is an effort to stop tax cheating.

No matter. The banking industry contributed $4.3 million to political candidates in 1981 and 1982, and bankers are the guys incumbents go to when they need easy loans for their campaigns.

You don't have to be a banker to add up 2 plus 2 and figure out what the political payoff for that kind of largess will be. Our guess is that a lot of people, like Reagan, have by now had it up to you-know-where with the banking lobby and its friends in Congress.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Taxpayer $$$ keep 'brass' flying

WASHINGTON — While millions of Americans have been struggling to make ends meet, the privileged poohbahs in the Pentagon have been flying high — literally — at the taxpayers' expense.

Jack Anderson

The Defense Department's generals, admirals and high-ranking civilians have a fleet of 9,000 aircraft available to chauffeur them around the country whenever they get the itch to travel.

According to an internal report prepared by the Pentagon's new Inspector General's office, these planes and helicopters have become an "on-demand airline service" for brass hats who are too lazy or too superior to take commercial flights to their destinations.

This abuse of rank's privileges is expensive. It costs about $800 an hour for a flight in a T-39, the military version of an executive jet. For a C-140, the huge, gussied-up transport plane, the tab is $2,800 an hour.

Yet the Pentagon bigshots whistle up a T-39 or a C-140 as casually as if they were hailing a taxicab. The IG report has stimulated an inquiry by the House Defense Appropriations subcommittee, chaired by Rep. Joseph Addabbo, D-N.Y. It cites numerous violations of the spirit, if not the letter, of the laws covering use of these special planes.

My associate Lucette Lagnado has obtained a copy of the IG report, which was intended for official eyes only. Here are some of the highlights:

— A T-39 was sent from Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, D.C., to fetch a high-ranking Pentagon civilian at a field near Detroit. The round-trip flight cost $1,578, compared to the commercial fare of $95, according to the report, from Detroit to Washington. The IG investigators noted that while the high muckamuck was waiting for his personal air-taxi service, three commercial airline flights left Detroit for Washington.

— Football games between service academies are a common excuse for using the special aircraft fleet. Officers and their families, cadets and even cheerleaders are given free rides to games in a C-141 Starlifter. The IG investigators learned, for example, that it cost $300,000 to transport cadets to just two service academy games in 1981. "The use of military airlift to transport academy cadets/midshipment to sporting events as spectators is, in our opinion, a questionable practice that needs re-evaluation," the IG report states.

— Wives of four-star generals and certain other top brass can accompany their husbands free of charge if their presence is considered to be "in the national interest, essential to mission accomplishment and desirable for diplomatic or public relations reasons," according to a 1980 guideline issued by the Defense Department.

— The IG found that Air Force wives are actually encouraged to travel, which led the investigators to observe that while this "may be an accepted interpretation of the DoD guidance, we do not believe that it is within the spirit of what DoD intended." The report adds a practical warning that "with wives aboard, the appearance of an official trip, as viewed by the public and news media, may be tainted towards one of personal use."

— "Dead head legs," that is, empty flights on the way to a VIP pickup, cost "at least $28.2 million and (consume) 10.9 million gallons of aviation fuel per year," the IG estimates.

— Helicopters are routinely used by the brass where cars would do the job more cheaply. The Army, for example, uses choppers to transport bigshots between Fort Monmouth and Lakehurst, N.J. — 32 miles apart. A car would cost $14; the helicopter ride costs $380.

HERNANDEZ MEDDLING: John Hernandez, who got in hot water as acting head of the Environmental Protection Agency for having let Dow Chemical rewrite an EPA report, apparently feels turnabout is fair play. In an internal memo, he asked an EPA official to rewrite a policy statement prepared by the American Society of Civil Engineers, a private organization.

"Please review and mark-up this copy or send me an alternative policy statement," Hernandez ordered. He objected to "stands that have political overtones."

The statements that bothered Hernandez recommended that "use of radioactive materials be avoided" in construction materials, and that the government announce a "firm program" for development of nuclear waste burial sites.

PRIVATE ARMIES: An ominous arms buildup — other than the Kremlin's — is causing concern in Washington. Arsenals of deadly weapons are being acquired by private armies associated with the so-called "survivalist" movement. While individual survivalists simply want to bring their families through a disaster alive, the paramilitary groups are stockpiling machine guns, anti-tank cannons, rocket launchers and even anti-aircraft artillery. There are more than three dozen known paramilitary groups and an estimated 20,000 members.

WATCH ON WASTE: It looks as if the vice-presidential mansion on Embassy Row will get more than a housecleaning this spring. Vice President Bush has asked Congress for $39,000 to upgrade the kitchen. The third-floor bathroom has already been refurbished at a cost of $12,000, and the roof on the Victorian veranda has undergone a $37,000 repair job.

CHARLEY REESE

April Fool's reaction appropriate

The day after April Fool's Day marks the first anniversary of the Argentine invasion of the Malvinas (Falklands). Appropriately so for the United States reaction to that invasion may yet prove to have been one of the most foolish foreign policy blunders since World War II.

Charley Reese

The affair in which the Argentines re-possessed islands they considered properly theirs and then re-lost them to a British armada backed up by American logistical support was viewed by most Americans as comic opera.

Most Americans bought the British propaganda line that the Argentines were the villains. The residue of the Marxist smear campaign against the Argentine military which had put an end to a bloody terrorist nightmare aided the British effort. People were ready to believe the Argentine generals were a bunch of bully boys who had stamped out civil rights in Argentina and were engaging in a military adventure to take the people's minds off their misery.

Alas, the world is never so simple as leftwing propaganda would have you believe. The Argentine armed forces ended a modern reign of terror that threatened to destroy their country. In that fight, the terrorists, not the generals, were the totalitarians.

Argentina can make a valid case for the Malvinas. They were part of Argentina until the British Navy simply took them by force as the British Navy was fond of doing in the 19th century. For 15 years, the Argentines has sought through diplomacy and negotiations the peaceful return of its property.

According to an Argentine source, the military action was taken only when it was learned that the British intended to stage an election in which the 1,800 residents (most of whom work for one or two corporations) would vote for "independence." Of course, Great Britain would guarantee their "independence" and then, according to the Argentines, lease some of the islands for a U.S. Navy base. The Argentines knew that once this charade took place, they would never have a chance to recover the islands.

Interesting but largely overlooked at the time, the so-called blood-thirsty generals carefully planned the invasion so as to not take the life of a single resident or British soldier. That hardly jibes with the image of them being ruthless.

What the action exposed was Western hypocrisy. The Europeans who did nothing when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan imposed sanctions on Argentina. The United States which is a signer and in fact the instigator of the Treaty of Rio which calls for collective defense against an extra-continental aggressor turned its back on Latin America and sided with the British bankers.

If the Argentine source is correct about plans to lease facilities for a base, chances are even when we pretended to be a mediator, we were in fact acting on behalf of the British.

The impact of this will be felt for a generation in Latin America. We sent them a clear message: as far as Anglo-American interests are concerned, you just aren't important.

The blunder is that Latin America is important, far more important to the United States than Great Britain which shortly afterwards was denouncing us for opposing, even temporarily, its plans to help the Soviet Union build a natural gas pipeline with slave labor.

For those with clear vision, NATO is a relic of the past. The Europeans have no stomach for confronting the Soviet Union. They are too close, too old, too tired, too cynical, too greedy. The enormous difficulty Great Britain had with a small Argentine force shows you what a fifth-rate power she has become. Libya has more tanks in its inventory than Great Britain.

The future is in our own backyard. Brazil is on the verge of becoming a world power. Argentina and Chile have enormous potential. A truly strong alliance between North and South America would be a powerful bastion of freedom.

But we are still dominated by the New York-London axis of financial interests that have shaped American foreign policy for most of this century. It's history is neither particularly intelligent nor moral.

The Argentine position on the Malvinas was just and the national interest of the United States lies clearly with developing strong ties to Latin America, not with propping up the dreams of elderly colonialists.

While it's true that people who don't learn from the past often have to repeat it, it's also true that people who live in the past get run over by the future.

LETTERS

Actions can control rights

To The Editor:

In regards to the letter written by Lisa Wilkes as a third party concerning garnishment of wages to ensure child support, it is very obvious that she is a third party.

She claims to have the right for her husband's only commitment in life, regardless of previous children he has sired. If the biological father chooses to relinquish all parental rights, including his last name (i.e., letting a stepfather legally adopt his previous children) fine, don't ask for any child support. But as long as he wants to claim them as his by last name, then he is responsible for helping to support them.

I think Mrs. Wilkes would be quite surprised at the number of men who choose to never marry again, go out of the United States to work, make fantastic salaries, won't pay their child support, but still feel they have the right to claim their children. In so doing, they are being very selfish to a responsible, loving, stepfather who is solely supporting and raising the child.

She cannot say the money is never used on the children. This may be true sometimes, but I know from personal experience this is a very incorrect statement.

Fathers have as many rights as mothers if they would just act as responsible adults and parents. I would like to hear what her opinion would be should she suddenly find herself divorced and with a son to raise.

Pass a law!

To The Editor:

Just saw on the CBS news where the state legislature of Utah was considering a law to limit the size of the Great Salt Lake.

Since it was reported that there is no inlet or outlet to the lake, and its size is entirely dependent upon rainfall and evaporation, think what a bonanza that opens up for lawmakers everywhere!

In Sacramento, they could pass legislation to limit the amount of rainfall and size of the waves that hit the California coast.

Ski resort owners and dry land farmers could lobby for specific amounts of precipitation, when and where they want it. Electrical storms could be outlawed in forested areas during extremely dry periods.

The National Weather Service could get into the act by asking Congress to forbid tornados, hurricanes, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, floods, and droughts. That alone would eliminate the need for dozens of agencies, especially the EPA since those disasters make such a mess of the environment. I've wondered for years when some "bright," new, eager congressman might introduce a bill to repeal the law of gravity. Looks as though the Utah Legislature may have taken the first step in that direction.

Rabid Reese

To The Editor:

The vitriolic attacks of Mr. Charley Reese have attained a new zenith in his recent tirade against the show M*A*S*H.

It is not surprising that Reese spewed forth his venom in that direction since he has never concealed his contempt for the ideals expressed in that series — respect for humanity and abhorrence of wanton slaughter, regardless of political convictions. He routinely airs his scorn and disdain for those who would extend compassion to those of differing ideologies. However, his remarks about Alan Alda's lack of talent are indeed ludicrous, considering his pathetic efforts at self expression displayed in this newspaper.

Perhaps Reese admires the zeal for war and loathing of the enemy manifested in the actions of Klaus Barbie and others of his ilk. Charley Reese in no way merits a forum for his dogmatic and rabid rantings in any newspaper.

Spring thaw not expected to change Afghani climate

By JAMES W. HATTON
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India — The spring thaw has reached Afghanistan and a new fighting season is beginning with little change foreseen in the stalemated struggle between the Soviet-propped regime and anti-government rebels.

Perez de Cuellar

U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar said Tuesday in Moscow he had received encouragement and support from Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov for United Nations mediation of the Afghan situation.

But the Soviet Union, which intervened in Afghanistan in December 1979, has rejected several past U.N. demands to remove its estimated 105,000 troops from the rugged central Asian nation, saying the troops were invited by the pro-Moscow government in the capital of Kabul.

A Western diplomat in New Delhi reported that Afghan insurgents put pressure on the capital this winter for the first time, curtailing electricity and food distribution.

The rebels also staged political assassinations, bombed restaurants frequented by Communist Party members and attacked a Soviet housing complex and military facility, said the diplomat, who asked not to be identified.

Although the insurgents' efforts failed to drive out the Soviet troops, a scorched earth policy used by the Soviets to deprive the rebels of food, shelter and public support also had little effect, the diplomat said.

However, the rebels were forced to relocate some of their bases after intensive Soviet and Afghan attacks on the Shomali and Panjsher Valley areas north of Kabul, the diplomat said.

The regime does not have the forces to hold the rugged countryside, however, and the rebels returned when the troops withdrew. They "remain a viable force" in these areas, the report said.

Despite major efforts, President Babrak Karmal's regime was unable to rebuild the Afghan army, reduced by desertions and defections from about 85,000 troops in 1979 to an estimated 30,000 men at present, according to the diplomat.

Forced conscriptions, induction of men in their 50s and the refusal to let male high school graduates take college entrance exams underscored the seriousness of the situation, said the diplomat, whose reports on Afghanistan have been highly accurate in the past and reflect a consensus of several Western diplomats.

Politically, the Karmal regime "is stable at the top but has been unable because of the war and its own fractiousness to expand its its base of support," the diplomat's report said.

"There is no prospect that the regime will gain legitimacy by winning a significant portion of the population. Only further alienation can result...."

Several factors favor the long term "sovietization" of Afghanistan, the report said.

Afghanistan's economy is slowly being reoriented toward the Soviet bloc and away from the West. The continuing exodus of refugees — estimated at about a quarter of the population — to Pakistan and Iran means fewer people to control. A decrease in agricultural production makes it more dependent on Soviet aid. Also, more and more Afghan students are being trained in the Soviet Union.

However, these gains "are likely to be eclipsed in 1983 by Soviet and Afghan inability to gain the support of any substantial fraction of the Afghan population and the difficulties of countering the challenges posed during the winter to the security of Kabul."

"At the end of the winter, the (Kabul) regime's legitimacy, the sovietization of Kabul and the Soviet mastery over the Afghan people must still be considered very long term propositions indeed," the analysis said.

It was impossible to confirm the diplomat's report because most Western journalists are barred from Afghanistan. However, the trends reported and predictions made were consistent with information currently available from refugees arriving in India from Afghanistan.

Perez de Cuellar, before leaving Moscow on Tuesday, told reporters he could not elaborate on his reasons for optimism regarding a settlement of the Afghanistan crisis.

He said Andropov showed "real interest in helping my efforts" but had not offered immediate withdrawal of Soviet troops.

Habib carrying Lebanese rejection to Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib planned to travel to Tel Aviv today with a Lebanese rejection of the latest security arrangements sought by Israel in exchange for a troop withdrawal agreement, Lebanon's state radio reported.

The radio and the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar said Habib plans to go from Israel to the United States on Thursday and return to the Middle East next week for a new attempt at breaking the deadlock.

The news reports said President Amin Gemayel and other Lebanese leaders who met Habib in the last two days told him israel's security demands were totally unacceptable.

Lebanese elder statesman Saeb Salam told reporters Tuesday he was pessimistic about negotiations aimed at getting Israeli forces to withdraw.

Congressmen meet prisoners

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Two visiting U.S. congressmen met with Salvadoran political prisoners and also said they want Congress to hear testimony an alleged massacre by government troops.

James Oberstar, D-Minn., visited the Ilopango Women's prison east of San Salavdor on Tuesday and Bill Richardson, D-N.M., went to Mariona prison north of the capital.

Among the inmates at the two institutions are 726 political prisoners, many of them arrested under a state of siege law, Decree 507, that allows authorities to jail people for up to 180 days without formal charges.

"We are going to tell our colleagues in the Congress that Decree 507 gives rise to a gross violation of human rights," Oberstar said. "We will urge the Salvadoran government to take steps to repeal this law."

Richardson said he and Oberstar would take Adrian Esquina, leader of a cooperative in Sonsonate province that was raided by security forces Feb. 22, to Washington to testify to a congressional committee.

Esquina said Tuesday that 74 people were killed in the raid, seven of them from the cooperative.

"We want to make sure that justice is done," Richardson said. "The atrocities we have heard of just go beyond the pale. How many mulitated bodies do you have to see? How many Sonsanates?"

At Marinoa, a spokesman for the prisoners told Richardson that 379 of the 645 political prisoners there have been held for more than six months without charges.

Some prisoners told Richardson they were tortured by security forces.

Nelson Ulises Acosta, a 23-year-old former student, said he was brutally beaten.

"They accused me of terrorism, but it is not true," Acosta said. "They smashed my bladder and pancreas and in the hospital they operated on me to remove my intestines."

Rural area expansion expected to continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural areas are losing the cost advantages that attracted industry from the cities in the 1970s, a Census Bureau expert says.

It's a trend that could hurt competition with foreign manufacturers, said Larry H. Long of the bureau's Center for Demographic Studies.

He also predicted that the population losses plaguing older cities will continue, with the decline likely to spread to nearby suburbs.

Emigration like that from Northeastern and Midwestern central city areas could be experienced in some of the inner cities of the South and West, he added.

Long said he considers it likely that population growth will continue in rural areas and in smaller metropolitan areas.

His predictions were made in the study "Population Redistribution in the U.S.: Issues for the 1980s," published by the Population Reference Bureau, a private Washington-based study group.

Metropolitan areas lost people and jobs in the 1970s, with foreign competition taking some of the employment, he said. The ability of some firms to relocate to less costly rural areas helped preserve some employment, he said.

He noted that during the 1970s, manufacturing accounted for 24 percent of all new jobs in rural areas, compared to 16 percent in cities.

And in general rural employment increased slightly faster than urban, thanks to "lower taxes, lower wage rates, and generally lower costs of doing business in less urban settings."

"Some of these relative advantages of non-metropolitan areas have now been reduced or even eliminated and there is little basis for forecasting where jobs will be moving in the future," he said.

But, Long added, "only to the degree non-metropolitan America remains internationally competitive will it be able to maintain the level of job growth seen in the late 1970s."

"Surely some kind of equilibrium is reached as rural wages start to catch up with urban wages and various parts of the infrastructure and other expenditures tend to catch up," he said.

But "you never quite know where equilibrium is, it varies for different areas and different types of industries," Long said in an interivew.

He said likely future population losses in suburbs will occur because those areas developed as the post-World War II baby boom spurred families into new houses. When those children leave home, the suburbs lose population, leaving behind empty schools and aging parents.

A major issue during the 1980s will be prevention of decay in the suburbs like that in many center cities following population losses, Long commented.

He said declines are also spreading to the city centers of some Sun Belt communities, such as Atlanta.

Astronaut ailments will be private

MIAMI (AP) — The space agency has decided to keep private the queasy stomachs, headaches and nausea sometimes suffered by astronauts on space shuttle missions, The Miami Herald has reported.

Specific medical symptoms will now be considered "privileged information" between the astronauts and their doctors unless the mission itself is threatened, the paper said.

Harold Stall, director of public affairs at Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the policy was adopted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration because of growing concern about violating the Federal Privacy Act in the discussion of individual medical problems.

A series of complaints from astronauts led to the new policy, which will take effect with the launching of the space shuttle Challenger, scheduled to begin its maiden flight Monday, the Herald said.

"If you have a so-called private medical conference with a doctor, there are things you discuss that are private and should remain private as long as they don't affect" the operation, said astronaut Donald Peterson, a mission specialist on the upcoming flight.

"It's nobody else's business," Challenger commander Paul We[illegible]aid in January.

In the past, NASA has reported astronaut health problems and doctors have sometimes discussed in detail the number, nature and severity of individual reactions to what NASA calls "space adaption syndrome."

Craddick introduces seven bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Seven measures on a variety of topics have been introduced in the House of Representatives by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

The bills include:

House Bill 1474, to allow a physician practicing in a rural area (outside an incorporated town or within an incorporated city of under 2,500 population) to maintain a supply of "dangerous drugs" in his or her office without having to obtain a license under the Texas Pharmacy Act.

HB 1475, providing for counties to issue bonds to construct, equip or improve public libraries.

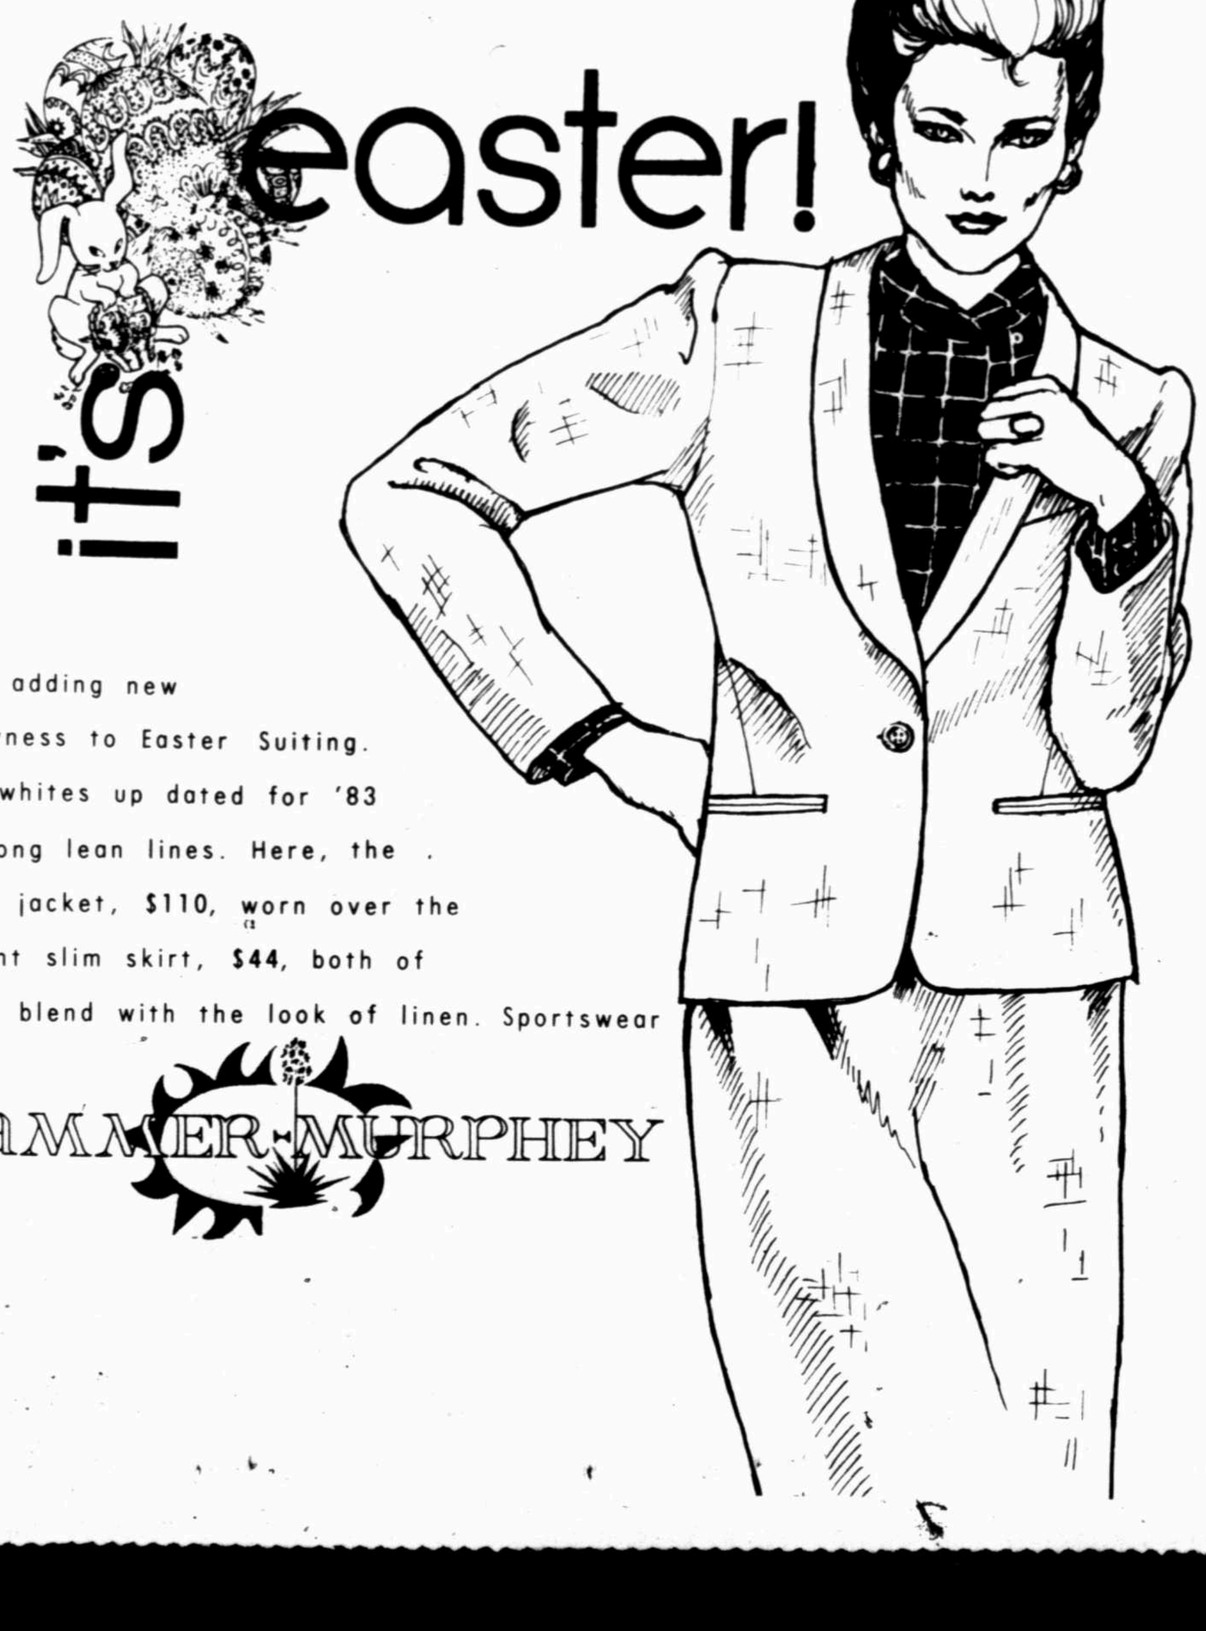

HB 1950, providing procedures for bidding for oil and gas leases on Permanent University Fund lands, by providing for public auction or sealed bid, or a combination, and for bidding to be determined by high bid or stipulated bonus and royalty.

—HB 1951, providing for appraisal of open-space land used for camping and hiking activities (subject to a constitutional amendment).

—HB 1952, exempting personal boats and aircraft, and recreational vehicles, from property taxes (subject to a constitutional amendment).

—HB 1953, changes in the Texas Litter Abatement Act and related statutes.

—HB 2194, setting out the power of the Texas Railroad Commission to review and approve, under the Outer Continental Shelf Land Act Amendments of 1978 and related Federal acts, applications for purchase of natural gas by public utilities subject to RRC jurisdiction.

Lee remains undefeated, beats Steers 12-6

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Midland Lee found the easiest way to get around strong Big Spring pitching Tuesday at Steer Park. Let starter 'Jinx' Valenzuela get ahead of the batters 0-2 and then sneak up on him. At least that's what worked in the sixth inning as the Rebels ran their District 4-5A record to 5-0 with a come-from-behind 12-6 victory for sole possession of the league lead.

It was the same scenario for the first three Rebels at the plate in the top of the sixth. Valenzuela picked up two quick strikes on each of the batters before letting them off the hook. For Steve Woodlee and Darrell Holmes the results were singles to right and right-center fields. For Rob Walker it was a walk to load the bases.

With nobody out, the bases loaded and the Steers up 6-3, Valenzuela, now 2-1 in 4-5A play, was in an unaccustomed position, he was losing control of the game and the Rebels hadn't even begun to make it rough.

Right fielder Dennis Matta narrowed the gap to 6-5 with a two-RBI double to right field and one out later second baseman Ted Leps laid down a sacrifice bunt that scored Walker and tied the game at 6-6. Before the inning would end, Matta and Serio Ochoa would each cross home plate, giving Lee an 8-6 lead and eventually the win.

"I left him (Valenzuela) in because he was still throwing well, his arm was still feeling good," said Big Spring Coach Frank Abarra. "His problem was he gave up bad pitches on 0-2 counts. He could have put them away, he's capable of doing it. He gave them too good a pitch to hit and that was his downfall."

WHEN THE sixth inning finally came to a conclusion, Valenzuela was given one more chance to stay in the game. Things didn't get any better. Walker led off with a single to left field that knocked him off the mound in favor of Adam Rodriquez, a reliever who fared no better.

With the new pitcher and one runner on the base paths, Lee coach Ernie Johnson elected to go for a bunt. Matta laid one down, moving Walker to second and Mike Mercurio brought him home with a double to left. Leps added a single to left and Ochoa added the game's final runs with a towering home run over the center field fence for a 12-6 lead.

"That's the first one in my life," said the Lee catcher about his three RBI round-tripper that clinched the victory. "That was a meat ball. He threw me a curve the first time and I was waiting for another one. He threw me a high fastball instead. I knew it was out as soon as I hit it."

Ochoa, who was only 3-for-14 for a .214 average coming into the game, led the Lee offensive charge with a 3-for-4 performance for three runs and four RBI. His first hit of the game, a single to left in the first inning, set up the game's first heroics when shortstop Barry Blackwell cleared the right field fence with his second league home run for a 2-0 lead.

Woodlee and Holmes also fared well at the plate, each going 2-for-4. For the day as Lee connected for 12 base hits.

"We chinked around before we finally hit two or three pretty hard," said Johnson.

DEFENSIVELY, LEE'S pitching was a strong factor in the victory as starter John Denton and reliever Kerry Robertson teamed up for 14 strikeouts in an eight-hit performance. The only worrisome factor was their occasional control problems which led to nine total walks and two wild pitches by Denton.

"I walked too many people," said Denton. "That's what got us in trouble really. I'd walk a couple and they'd get a big hit. I was pretty consistant at walking people. It was still a good come back. We did that quite a bit in the early partof the season. This was probably the best we've been prepared for a game, we knew what it meant."

Despite the walks, Abarra had some praise for the Lee staff. "I thought Lee's pitching was very good," he said. "We had people in scoring position and they were doing a good job in getting us out, mainly through strikeouts. There pitching was good, ours wasn't."

Denton displayed what Abarra was talking about in the second inning after loading the bases with none out and striking out the next three batters on 11 pitches to end the inning.

SINCE 4-5A play began, the Rebels have relied heavily on the bat of Blackwell. In 11 official at bats, the senior shortstop was working at a .727 click, mostly for extra bases (three doubles, a triple and home run) and he seemed to be on his way to another stellar performance with his home run in the first inning.

However, in the top of the third, Blackwell, the team captain, was called out on strikes, a call he didn't agree with. His comments to the home plate umpire were taken badly and he was ejected from the game.

The loss of their captain didn't stop the Rebels.

"I think we played great," said Ochoa. "After Barry got kicked out, he's the team captain, we didn't think we could come back, but we made it."

"It was a good come back," said Denton. "We did that quite a bit in the early part of the season. It was probably the best we've been prepared for a game this year. We knew what it meant."

"The best thing we did in this game is get ready to play and accept the challenge when we got here," said Johnson. "It was a heck of a team effort. It was too bad about Barry losing his composure but the dugout was working hard, helping each other. I'm really proud of that. We found some maturity we didn't have in the past."

Bulldogs' bats silenced again

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's crippled and punchless Bulldogs suffered the indignation of a third District 4-5A shutout at the Memorial Stadium diamond Tuesday in a 5-0, two-hit loss to San Angelo.

The loss was also Midland High's fourth straight district setback, leaving the Purple Pack with a plum-colored 1-4 district mark to go with an 8-10 season record.

San Angelo's Jim Osborn was the pitcher fortunate enough to face the Bulldogs Tuesday, and even though he walked six batters and KOed only two on strikes, MHS could get only seven balls out of the infield, including the only two hits they got off Osborn.

The Bulldog attack consisted of hitting the ball back to Osborn (five times) or flying harmlessly to right field (four times).

Defensively, the Bulldogs were not much better. The Pack committed five errors, leading directly to three unearned runs. Three errors by MHS shortstop Chris Herbert led to three San Angelo runs.

But the goat tag should be placed lightly on Herbert, who has not played shortstop this year.

"I knew we were in trouble going into the game because we had so many people playing out of position," said MHS coach Tim Whalen. "We found out Mike Foulds, our right fielder, is out with a broken foot and we had to use Allen Foret there. Our shortstop Doug Daelhing couldn't play because he was sick, and Tim Davis, of course, is out for the year.

"But I was still disappointed that we didn't hit the ball. I've tried everything, but the kids are to the point now where they are afraid they are going to make a mistake and being tenative, they do."

San Angelo jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning when Augie Alcala doubled and scored on Zan Hoppe's single to center. Scott Bingham singled, Henry Klepac was hit by a pitch and Herbert later made a two-run error at short.

"We're only one game out of second place now and we've won three in a row," said San Angelo coach Rex Schofield after his team climbed to 3-2 in district. "In all three of our district wins, we have scored in the first inning."

That was the only real rough inning for loser Jose Carrasco, who gave up only two earned runs while striking out 10 batters and walking only one. He deserved a better fate.

The Bobcats got an unearned run in the third when Klepac scored on another Herbert error and scored again in the fourth when No. 9 hitter Melvin Stewart singled and later scored from third on a sacrifice fly by Hoppe.

Carrasco got Midland's first hit, a double past third, in the third, but two runners were left stranded. Herbert got a single off Osborn with two out in the ninth and that was the attack.

"I was really mad when he (Herbert) got that single. I was thinking about the one-hitter and I almost had it. This is the first shutout I've ever pitched in high school ball," Osborn said.

MHS has little time to lick the wounds since they travel to Abilene High Thursday for a 4 p.m. game with the Eagles. Both teams are 1-4 and this will be a battle for the league cellar.

Lee stands alone atop district race

Odessa Permian came up with its first District 4-5A victory Tuesday by defeating Abilene Cooper on the Panther home field.

Scoring one run in each of the first three innings, the Panthers jumped out to a 3-1 lead before Cooper came alive to tie the game at 5-5 after six innings.

Permian scored the winner in the bottom of the frame and held on in the seventh to claim their first 4-5A victory.

The loss left Permian tied with Midland High and Abilene High for last place in the district race with 1-4 records.

Midland Lee (5-0) leads the pack with a one-game advantage over defending champion Big Spring (4-1).

Craig Steen went the distance to record Mojo's initial victory.

Mike Hood, one of three Cooper pitchers, took the loss.

Odessa High scored first, last and only in a 5-0 shut out over Abilene High.

The Broncos got two runs in the first inning and three more in the seventh off loser Jim Bourland.

Tommy Olivas gave up only three hits, all singles, as he took the win in going the distance against the Eagles.

The Quotebook...

"I have always put the game before anything else, before my religion, before my wife, before my kids, before money." — American golfer Lee Trevino, who has earned $2.5 million in his career and is looking to win the British Open.

Did You Know?...

In 1966 Texas Western College, now the University of Texas at El Paso, became the first and only Texas school to win the NCAA national basketball championship.

The Don Haskins coached Miners beat Adolph Rupp's Wildcats 72-65 in the finals.

Both teams won their first 23 games of the season before losing their final regularly scheduled game 14 days prior to the March 19 NCAA final.

One of the players on the championship team was "Wee" Willie Worsley, a 5-foot-6 guard who could dunk a basketball.

Familiar faces may haunt DePaul

NEW YORK (AP) — One thing's for sure tonight in the finals of the 46th National Invitation Tournament: DePaul basketball Coach Ray Meyer won't have to look at the scorecard to tell the Fresno State players.

A lot of them are from the Chicago area — DePaul's hometown.

"I know their players," said Meyer. "I used to see them playing in our gym. I tried to recruit some of them, too. We were outrecruited. I just hope we're not outplayed."

Among those players Meyer referred to were Ron Anderson, Tyrone Bradley, Marvin Carter and Charlie Smith, all from Illinois. Anderson was one of the big guns in Fresno State's 86-62 victory over Wake Forest in Monday night's semifinals, while Bradley had 12 assists.

The Bulldogs' surprisingly easy victory over a solid Wake Forest team raised some eyebrows at Madison Square Garden, particularly those of Joey Meyers, the head coach's son and assistant coach.

"Fresno State is one heck of a team. They could be in the NCAAs," said Joey Meyer. "They play dynamite. They play man-to-man like Nebraska but they also play a matchup zone with the same kind of pressure. They're unbelievable defensively."

What must DePaul do to beat a team that boasts the nation's leading defense?

"We've got to do a better job meeting the ball," said Joey Meyer, perhaps thinking about DePaul's uneasy 68-58 victory over Nebraska in the semis. "I think we can hurt them with penetration. We got a little more size inside than they do."

Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant makes no secret about his game plan tonight. He said his team plans to attack the Blue Demons the same way it did Wake Forest, against whom the Bulldogs built a 38-24 halftime margin.

"We're going to strike quickly, roll up a big lead and then let them try to come back at us," he said.

Fresno State left a stunned Wake Forest team in its wake. The Deacons, who averaged 80 points a game this season, agreed that they didn't see that kind of defense played in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season.

"We work on defense; we stress it in practice. We have our own defensive coach," said Grant, whose team has been called the Princeton of the West because of its deliberate, defensive approach. "We feel if we play with intensity and deny (them the ball), we'll be all right."

For Grant and Fresno State, this is their first time in the NIT. But for Ray Meyer and DePaul, it's a different story. The venerable Meyer was coaching DePaul with George Mikan when the Blue Demons won the NIT championship in 1945.

"I myself was always in awe of Ray Meyer," Grant said. "I'm like a kid in the game compared to him. I look up to him as one of the game's greatest coaches."

Meyer said it's taken him a long time to learn how to enjoy coaching.

"It's a lot easier today," he noted. "I've mellowed a lot through the years. I remember walking the streets at night — walking, walking, walking — after we lost. I used to walk all over the city. It was my livelihood, but it wasn't that important to the players because it wasn't their livelihood. Now I realize if I lose, they're not going to fire me."

Miami overtakes Texas

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Miami of Florida, the defending national champions, took over the No. 1 ranking Tuesday from Texas in the semi-monthly ratings by the newspaper, Collegiate Baseball.

Miami has won 27 of its last 29 en route to a 38-8 record. Texas, now 32-7, dropped three of its last 14.

For the first time in years, perennial power Arizona State dropped out of the top 20. The Sun Devils, ranked No. 1 earlier in the season, have lost 11 of their last 15 and now are 23-11.

Rounding out the top 10 are Houston (29-2), Stanford (19-5-1), Nebraska (20-0), Wichita State (22-8), Tulane (22-4), Oklahoma State (16-6), Cal State-Fullerton (22-9-1) and Fresno State (19-8).

Olajuwon inspired by phone call

HOUSTON (AP) — Seven-foot Houston center Akeem Olajuwon gets his agility from playing soccer. His dashes up and down a basketball court come from his desire to do two things with the ball — dunk it or block it.

Olajuwon was a high-speed shuttle in last week's NCAA Midwest Regional title game against Villanova, spending much of his time above the rim on both ends of the court.

Was it a pregame call from off-season buddy Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers that fired him up?

No, says Olajuwon, who reduced the matter to its simplest form.

"I love to dunk the ball and block the ball and to do both I have to run very fast," said Olajuwon, who now becomes the problem of No.2-ranked Louisville in Saturday's semifinals of the NCAA championship tournament. "That's just the way I like to play."

Olajuwon admitted he did benefit from Malone's call.

"He just told me it depends on me," Olajuwon said. "He said if I play hard every minute of the game, the Cougars will win it all."

Whatever the impetus, Olajuwon hit 10 of 11 shots; scored 20 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked eight shots in the 89-71 victory over Villanova, his best performance of the season.

Olajuwon has emerged as one of the top power centers in the nation with only four years of basketball experience. Much of that time he was playing under international rules in his native Nigeria.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said Olajuwon's early knowledge of the game was "Give me the ball."

Olajuwon still will occasionally entertain teammates with a few soccer maneuvers, deftly juggling a basketball using his feet. But he's far more awesome using his hands for a slam dunk.

"He's got great foot movement," Lewis said. "His foot movement is a credit to his soccer and he is the best I've had since Elvin Hayes at moving laterally."

Rural area expansion expected to continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rural areas are losing the cost advantages that attracted industry from the cities in the 1970s, a Census Bureau expert says.

It's a trend that could hurt competition with foreign manufacturers, said Larry H. Long of the bureau's Center for Demographic Studies.

He also predicted that the population losses plaguing older cities will continue, with the decline likely to spread to nearby suburbs.

Emigration like that from Northeastern and Midwestern central city areas could be experienced in some of the inner cities of the South and West, he added.

Long said he considers it likely that population growth will continue in rural areas and in smaller metropolitan areas.

His predictions were made in the study "Population Redistribution in the U.S.: Issues for the 1980s," published by the Population Reference Bureau, a private Washington-based study group.

Metropolitan areas lost people and jobs in the 1970s, with foreign competition taking some of the employment, he said. The ability of some firms to relocate to less costly rural areas helped preserve some employment, he said.

He noted that during the 1970s, manufacturing accounted for 24 percent of all new jobs in rural areas, compared to 16 percent in cities.

And in general rural employment increased slightly faster than urban, thanks to "lower taxes, lower wage rates, and generally lower costs of doing business in less urban settings."

"Some of these relative advantages of non-metropolitan areas have now been reduced or even eliminated and there is little basis for forecasting where jobs will be moving in the future," he said.

But, Long added, "only to the degree non-metropolitan America remains internationally competitive will it be able to maintain the level of job growth seen in the late 1970s."

"Surely some kind of equilibrium is reached as rural wages start to catch up with urban wages and various parts of the infrastructure and other expenditures tend to catch up," he said.

But "you never quite know where equilibrium is, it varies for different areas and different types of industries," Long said in an interivew.

He said likely future population losses in suburbs will occur because those areas developed as the post-World War II baby boom spurred families into new houses. When those children leave home, the suburbs lose population, leaving behind empty schools and aging parents.

A major issue during the 1980s will be prevention of decay in the suburbs like that in many center cities following population losses, Long commented.

He said declines are also spreading to the city centers of some Sun Belt communities, such as Atlanta.

Astronaut ailments will be private

MIAMI (AP) — The space agency has decided to keep private the queasy stomachs, headaches and nausea sometimes suffered by astronauts on space shuttle missions, The Miami Herald has reported.

Specific medical symptoms will now be considered "privileged information" between the astronauts and their doctors unless the mission itself is threatened, the paper said.

Harold Stall, director of public affairs at Johnson Space Center in Houston, said the policy was adopted by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration because of growing concern about violating the Federal Privacy Act in the discussion of individual medical problems.

A series of complaints from astronauts led to the new policy, which will take effect with the launching of the space shuttle Challenger, scheduled to begin its maiden flight Monday, the Herald said.

"If you have a so-called private medical conference with a doctor, there are things you discuss that are private and should remain private as long as they don't affect" the operation, said astronaut Donald Peterson, a mission specialist on the upcoming flight.

"It's nobody else's business," Challenger commander Paul Weitz said in January.

In the past, NASA has reported astronaut health problems and doctors have sometimes discussed in detail the number, nature and severity of individual reactions to what NASA calls "space adaption syndrome."

Craddick introduces seven bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Seven measures on a variety of topics have been introduced in the House of Representatives by Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland.

The bills include:

—House Bill 1474, to allow a physician practicing in a rural area (outside an incorporated town or within an incorporated city of under 2,500 population) to maintain a supply of "dangerous drugs" in his or her office without having to obtain a license under the Texas Pharmacy Act.

—HB 1475, providing for counties to issue bonds to construct, equip or improve public libraries.

—HB 1950, providing procedures for bidding for oil and gas leases on Permanent University Fund lands, by providing for public auction or sealed bid, or a combination; and for bidding to be determined by high bid or stipulated bonus and royalty.

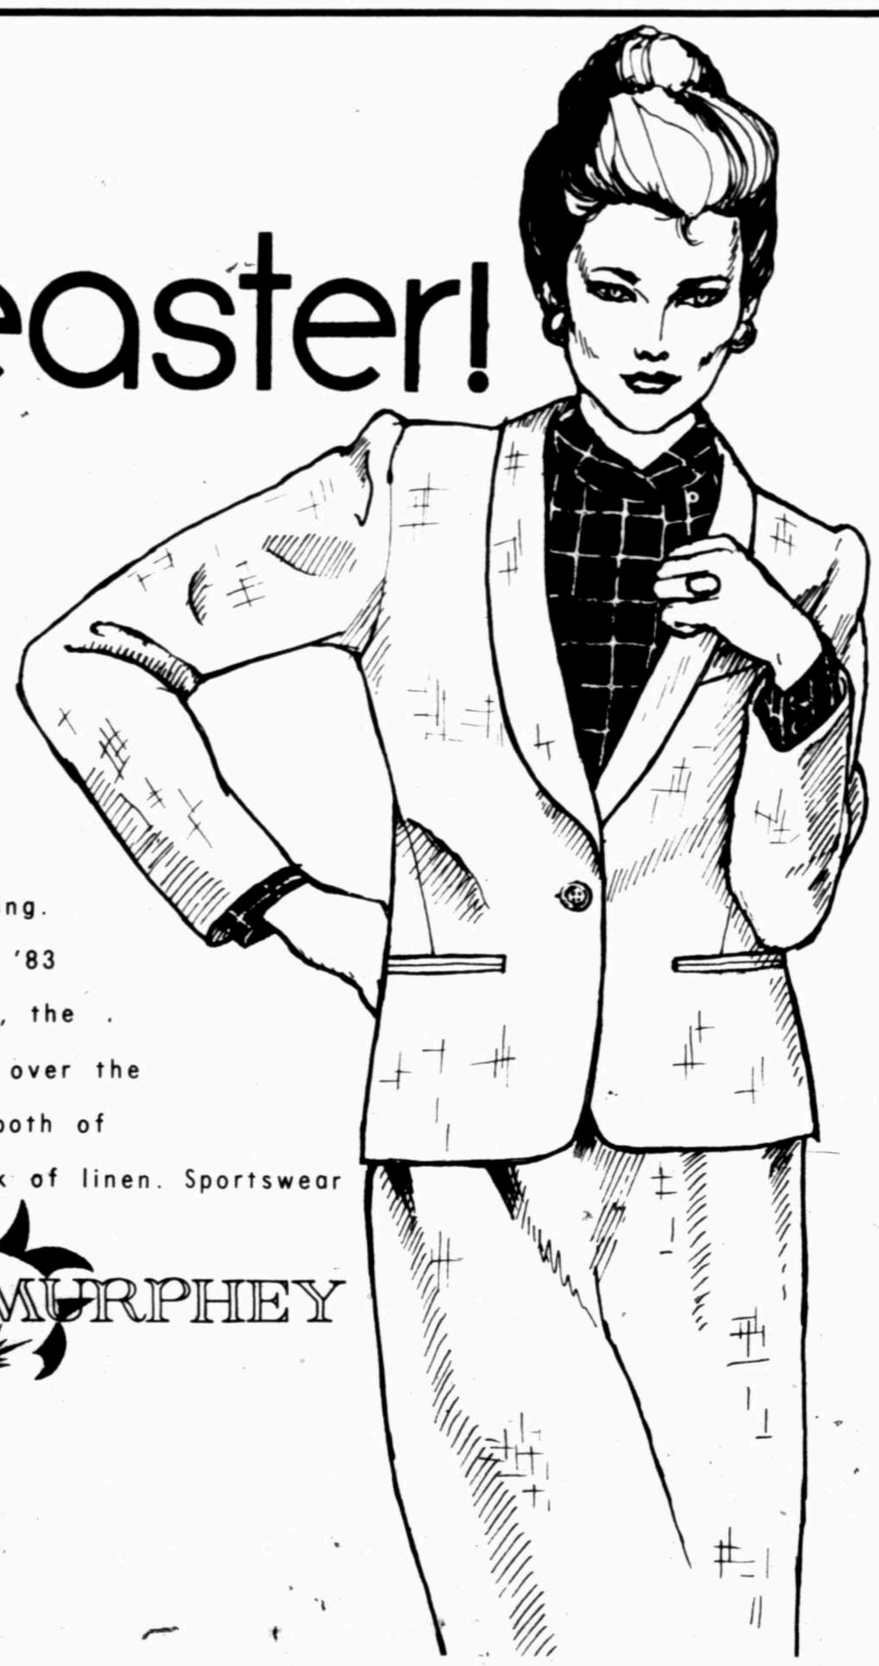

—HB 1951, providing for appraisal of open-space land used for camping and hiking activities (subject to a constitutional amendment).

—HB 1952, exempting personal boats and aircraft, and recreational vehicles, from property taxes (subject to a constitutional amendment).

—HB 1953, changes in the Texas Litter Abatement Act and related statutes.

—HB 2194, setting out the power of the Texas Railroad Commission to review and approve, under the Outer Continental Shelf Land Act Amendments of 1978 and related Federal acts, applications for purchase of natural gas by public utilities subject to RRC jurisdiction.

Lee remains undefeated, beats Steers 12-6

By ROBERT BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Midland Lee found the easiest way to get around strong Big Spring pitching Tuesday at Steer Park. Let starter 'Jinx' Valenzuela get ahead of the batters O-2 and then sneak up on him. At least that's what worked in the sixth inning as the Rebels ran their District 4-5A record to 5-0 with a come-from-behind 12-6 victory for sole possession of the league lead.

It was the same scenario for the first three Rebels at the plate in the top of the sixth. Valenzuela picked up two quick strikes on each of the batters before letting them off the hook. For Steve Woodlee and Darrell Holmes the results were singles to right and right-center fields. For Rob Walker it was a walk to load the bases.

With nobody out, the bases loaded and the Steers up 6-3, Valenzuela, now 2-1 in 4-5A play, was in an unaccustomed position, he was losing control of the game and the Rebels hadn't even begun to make it rough.

Right fielder Dennis Matta narrowed the gap to 6-5 with a two-RBI double to right field and one out later second baseman Ted Leps laid down a sacrifice bunt that scored Walker and tied the game at 6-6. Before the inning would end, Matta and Serio Ochoa would each cross home plate, giving Lee an 8-6 lead and eventually the win.

"I left him (Valenzuela) in because he was still throwing well, his arm was still feeling good," said Big Spring Coach Frank Abarra. "His problem was he gave up bad pitches on 0-2 counts. He could have put them away, he's capable of doing it. He gave them too good a pitch to hit and that was his downfall."

WHEN THE sixth inning finally came to a conclusion, Valenzuela was given one more chance to stay in the game. Things didn't get any better. Walker led off with a single to left field that knocked him off the mound in favor of Adam Rodriquez, a reliever who fared no better.

With the new pitcher and one runner on the base paths, Lee coach Ernie Johnson elected to go for a bunt. Matta laid one down, moving Walker to second and Mike Mercurio brought him home with a double to left. Leps added a single to left and Ochoa added the game's final runs with a towering home run over the center field fence for a 12-6 lead.

"That's the first one in my life," said the Lee catcher about his three RBI round-tripper that clinched the victory. "That was a meat ball. He threw me a curve the first time and I was waiting for another one. He threw me a high fastball instead. I knew it was out as soon as I hit it."

Ochoa, who was only 3-for-14 for a .214 average coming into the game, led the Lee offensive charge with a 3-for-4 performance for three runs and four RBI. His first hit of the game, a single to left in the first inning, set up the game's first heroics when shortstop Barry Blackwell cleared the right field fence with his second league home run for a 2-0 lead.

Woodlee and Holmes also fared well at the plate, each going 2-for-4. For the day as Lee connected for 12 base hits.

"We chinked around before we finally hit two or three pretty hard," said Johnson.

DEFENSIVELY, LEE'S pitching was a strong factor in the victory as starter John Denton and reliever Kerry Robertson teamed up for 14 strikeouts in an eight-hit performance. The only worrisome factor was their occasional control problems which led to nine total walks and two wild pitches by Denton.

"I walked too many people," said Denton. "That's what got us in trouble really. I'd walk a couple and they'd get a big hit. I was pretty consistant at walking people. It was still a good come back. We did that quite a bit in the early partof the season. This was probably the best we've been prepared for a game, we knew what it meant."

Despite the walks, Abarra had some praise for the Lee staff. "I thought Lee's pitching was very good," he said. "We had people in scoring position and they were doing a good job in getting us out, mainly through strikeouts. There pitching was good, ours wasn't."

Denton displayed what Abarra was talking about in the second inning after loading the bases with none out and striking out the next three batters on 11 pitches to end the inning.

SINCE 4-5A play began, the Rebels have relied heavily on the bat of Blackwell. In 11 official at bats, the senior shortstop was working at a .727 click, mostly for extra bases (three doubles, a triple and home run) and he seemed to be on his way to another stellar performance with his home run in the first inning.

However, in the top of the third, Blackwell, the team captain, was called out on strikes, a call he didn't agree with. His comments to the home plate umpire were taken badly and he was ejected from the game.

The loss of their captain didn't stop the Rebels.

"I think we played great," said Ochoa. "After Barry got kicked out, he's the team captain, we didn't think we could come back, but we made it."

"It was a good come back," said Denton. "We did that quite a bit in the early part of the season. It was probably the best we've been prepared for a game this year. We knew what it meant."

"The best thing we did in this game is get ready to play and accept the challenge when we got here," said Johnson. "It was a heck of a team effort. It was too bad about Barry losing his composure but the dugout was working hard, helping each other. I'm really proud of that. We found some maturity we didn't have in the past."

Bulldogs' bats silenced again

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland High's crippled and punchless Bulldogs suffered the indignation of a third District 4-5A shutout at the Memorial Stadium diamond Tuesday in a 5-0, two-hit loss to San Angelo.

The loss was also Midland High's fourth straight district setback, leaving the Purple Pack with a plum-colored 1-4 district mark to go with an 8-10 season record.

San Angelo's Jim Osborn was the pitcher fortunate enough to face the Bulldogs Tuesday, and even though he walked six batters and KOed only two on strikes, MHS could get only seven balls out of the infield, including the only two hits they got off Osborn.

The Bulldog attack consisted of hitting the ball back to Osborn (five times) or flying harmlessly to right field (four times.)

Defensively, the Bulldogs were not much better. The Pack committed five errors, leading directly to three unearned runs. Three errors by MHS shortstop Chris Herbert led to three San Angelo runs.

But the goat tag should be placed lightly on Herbert, who has not played shortstop this year.

"I knew we were in trouble going into the game because we had so many people playing out of position," said MHS coach Tim Whalen. "We found out Mike Foulds, our right fielder, is out with a broken foot and we had to use Allen Foret there. Our shortstop Doug Daelhing couldn't play because he was sick, and Tim Davis, of course, is out for the year.

"But I was still disappointed that we didn't hit the ball. I've tried everything, but the kids are to the point now where they are afraid they are going to make a mistake and being tenative, they do."

San Angelo jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning when Augie Alcala doubled and scored on Zan Hoppe's single to center. Scott Bingham singled, Henry Klepac was hit by a pitch and Herbert later made a two-run error at short.

"We're only one game out of second place now and we've won three in a row," said San Angelo coach Rex Schofield after his team climbed to 3-2 in district. "In all three of our district wins, we have scored in the first inning."

That was the only real rough inning for loser Jose Carrasco, who gave up only two earned runs while striking out 10 batters and walking only one. He deserved a better fate.

The Bobcats got an unearned run in the third when Klepac scored on another Herbert error and scored again in the fourth when No. 9 hitter Melvin Stewart singled and later scored from third on a sacrifice fly by Hoppe.

Carrasco got Midland's first hit, a double past third, in the third, but two runners were left stranded. Herbert got a single off Osborn with two out in the ninth and that was the attack.

"I was really mad when he (Herbert) got that single. I was thinking about the one-hitter and I almost had it. This is the first shutout I've ever pitched in high school ball," Osborn said.

MHS has little time to lick the wounds since they travel to Abilene High Thursday for a 4 p.m. game with the Eagles. Both teams are 1-4 and this will be a battle for the league cellar.

Lee stands alone atop district race

Odessa Permian came up with its first District 4-5A victory Tuesday by defeating Abilene Cooper on the Panther home field.

Scoring one run in each of the first three innings, the Panthers jumped out to a 3-1 lead before Cooper came alive to tie the game at 5-5 after six innings.

Permian scored the winner in the bottom of the frame and held on in the seventh to claim their first 4-5A victory.

The loss left Permian tied with Midland High and Abilene High for last place in the district race with 1-4 records.

Midland Lee (5-0) leads the pack with a one-game advantage over defending champion Big Spring (4-1).

Craig Steen went the distance to record Mojo's initial victory.

Mike Hood, one of three Cooper pitchers, took the loss.

Odessa High scored first, last and only in a 5-0 shut out over Abilene High.

The Broncos got two runs in the first inning and three more in the seventh off loser Jim Bourland.

Tommy Olivas gave up only three hits, all singles, as he took the win in going the distance against the Eagles.

"I have always put the game before anything else, before my religion, before my wife, before my kids, before money." — American golfer Lee Trevino, who has earned $2.5 million in his career and is looking to win the British Open.

Did You Know?...

In 1966 Texas Western College, now the University of Texas at El Paso, became the first and only Texas school to win the NCAA national basketball championship.

The Don Haskins coached Miners beat Adolph Rupp's Wildcats 72-65 in the finals.

Both teams won their first 23 games of the season before losing their final regularly scheduled game 14 days prior to the March 19 NCAA final.

One of the players on the championship team was "Wee" Willie Worsley, a 5-foot-6 guard who could dunk a basketball.

Familiar faces may haunt DePaul

NEW YORK (AP) — One thing's for sure tonight in the finals of the 46th National Invitation Tournament: DePaul basketball Coach Ray Meyer won't have to look at the scorecard to tell the Fresno State players.

A lot of them are from the Chicago area — DePaul's hometown.

"I know their players," said Meyer. "I used to see them playing in our gym. I tried to recruit some of them, too. We were outrecruited. I just hope we're not outplayed."

Among those players Meyer referred to were Ron Anderson, Tyrone Bradley, Marvin Carter and Charlie Smith, all from Illinois. Anderson was one of the big guns in Fresno State's 86-62 victory over Wake Forest in Monday night's semifinals, while Bradley had 12 assists.

The Bulldogs' surprisingly easy victory over a solid Wake Forest team raised some eyebrows at Madison Square Garden, particularly those of Joey Meyers, the head coach's son and assistant coach.

"Fresno State is one heck of a team. They could be in the NCAAs," said Joey Meyer. "They play dynamite. They play man-to-man like Nebraska but they also play a matchup zone with the same kind of pressure. They're unbelievable defensively."

What must DePaul do to beat a team that boasts the nation's leading defense?

"We've got to do a better job meeting the ball," said Joey Meyer, perhaps thinking about DePaul's uneasy 68-58 victory over Nebraska in the semis. "I think we can hurt them with penetration. We got a little more size inside than they do."

Fresno State Coach Boyd Grant makes no secret about his game plan tonight. He said his team plans to attack the Blue Demons the same way it did Wake Forest, against whom the Bulldogs built a 38-24 halftime margin.

"We're going to strike quickly, roll up a big lead and then let them try to come back at us," he said.

Fresno State left a stunned Wake Forest team in its wake. The Deacons, who averaged 80 points a game this season, agreed that they didn't see that kind of defense played in the Atlantic Coast Conference this season.

"We work on defense; we stress it in practice. We have our own defensive coach," said Grant, whose team has been called the Princeton of the West because of its deliberate, defensive approach. "We feel if we play with intensity and deny (them the ball), we'll be all right."

For Grant and Fresno State, this is their first time in the NIT. But for Ray Meyer and DePaul, it's a different story. The venerable Meyer was coaching DePaul with George Mikan when the Blue Demons won the NIT championship in 1945.

"I myself was always in awe of Ray Meyer," Grant said. "I'm like a kid in the game compared to him. I look up to him as one of the game's greatest coaches."

Meyer said it's taken him a long time to learn how to enjoy coaching.

"It's a lot easier today," he noted. "I've mellowed a lot through the years. I remember walking the streets at night — walking, walking, walking — after we lost. I used to walk all over the city. It was my livelihood, but it wasn't that important to the players because it wasn't their livelihood. Now I realize if I lose, they're not going to fire me."

Miami overtakes Texas

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Miami of Florida, the defending national champions, took over the No. 1 ranking Tuesday from Texas in the semi-monthly ratings by the newspaper, Collegiate Baseball.

Miami has won 27 of its last 29 en route to a 38-8 record. Texas, now 32-7, dropped three of its last 14.

For the first time in years, perennial power Arizona State dropped out of the top 20. The Sun Devils, ranked No. 1 earlier in the season, have lost 11 of their last 15 and now are 23-11.

Rounding out the top 10 are Houston (29-2), Stanford (19-5-1), Nebraska (20-0), Wichita State (22-8), Tulane (22-4), Oklahoma State (16-6), Cal State-Fullerton (22-9-1) and Fresno State (19-8).

Olajuwon inspired by phone call

HOUSTON (AP) — Seven-foot Houston center Akeem Olajuwon gets his agility from playing soccer. His dashes up and down a basketball court come from his desire to do two things with the ball — dunk it or block it.

Olajuwon was a high-speed shuttle in last week's NCAA Midwest Regional title game against Villanova, spending much of his time above the rim on both ends of the court.

Was it a pregame call from off-season buddy Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers that fired him up?

No, says Olajuwon, who reduced the matter to its simplest form.

"I love to dunk the ball and block the ball and to do both I have to run very fast," said Olajuwon, who now becomes the problem of No.2-ranked Louisville in Saturday's semifinals of the NCAA championship tournament. "That's just the way I like to play."

Olajuwon admitted he did benefit from Malone's call.

"He just told me it depends on me," Olajuwon said. "He said if I play hard every minute of the game, the Cougars will win it all."

Whatever the impetus, Olajuwon hit 10 of 11 shots, scored 20 points, grabbed 13 rebounds and blocked eight shots in the 89-71 victory over Villanova, his best performance of the season.

Olajuwon has emerged as one of the top power centers in the nation wth only four years of basketball experience. Much of that time he was playing under international rules in his native Nigeria.

Houston Coach Guy Lewis said Olajuwon's early knowledge of the game was "Give me the ball."

Olajuwon still will occasionally entertain teammates with a few soccer maneuvers, deftly juggling a basketball using his feet. But he's far more awesome using his hands for a slam dunk.

"He's got great foot movement," Lewis said. "His foot movement is a credit to his soccer and he is the best I've had since Elvin Hayes at moving laterally."

Waterfield was the best

This is a story I never wanted to write. But I knew I was going to have to.

Man and boy, Bob Waterfield was the best football player you or I ever saw. What could be done with a football, he could do – run, pass, kick, tackle, bat down, catch. He had gifts that were not given to the rest of us.

He came along in the gaudiest era that was Hollywood. The heroes of the time were strong silent types, laconic men of action, not words. He was part-Gary Cooper, part-John Wayne. As big as any of them. Gable-esque in his public image.

He put UCLA in the Rose Bowl for the first time ever. He got drafted by the Cleveland Rams, an aimless cast of characters on the banks of Lake Erie who had never had a .500 record and who had been in and out of the league, usually finishing 2-9 or 1-11. Waterfield put them in the title game (and beat Sammy Baugh for the championship, no less), and that was the last time a rookie quarterback has ever done that in pro football.

Waterfield married his high school sweetheart in the best traditions of Warner Bros. family movies and it seemed a marriage made, if not in heaven, at least on Sound Stage 2. It was hot boxoffice, and wife Jane Russell, as spectacularly endowed by nature as her husband, was soon put under contract by Howard Hughes. No pulp magazine love story could ever top this romance. It was America's version of the royal couple, a union to rival Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. America's Sweethearts.

The crusty Rams owner, Dan Reeves, Long Island grocery and stockmarket magnate, was encouraged to move his team to Los Angeles because of the presence of King Bob and Lady Jane in the cast. It was great billing for the act, wholesome family entertainment, everybody's dream couple.

The Rams prospered. The mystique of the Rams was born. They were the original "America's Team," one of the most famous aggregations of all time, like the 1927 Yankees or the 1930 Rockne Notre Dames.

Waterfield did everything for that team: punted, placekicked, quarterbacked, even played safety. Well. They began winning the division by 1949, the conference by 1950, and the championship of it all by 1951. The bands played, the banners waved, the wine flowed. The Waterfields were stars of stage, screen and radio – and gridiron.

No one ever called Bob "Mr. Jane Russell." I remember once when the Life photographer, Philipe Halsmann, was photographing Jane and he told her kiddingly, "Madam, you are too much woman for one man," and Jane cracked, "You should see my husband. He's King of the Beasts."

But when his playing days were over, Bob Waterfield became briefly a "producer" of his wife's film company. That was no part for the proud Waterfield and, in 1960, when the Rams beckoned, Bob Waterfield became their head coach.

It was almost the only thing the worrying owners could agree on at the time. Dan Reeves loved Bob Waterfield. So did the estranged owners who didn't love Dan Reeves, Ed Pauley and Fred Levy.

But no one was more miscast as a football coach than Bob Waterfield. Taciturn by nature, uncommunicative, absolutely intolerant of mistakes, his only psychological weapon was stony silence. That didn't help the Rams at all. They went from bad to terrible under Bob Waterfield – 4-7 to 4-10 to 1-12. Waterfield resigned in embarrassment. Stoic in victory, he seethed in defeat. And he resigned in midseason. No one ever had to tell Bob Waterfield when he was doing a bad job.

With a football in his hands, Bob Waterfield could always handle third-and-long-yardage. In life, third-and-long-yardage was not such a sure thing. Life sacked him. The marriage dissolved in a messy welter of counter-claims, mortifying to a man of Waterfield's sensitivities. He considered it a weakness to let signs of his private life leak out. The marriage ended in 1967. You didn't mention it to Waterfield. That was one of the many things you didn't talk about. There were other headlines. One of his adopted sons was involved in a cafe killing.

The music had stopped, and the pom-pons were put away for the old quarterback. You could find Waterfield in recent years in a small bar on Ventura Boulevard. In the morning. He was among friends who knew what Bob Waterfield was, he didn't have to tell them. Bob hated to have to tell anybody about himself. One morning, he turned to the author, Will Fowler, who knew who he was, all right. "You know," Waterfield told Fowler, "I could kick a football as far as any man who ever lived. Farther. I loved to kick footballs. I kicked one once 103 yards, did you know that?"

They got Bob Waterfield to a hospital about a year ago. He was right on the goal line at the time and the plays were breaking down. Waterf

Astros lose; Hall sparks Cubs

By The Associated Press

The Houston Astros received some bad news and some worse news.

First, they were informed Tuesday that hard-throwing Nolan Ryan, who is only 15 strikeouts away from Walter Johnson's all-time record, had been placed on the 21-day disabled list with an inflamed prostate.

Then, three Astros pitchers — Mike LaCoss, Frank LaCorte and rookie Julio Solano — gave up 16 hits, all singles, and 11 walks in a 12-5 exhibition loss to the Atlanta Braves. LaCoss allowed 11 of the hits and seven runs in five innings.

The 36-year-old Ryan, who will go into the season with 3,494 career strikeouts, had been scheduled to start Houston's home opener April 5 against Los Angeles. He joins on the disabled list first baseman Art Howe, who has tendinitis in his right elbow, team spokesman Mike Ryan said.

In the game, the Astros also committed five errors, three by third baseman Phil Garner, to add fuel to Atlanta's offense. Chris Chambliss had a pair of RBI singles for Atlanta, and Alan Ashby homered for Houston.

Dave Bergman and Johnny LeMaster had run-scoring singles to snap a 1-1 tie in the seventh inning and boost San Francisco over the Angels, but not before Giants Manager Frank Robinson had been ejected from the game in a vehement argument with homeplate umpire Mark Johnson. Robinson and Johnson argued over an interference call against Joel Youngblood on an attempted sacrifice bunt in the seventh, interrupting the game for 15 minutes and resulting in a threat by Johnson to call a forfeit.

Chili Davis homered for the Giants, and Brian Downing hit a homer for California, which saw an eight-game winning streak ended.

Willie Aikens drove in Kansas City's winning run in the ninth inning with a double. Aikens had two doubles and a sacrifice fly to drive in four runs. Kansas City led 7-0 after two innings against Expos starter Randy Lerch.

Umpire Joe West greats Orioles manager Loe Altobelli with open arms.

The Yankees shut out Los Angeles for the second consecutive day. This time, Shane Rawley, Dale Murray and Rich Gossage combined on the six-hitter, while the Yankees victimized Fernando Valenzuela for eight runs in the seventh inning. Don Baylor led the Yanks with a double and two singles.

Pittsburgh touched St. Louis relief ace Bruce Sutter for four hits and three runs in the eighth inning to beat the Cards. Dale Berra had two RBI, including one in the rally against Sutter.

Vance Law doubled home the tie-breaking run in the eighth inning and scored an insurance run for Toronto when rookie Scott Fletcher singled. Toronto scored its only run off Richard Dotson in the first on Jorge Orta's RBI single.

Mike Moore, Mike Stanton, Ed Vande Berg and Bill Caudill teamed on an eight-hitter as Seattle shut out Cleveland. Moore, a rookie right-hander, gave up seven of the hits in seven innings. Pat Putnam had three hits and drove in two runs for the Mariners.

Carney Lansford hit a two-run homer in the first inning to ignite a 17-hit Oakland attack against Milwaukee. Mike Heath's bases-loaded triple keyed the A's four-run third inning against Mike Caldwell.

Gary Gaetti homered twice, finishing with four hits and four RBI in Minnesota's win over Detroit. Kent Hrbek also homered.

Dan Driessen had three hits, including his first homer of the exhibition season, to lead Cincinnati over Boston. Eddie Milner tripled and scored in the first and doubled and scored in the third for the Reds.

Philadelphia rookie Tony Ghelfi held Baltimore scoreless for six innings. Ron Reed finished up the shutout for the Phillies and also drove in two runs in Philadelphia's three-run seventh inning.

In the only night game, Mel Hall started a four-run Cubs rally in the 10th inning with a tiebreaking, two-run double as Chicago outlasted San Diego. Terry Kennedy hit a solo homer in the first inning for the Padres.

Kite wins second Vardon Trophy

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Kite, who plays out of Green Tree Country Club in Midland, has received the Vardon Trophy for the lowest scoring average on the 1982 TPA tour.

It is the second time Kite has won the coveted award presented by the Metropolitan Golf Writers Association.

Former President Gerald R. Ford received the Gold Tee, the highest award of the MGW and Calvin Peete was honored as the tour's most improved player.

The Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews, where the game was born, received the Bing Crosby Tournament Sponsor Award, Brooklawn Country Club was named club of the year, Vincent Draddy received the Distinguished Service Award and the Lee Beards the Family of the Year.

Hu Na fears return to China

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Tennis star Hu Na, whose request for asylum has become a dispute between China and the United States, says she doesn't believe the claims of Chinese officials that she won't be punished if she returns to her homeland.

"I feel that if I went back, I might be sent to a place for labor reform or I might be subjected to house arrest. At the very least, I would not be able to play tennis, especially abroad," she said Monday night in a televised interview on the ABC-TV program "Nightline."

"I feel that not to be able to play tennis would be the end of my life," she added.

Chinese officials have pressured the United States to return the 19-year-old tennis player, rated China's top female athlete in 1981, and consular officials in San Francisco have promised that she will not be punished for her effort to flee to the West.

"They want to continue with the arrangements of sending her to international tournaments...So we don't see any possible danger of persecution if she returns to China," Yan Zongliang, a spokesman for the consulate, told the network.

"I don't believe what he said," Hu said when asked about the assurances. She has previously noted that other people have been punished for transgressions far less serious than hers.

Indiana's Billy Knight and Celtic Robert Parish fight for a rebound in Tueasday night's NBA game in Indianapolis.

Indiana outpaces Celtics 130-101

Philadelphia's loss puts record in jeopardy

By The Associated Press

Coach Bill Fitch has been agonizing with his Boston Celtics, but he hasn't come up with a pat answer yet for the team's skid.

"If it was that simple, I would have burned someone at the stake a long time ago," Fitch said Tuesday night after his team was blown away, 130-101, at Indianapolis.

The loss was the seventh in 11 games and 13th in 24 for the Celtics, who have slipped 11 games behind Philadelphia in the Atlantic Division of the NBA and only three ahead of New Jersey.

"We've just been struggling," Fitch said. "We haven't been physical enough all year. I can only remember one rebound out there tonight that was a physical one."

The victory was only the 19th for Indiana this year and just its fourth in 22 meetings with the Celtics. Clark Kellogg scored 29 points and had 10 rebounds for the Pacers, who ran off two scoring bursts, in the second and third quarters, to turn the game into a laugher.

Bulls 97, 76ers 95

Rod Higgins scored 25 points to pace Chicago in a game marred by a fight in the third quarter between the Bulls' Reggie Theus and Clemon Johnson of Philadelphia. The fight started quickly and without warning, drawing players from both benches onto the floor and resulting in the ejection of the original combatants.

A basket by Moses Malone with 2:18 left tied the score 91-91, but Dave Corzine and Dudley Bradley hit consecutive Chicago baskets to give the Bulls a four-point lead. Andrew Tony led the 76ers with 23 points.

NBA Roundup

Spurs 136, Nuggets 129

San Antonio blunted a late Denver rally with four baskets by Gene Banks, and the Spurs upped their Midwest Division lead to 6½ games over Denver. Spurs center Artis Gilmore scored 12 of his 32 points in the fourth quarter.

George Gervin added 28 points for San Antonio, and Kiki Vandeweghe topped Denver with 33.

Kings 111, Rockets 95

Kansas City pulled within 1½ games of Denver by beating Houston with 28 points from Mike Woodson and 19 apiece from Ray Williams and Larry Drew.

Terry Teagle topped Houston with 26.

Kansas City outscored the Rockets 17-8 early in the fourth quarter to put the game out of reach.

Hawks 95, Cavaliers 82

Atlanta ended a three-game losing streak with its victory over Cleveland, which has now lost three in a row and nine of 10. Dan Roundfield scored 25 points for the Hawks, and Dominique Wilkins had 19.

Tied 31-31, Atlanta scored the first 10 points of the second quarter and held the lead until halftime. The Hawks widened the gap to 72-56 behind the 10 third-quarter points of Johnny Davis.

Bullets 94, Bucks 81

Milwaukee was prevented from clinching its third straight Midwest Division title when Frank Johnson and Jeff Ruland led Washington to victory with 24 points apiece. The victory kept Washington two games behind Atlanta in the battle for the sixth and final playoff berth in the Eastern Conference.

The Bullets took the lead for good by scoring eight straight points and taking a 58-50 advantage in the third quarter en route to their sixth straight victory.

Suns 115, Jazz 107

Phoenix rallied from a nine-point deficit at halftime, and Alvan Adams scored eight of his season-high 30 points in the fourth quarter as the Suns topped Utah. Larry Nance scored 21 points, and Maurice Lucas had 18 for Phoenix.

Warriors 109, Mavericks 106

Golden State broke a seven-game losing streak with the help of a crucial steal by Lester Conner with 12 seconds left. With the Warriors holding a 107-106 lead, Conner swiped an inbounds pass by Dallas' Kelvin Ransey, and Sleepy Floyd converted two free throws to give Golden State its three-point vicotry.

Joe Barry Carroll led the way with 28$points for the Warriors, and Mark Aguirre had 31 points for Dallas.

Lakers 127, Clippers 109

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 14 of his 26 points in the first quarter as L.A. rolled to an easy victory over the Clippers, who fell behind by as many as 25 points three times in the third quarter. Terry Cummings led San Diego with 20 points.

Abdul-Jabbar's first-quarter splurge helped the Lakers take a 31-27 lead, and they controlled the game the rest of the way.

Blazers 114, Pistons 107

Portland took a 32-20 lead after the first period and boosted it to as many as 18 points midway through the third quarter en route to an easy victory over Detroit. Calvin Natt scored 22 points and Jim Paxson had 20 for the Trail Blazers.

Amateurs to receive TV money

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The International Olympic Committee plans to hand out $9.5 million this year to help amateur sports around the world, an increase of $1.5 million from 1982.

The money obtained from selling television rights to the Olympic Games has brought a new dimension to the Olympic movement.

The IOC, which used to struggle along without funds, is now a rich, money-making concern.

Lopez feels she's back

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez says she's regained the concentration that helped her reach the pinnacle of women's golf, a position that escaped her three years ago.

Still just 26, Lopez finished seventh in 1982 on the money-winning list of the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, where she had been the leader in 1978 and 1979.

Mired in a slump for the first seven months of last year, she has rallied since her marriage to baseball player Ray Knight in October, winning twice and finishing second once.

Going into Thursday's opening round of the $400,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore tournament at the Mission Hills Country Club she is a favorite in the event won last year by Sally Little.

"Ray has been wonderful," Lopez said of the Houston Astros' first baseman. "He's instilled determination in me, helped me with my game and, most importantly, has made me forget my problems and to totally concentrate on my golf game when I'm playing."

Eighty-eight golfers, including two amateurs, start the Dinah Shore, which is the richest event on the LPGA schedule. A prize of $55,000 awaits the victor.

Lopez has won 26 tournaments in her career and $989,376 in prize money. She lists three goals for this year.

"I want to win the million dollars, I want to win another major championship and make the Hall of Fame," she said.

She won the LPGA Championship last year, and this campaign the Dinah Shore also has been boosted into the major category.

Of last year's opening months, Lopez said, "I just couldn't get myself in there 100 percent. In a four-day tournament, I'd play three rounds very well and then I'd have a 77 or 78. It was lack of total concentration."

Her first marriage had broken up, causing some of the problems.

When she married Knight, they honeymooned in Japan and Nancy won the Mazda Classic, the final tournament of 1982. She credits her husband for that victory.

TPC not yet accepted as major

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. (AP) — It is, without question, one of the finest golf tournaments in the world — arguably the best of them all, the very best.

But time — quite possibly a great deal of time — will be required before the Tournament Players Championship is fully accepted as one of the game's so-called "majors."

Acceptance — full acceptance by players, public and press — is all that separates the TPC from the recognized Big Four, the U.S. and British opens, the Masters and PGA.

It seems inevitable that acceptance will come.

The TPC has all the credentials:

— The tournament has the strongest field of players of them all; better and stronger than any of the Big Four.

— The tournament is the players' own. It is the only one of the Big Four that is conducted by the touring pros. This is their championship, the championship of the game's very best.

Rapp joins Oilers staff

HOUSTON (AP) — Vic Rapp, former head coach of the British Columbia Lions of the CFL, was named as a stecial assistant to Houston Oilers Coach Ed Biles of the NFL.

Biles said Rapp would work with the Oilers' new computer system and also assist in quality control and serve as a special teams coach.

Rapp was an assistant coach at the University of Arizona and at Missouri. He served as offensive coordinator for the CFL Edmonton Eskimos before being named head coach of the Lions in 1977.

Sherrill expands role of 12th man

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill decided late last year to capitalize on the 12th man tradition by inviting members of the student body to try out for the Aggie kickoff team.

His plan will take shape amid mixed reactions Tuesday when 40 hopefuls begin spring training with the rest of the A&M football team, competing for 12 spots on the special kickoff unit that will perform at all A&M home games this fall.

"The reaction from the rest of the team has ranged from 'we don't want you' to 'we're all for you,'" said 12th man hopeful Les Asel, a junior from Houston.

"We know that we're going to be under a lot of pressure but if we can show them (A&M players) that we will keep getting up and trying again and again, they will all accept us," Asel, who played with former Southern Methodist star Craig James on Houston Stratford's 1980 state champion team, said.

The 40 hopefuls are the survivors from an original turnout of more than 250 students who answered Sherrill's call last December to put the 12th man legend into practice.

The Aggies' revered 12th man has stood by in the past, ready if called to go into the game. But he never had been called until Sherrill decided to create the special kickoff team.

"This university's student body has done so much for the football team that we wanted to do something for the students," Sherrill said. "This was a way of getting them involved and to say thanks."

Sherrill said 12 players would be selected at the end of spring training and will comprise the A&M kickoff team at all home games next fall. The players will be numbered one through 12 and the top special teamer will travel with the squad to road games.

Glickstein upsets top-ranked Lendl

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Shlomo Glickstein of Israel, ranked 42nd in the world, upset top-ranked Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia 6-2, 3-6, 7-6 Tuesday in the first round of the $300,000 Monte Carlo Open tennis tournament.

In other first-round matches, Ilie Nastase of Romania beat Cassio Motta of Brazil 2-6, 6-4, 6-3; No. 5 seed Yannick Noah defeated fellow Frenchman Gilles Moretton 6-4, 6-4 match; Wotjek Fibak of Poland ousted John Alexander of Australia 6-3, 6-0, and American Bill Scanlon defeated Marcos Hocevar of Brazil 7-5, 2-6, 7-5.

Olympian in Midland for Dressage show

Maj. Gen. Jonathan R. Burton, a member of the 1956 Three-Day Olympic team, will be in Midland Saturday through Monday to judge a special Dressage show and teach Jumping and Dressage clinics.

The Dressage show will be at 8 a.m. Saturday at the Midland Polo Field. Gen. Burton's clinics will be held Sunday and Monday at West Wind Stables. Private and group lessons will be offered in both Dressage and Jumping. Private lessons will be $60 for two sessions and group lessons will be $40. Contact Marcie Stimmel at 694-3409 to register for the clinics.

Gen. Burton is the past commander of the NATO forces and is currently the executive director of the U.S. Equestrian Team.

The Dressage event is open to the public.

In conjunction with the above events, a film, "Riding for America," about the U.S. Equestrian Team will be shown Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Trinity School library. The hour-long film shows the finals of the U.S. Dressage championships, the Combined Training championships and one of the Grand Prix Jumping events from which the Olympic team was selected. A donation of $10, which will go to the Olympic team, is requested.

BOWLING BEAT

Tampico Inn has big series

By RANDY ISENBERG

Jim Colburn's second 700 series led Midland bowlers over the past week. His 255 game was a springboard to a 715 series.

Gary Hight, continuing with a fine year, rolled a 706 set with a 259 game for a close second.

The big news, however, came in the Chicano Men's League where the Tampico Spanish Inn team rolled a phenominal 3161 team series with an average of 210.73 per man. Team members are Tito Velasco, 248-643; Ken Robey, 223-603; Leo Rodriquez, 224-612; J.R. Perales, 246-653; and Jeff Minnick, 269-650. Scratch team games were 1026, 1134 and 1001.

Betty Seay again paces the women bowlers with a 217-224 tandem for a 629 series while Joyce Straughan rolled her second consecutive 600 series with a 613 following a 219 game. Karen Jordan, who took the early lead in the Texas Women's State Bowling Tournament in San Angelo, had a 246 game and 625 series. Mary Jo White broke the 600 barrier with a 210 game and 628 series.

Other top performances were Jim Kapale's 289 game and Jr. Tipton's 675 series on games of 226, 227 and 222. D.D. Woodberry rolled a 265 game on the way to a 672 series and Mike Terrell had a 670 series to go with a 244 game. Bob Wagner's 643 series came after a 245 game.

Ben Kenney (256-684), Larry Miner (267-668, 242-639) turned in other top-flight efforts.

UP COMING EVENTS: The Ladies City Bowling Tournament will be held over the weekends of April 9-10 and 16-17 while the City Junior Bowling Tournament will be held April 23-24.

Dellwood Lanes and the Midland College Bowling Club will host the first invitational collegiate tournament April 30, beginning at 9 a.m. Bowlers from nationally ranked West Texas State will be on hand along with other top collegians from throughout the state.

DESIGN AN 'AWARD WINNER FOR MIDLAND AND WIN $500.00!

COULD YOU FILL THIS SPACE? IF YOU WERE TO CHOOSE A SYMBOL OR SYMBOLS WHICH MOST REPRESENT OUR CITY, WHAT WOULD YOU CHOOSE? HERE IS YOUR CHANCE TO DESIGN AN ANSWER!

An emblem is a representation of an idea or ideas that convey the personality and character of a particular subject. And we at the Reporter-Telegram have decided this is the perfect time to acquire a Newspaper emblem that would represent the city of Midland as a whole, in addition to the Reporter Telegram. And we want you, our community, to help us design it what do you think would best represent Midland? The emblem should convey both the image of the city as a whole as well as the entire Permain Basin Area. So get out your drawing pens, Midland, and get going!

Categories , Prizes and Rules are listed below:

Midland is a clean,growing and cosmopolitan city. The people who live here are proud, independent, patriotic people who cherish their heritage as Americans and Texans, and who believe in hard work as a means of achieving success. The emblem should be simple, crisp and convey the image of the city and of the Permian Basin region.

PRIZE INFORMATION: Three Categories:First through Sixth Grade, Seventh through Twelfth Grade and Adult. There will be 30 Semi-finalists, 10 from each category. Each will receive a Certificate for reaching this level. Three finalists will be chosen,one from each category. Each will receive $100.00. The Grand Prize Winner will receive $500.00.

RULES OF THE CONTEST:

1. Entries should be submitted on 8 1/2 x 11, heavy grade white paper. Only two colors of medium should be used (=xample: black and red). All mediums are acceptable.
2. Entries should be mailed to the care of: Promotions Committee, The Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland, Tx. 79702.
3. Entries should be received by May 16, 1983.
4. The winning emblem will become the permanent property of Midland Reporter-Telegram and all rights and use of the emblem will be reserved by The Reporter-Telegram.
5. No art work will be returned to entrants following completion of the contest.
6. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to refine the winning emblem.
7. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram and their family members are not permitted to enter this contest.

IRS giving banks chance to prove claims correct

WASHINGTON (AP) — Banks that claim it would impose an undue hardship for them to begin withholding taxes from interest and dividends on July 1 are about to get a chance to prove it to the Internal Revenue Service.

The IRS will begin accepting applications Friday for a delay of up to six months in starting the withholding. But the IRS emphasized it will not grant waivers for those institutions that delay preparations for withholding in hopes the new law will be repealed.

Banks and other financial institutions are waging an intensive campaign to get Congress to repeal withholding before it goes into effect. They contend withholding will discourage saving and create a mountain of paperwork.

The IRS listed these situations that might be interpreted as undue hardship: substantial additional costs that could be avoided if withholding were deferred; fire or similar occurrences, or unavailability of trained personnel or properly designed equipment.

Separately, the IRS disclosed that money-market mutual funds will be given the option of withholding once a year from their accounts, rather than monthly or quarterly. Similar treatment already had been allowed most bank accounts, including those that rival money-market funds.

Unless Congress intervenes, banks and other institutions will begin withholding 10 percent of interest and dividends July 1. Withholding from Treasury bills, commercial paper and similar discounted investments will begin Jan. 1.

This is not a new tax; it is simply an effort to collect taxes on some of the income that now is unreported. Money withheld from savings will be subtracted from taxes owed when the saver files a tax return, just as withheld wages have been handled for 40 years.

Under certain conditions, the law permits people 55 or older to avoid taxation on the first $125,000 of profits from the sale of their principal residence. So what happens if the person sells the land on which the house is built and moves the house to an adjacent lot?

The full profit on the sale of the land is taxable, the IRS said in a ruling that applies to all such transactions occurring March 28 or later. The ruling revoked a 29-year-old policy.

City approves 54 new projects

The city of Midland issued 54 permits for new construction and alterations last week, March 21-25, for projects totalling $16,424,184. This brings the month-to-date total to $22.6 million and the year-to-date amount to $41.9 million.

Topping the list of projects planned here in the next few months is an office building downtown, a new apartment complex and renovations to sevrral churches in Midland.

Judwin Construction, Houston, will erect a $10 million, 16-story office building at the corner of Big Spring Street and Illinois Avenue. Groundbreaking is scheduled in April.

Campbell Housing will build a 204-unit apartment complex at 3216 Sage, east of Lamesa Highway and south of Wadley. Cost of the two-and three story project is $3.8 million, according to Ranchland Development Group, Houston.

Elmco Dirt Company will will construct a parking lot for Heritage Center, 601 N. Main, $10,000. Abbott Builders , add 6,000 square feet to Temple Baptist Church, 4301 Thomason, $90,000.

Commercial alteration permits went to: Pace Construction, add 17,000 square feet to First Assembly of God Church, 100 W. Wadley, $625,000; General Building Corp., 2801 N. Garfield, add to Grace Presbyterian Church, $493,695; Builders Interest, finish lease space at 4305 N. Garfield, $10,064; Brice Construction, finish tenant space/showroom at 242 Spring Park Drive, $15,000; Walgreen Co., remodel drug store area on first floor, 215 Andrews Highway, $30,000; Casbeer & Assoc., finish lease space at Mesa Verde Shopping Center, $3,000;.

The city issued a permit to Mark Pine for a four-plex at 414 Neely, $145,000. It also granted 13 permits for single family housing ranging in price from $27,000 to $200,000, and 24 for residential alterations.

Interior to appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Interior Department said it plans to appeal a court decision halting the sale of leases for oil and natural gas exploration off the New England coast.

"I would guess that today is the beginning of reassessment time," said Barbara Karlen, a spokeswoman in the New York City office of the department's Minerals Management Service. She said she didn't know when the appeal would be filed.

In a statement issued in Washington, Harold E. Doley, the director of the Minerals Management Service, expressed "dismay" at Monday's decision by a federal judge in Boston to block the lease sale which was to have taken place Tuesday in New York.

Finally, a copier for the most important person in my life.

To you, I'm Jack Klugman the Actor.
To my agent, business manager, and accountant, I'm Jack Klugman the Corporation.
They have copiers. Why shouldn't I?
Now I can. A Canon Personal Cartridge copier. And it's so small, it's perfect for people in almost any business. Even if their business is at home.
It's like no other copier ever. Because Canon put the entire copying process – the toner, the drum and the developer – in one neat cartridge. Each cartridge is good for about 2,000 beautiful copies. On just about any kind of paper. Even labels and transparencies.
And once the cartridge is used up, you just replace it. Yourself. Tremendous. Not only is my Canon copier virtually service-free, it's so simple to care for, anyone could maintain it. Even me.
Here's something else it does. It copies in black, brown, or blue. Just by changing a cartridge. Nobody else's copier does that. Not even the big ones.
And nobody else's plain paper copier costs so little. Which is something my accountant is still smiling about.
So shouldn't there be a Canon Personal Cartridge copier for the most important person in your life? You.

Canon PC-10/20

Recession-free playland finally succumbs

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

VAIL, Colo. — This world-famous ski valley, which once bedazzled real estate investors as a recession-free playland for the rich, has succumbed, late and hard, to economic hard times that have brought the land boom to a virtual standstill.

Scores of luxury condominiums, with price tags starting at $250,000 and soaring beyond $1 million, are unsold. Many of the original developers have given up and the lenders, some of the nation's largest banks, are trying to recover their losses.

Foreclosures in a 10-mile-long Colorado resort mecca from Vail to Avon and Beaver Creek more than doubled from 1981 to 1982, escalating from 110 to 245. In the first 2 1-2 months of this year, 164 foreclosures already have been filed.

While the number of borrowers who cannot make payments on their property has jumped, the value of approved building projects has plummeted.

For example in Avon, a resort town created just four years ago on the valley floor leading into the exclusive Beaver Creek ski development, building permit valuation dropped from $74.7 million in 1981 to $3.4 million in 1982. So far this year, the amount is only about $30,000, according to the city building department.

BUT, ACCORDING TO developers and real estate experts, sales have picked up substantially along the Interstate 70 corridor that includes Vail, Eagle Vail, Avon, Beaver Creek and Edwards.

Optimists say the shakeout is over, that land and condominium sales will recover along with the national economy.

Pessimists say the valley is so over-built that there is at least a five-year supply of luxury housing, threatening at least short-term danger for any new construction.

"There's been a winnowing out of people who said anybody can make money in Vail. They went up on a wish and a prayer and got burned," said Denver attorney Douglas M. Tisdale, who has worked with lenders and developers on several major Vail-area projects.

"You don't have panic sales or a real distress situation where people are bailing out at any price," insisted George Rosenberg, an attorney for a large-scale development in Avon.

BUT THE NATIONAL recession, as well as the troubled peso that has discouraged wealthy Mexican buyers traditionally fond of Vail, has taken the giddiness out of Vail development.

In the 20 years since Vail Associates began developing Vail Mountain, said Rosenberg, "there's no question the numbers are the worst they've ever been."

Financial survival has become a matter of staying power. Some developers, unable to bear the cost of expensive, unsold condominiums, have given way to banks who can afford to wait:

—The Charter, a lavish, sprawling Beaver Creek condominium that even puts oak paneling on its refrigerator doors, was taken over last December by the mortgage subsidiary of Manufacturers Hanover Corp., which runs the nation's fourth-largest bank. Only about one-third of the 94 completed condominiums (starting at $377,800) have been sold.

A Vail management company is running The Charter as a lodge while the bank finishes construction on the $56 million, 156-unit project. A spokesman for the original developer, Heritage Financial Corp. of Denver, explained, "We made a decision to recognize and accept the situation and to take our losses."

—Avon Lake Villas, a five-story, 32-unit, $5 million-plus condominium complex, is sitting empty. Columbia Savings and Loan Association, which took back the building from the developer, is trying to figure out what to do with it.

—The Chambertin, with six condominiums built and a concrete slab already poured for additional units, once asked $750,000 for one of its luxury homes overlooking Avon and the Beaver Creek valley. The First National Bank of Oklahoma, which now holds the property, has dropped the price per unit to about $300,000 and wants someone to buy the whole project.

"A LOT OF lending institutions are indeed taking over some projects to save their necks," said Dick Evans, Avon's plain-talking building administrator.

"We were just getting started good and the money dropped out," said Evans.

Cibola completes project

ALBUQUERQUE (SWN) — Cibola Energy Corporation today announced the completion of the first phase of its 20 well infill drilling program in its Race Track San Andres Field located in Chaves County, New Mexico.

Seven infill wells were drilled in the program's first phase. Of them, the Mabel No. 5, located in Section 30, Township 10 South, Range 28 East, N.M.P.M., appears to be the best producer.

In a 24 hour test (March 17 to March 18), the well flowed 277 barrels of oil with an average flowing tubing pressure of 50 psi through a 1/2 inch choke.

Buyers snap up 26 million Chrysler shares

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

DETROIT — In what one underwriter called an "astonishing" display of investor confidence in Chrysler Corp., buyers snapped up 26 million new common shares of the auto maker within an hour Tuesday, bringing in $432 million cash.

It was said to be the largest offering of stock in an industrial company in 17 years and was more than twice the size originally planned by Chrysler. The 26 million Chrysler shares sold Tuesday were priced at $16.625.

On the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday, Chrysler shares were the most active issue, rising 12.5 cents to close at $16.75 on trading of 2.76 million shares. In the last 12 months, Chrysler shares have been as low as $4.625 and as high as $18.625.

After payment of about $23 million in underwriters' fees, the proceeds of the offering will go to Chrysler's lenders in a swap for $1.1 billion of special preferred stock that the lenders accepted in 1981, as part of a financial restructuring that helped Chrysler narrowly avert bankruptcy.

The newest recapitalization plan, which must be approved by shareholders at Chrysler's annual meeting May 5, would strengthen Chrysler's financial condition by relieving it of obligations to pay cumulative dividends on the special preferred stock.

Chrysler is obligated to begin paying those dividends, costing about $200 million a year, as soon as the company pays off the $1.2 billion in loans to the company that have been guaranteed by the federal government under an emergency bailout plan.

In effect, Executive Vice President Robert S. Miller said, the burden of those dividends was an incentive not to pay off the guaranteed loans. Chrysler hopes to pay back the government-backed loans by 1985, Miller said, five years sooner than required under the bailout law.

Chrysler originally planned to offer just 12.5 million shares at Tuesday's sale, but the number was increased twice to reflect strong demand for the auto company's stock, according to the New York investment banking firm of Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, one of the underwriters.

The demand grew as Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca met with financial analysts in Los Angeles, Chicago, New York and other cities over the last several weeks, said Roger Altman, co-director of investment banking at Lehman Brothers.

"Iacocca went around selling stock the way he sells cars. He's the greatest salesman of all time," said Altman, a former assistant Treasury secretary who helped shape the federal loan guarantee program.

"If someone had told you a year ago that someone was going to make an equity offering of $430 million and said it was Chrysler, you would have thrown them out the window. It's truly astonishing. It's an absolute milestone in Chrysler's recovery."

In the prospectus for the offering, Chrysler said it expects to report pretax earnings of at least $100 million for the quarter ending March 31. With an automobile industry recovery expected this year, analysts generally believe that Chrysler's severe cost-cutting and corporate restructuring as part of the federal bailout since 1979 are about to pay off.

The company will pay not federal income tax for several years because of its huge losses in the past, and it has reduced by half the number of cars and trucks it must sell to break even.

Miller, Chrysler's top financial officer, said that even taking into account the dilutive effect of the new common stock, the recapitalization program means that the book value of the common stock will rise from a negative $4.15 a share to a positive $6.68, mainly as a result of removing the preferred stock from the books.

Miller said the plan improves prospects for Chrysler's access to the credit markets. Partly in anticipation of the recapitalization plan, Moody's Investor Service recently increased its rating on Chrysler's senior debt to single-B2 from CAA.

Altman of Lehman Brothers said the only stock offerings by industrial companies larger than Chrysler's were a $658 million sale by Ford Motor Co., when it first sold shares to the public in 1956, and a $546 million sale by the late industrialist Howard Hughes, when he sold his 75 percent holding in Trans World Airlines in 1966.

GM opens California design studio

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

General Motors Corp., stung by the continuing success of imported cars in California, said Tuesday that it will open an automotive design center in Thousand Oaks, Calif., to help the company better satisfy the tastes of West Coast car buyers.

The decision to open its first domestic design studio outside Detroit is considered a major effort by the automaker to inject new perspective into the design of its cars, particularly those models that compete head-to-head with imported vehicles. Critics say the move is also a tacit admission by the company that its recent Detroit-designed small cars have failed to make much headway against imported models in the California market.

Detroit auto executives have frequently expressed the belief that the nation's automotive fads often begin on the West Coast, but they have been reluctant to move any of their key design and engineering facilities too far from corporate headquarters.

"With this location, we feel we will be able to better sense California trends in order to develop vehicles that will meet the needs of the West Coast population," GM Vice Chairman Howard Kehrl said in a statement. Although GM's overall share of the Southern California car market has remained relatively stable at about 31 percent for the last decade, it has been able to capture only about 10 percent of the small-car market. In contrast, imports accounted for 52 percent of the car sales in the region in 1982 and more than 80 percent of small-car sales.

GM officials said the design center will have about 50 employees, making it the largest such facility in California. All of the major Japanese auto manufacturers have design offices in the state, and Chrysler Corp. plans to open one later this spring in Carlsbad, when construction of a new office is completed there.

A spokesman for Ford Motor Co. said the company has considered opening a West Coast design studio but has decided for the time being to maintain a centralized design staff in Detroit.

Having a California studio of its own could help GM stem the exodus of talented designers who have been hired away in recent years to work in the California studios of the Japanese companies. These have included Gerald Hirshberg, now head of design at Nissan Design International Inc. in San Diego but once chief designer at GM's Buick Division, and Mark Jordan, recently hired by Mazda from Adam Opel AG.

Tiny no-frills airline trying something new

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

Tiny World Airways became a darling of air travelers in the late 1970s for its no-frills transcontinental flights priced as low as $69.99. But after nearly everyone else in the airline business adopted similar cut-rate tactics, World this month announced that it is trying something new: service.

Its new "Ultra Service" plan for coach passengers will include, among other things, free wine, a choice of three entrees, in-flight raffles and electronic games.

"Fare advantages are a thing of the past," says William Jamieson, World's vice president of marketing and sales. "The only way we or any other carrier can compete is on the service level."

World's shift signals what many airline executives say is shaping up as a major trend in the entire industry, embattled in recent years by the recession and fare wars.

With airlines routinely matching low fares offered by competitors, fare cutting today rarely gives an airline a competitive advantage over its rivals. Therefore, improved service — better scheduling, meals, leg room, wider seats, on-time arrivals, and other things — is making a bid to return as the primary arena of competition between airlines, as it was before Congress deregulated the airline industry in 1978 and allowed widespread fare cutting.

"Fares are yesterday's story," says Continental Airlines Chairman Frank Lorenzo, who as head of Texas International Airlines in the mid-1970s pioneered many low fares. Before deregulation, "airlines spent more time worrying about the quality of their lobsters and steaks than about low fares. Now we have to worry about lobsters and steaks again."

CONTINENTAL HAS brought back its in-flight "pub" on DC-10 flights, dropped in an earlier round of cost cutting. United Airlines has reinstalled first-class seating on its 737 jets and increased leg room on its coach seats. Several airlines, including Delta Air Lines, plan to upgrade meal service with a greater choice of entrees.

Others, including Trans World and American, have installed separate business classes and sleeper seats in first class. Western Airlines is putting its customer service employees through Dale Carnegie courses to improve their human-relations skills.

Pacific Southwest Airlines recently instituted advance seat selection, standard practice on many major lines but a significant shift for a commuter-oriented line. A host of no-frills carriers, including New York Air and Chicago-based Midway Airlines as well as World, have taken steps to provide full services and shed their old images. And more and more of the newer airlines offer deluxe service as their main marketing identity.

One airline, Dallas-based Muse Air, touts its leather seats on coach class, proclaiming that the change "makes flying beautiful again." Another, Los Angeles-based FirstAir, plans to start $1,500 one-way flights from Los Angeles to New York in July with limousine service to and from the planes. It promises such menu delicacies as Maine lobster and caviar.

Meanwhile, in a major development that could lead to a standardization of air fares, American Airlines this month moved to reduce the variety of its fares and base its coach fares on a formula determined by the distance traveled.

SEVERAL OTHERS, including United, Delta, Continental and TWA, have matched all or parts of American's fare plan, which is expected on balance to raise fares.

To be sure, low fares remain a key factor in airline marketing, particularly in recessionary periods when cost cutting may be needed to stimulate traffic. Surveys of passenger attitudes show that consumers still consider fares the primary consideration in choosing airlines.

But airlines today are hard pressed to steal a significant number of passengers from each other through lower fares. In fact, several airlines, including Delta and Western, have announced blanket policies under which they will match every published fare by any competitor on any routes they serve.

Competitors can't match services so readily. Operating a pub, for example, requires retooling aircraft.

The implications of the shift toward service competition may not be all good for travelers, airline executives and analysts say. Fares could be higher, some suggest, because increases in services, such as free drinks, will raise costs, putting upward pressure on fares.

SOME FRILLS, such as wider seats or flashier flight-attendant uniforms, may not add enough value for the passenger to be worth the higher fare, some say.

"Its kind of ironic," says Herbert D. Kelleher, chairman and president of Dallas-based Southwest Airlines. "Economists strongly applauded deregulation because they thought it would get rid of competition based on frills."

Before deregulation, service was about the only thing airlines could compete on because fares and routes were tightly controlled by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Fares were usually the same for all airlines serving any given route, so instead of fares, airlines advertised such things as their gourmet meals, bigger seats or prettier flight attendants.

"The airlines used to boast about their in-flight food service," says Don Moonjian, vice president for marketing at United Airlines. One airline, he says, even had a chef on the airplane who would mix salads as he went down the aisle.

But deregulation, along with the recession, higher costs and eroding profits, changed all that. Proponents of deregulation argued that airlines should compete on price as well as on service.

UNDER DEREGULATION legislation, the CAB was ordered to allow airlines to set their own fares. Carriers took advantage of the new freedom by offering scores of discount or gimmick fares.

But as fare wars began to proliferate, costs began to soar and profits began to disappear. Fuel prices doubled in 1979 just as the economy entered the recession, reducing passenger counts. As a result, the U.S. airline industry has suffered operating losses of more than $1 billion between 1980 and 1982.

To cope with these factors as well as the competition from no-frills airlines, many majors slashed expenses. They often sacrificed food service, particularly on shorter flights. Many also furloughed flight attendants and reservations agents, reducing in-flight service and lengthening the time to book flights. Some put more seats on their planes, reducing leg room, to squeeze as much revenue per flight as possible.

Braniff Airways, for example, in the mid-1960s lavished millions of dollars to create an image as a flashy, high-class airline. It outfitted its flight attendants in Pucci designed uniforms and painted its jets in bright colors. Its advertising slogan was "When you've got it, flaunt it."

BUT BY 1980, Braniff was losing millions of dollars due to an ill-fated expansion plan. The quality of its in-flight service was cut back sharply as it slashed fares in a desperate and unsuccessful attempt to stave off insolvency.

Nicaraguan airfield bombed in effort to rout rebels

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Air Force planes bombed an airfield in northern Nicaragua that anti-Sandinista guerrillas were using to supply their forces and killed or wounded several rebels, Interior Minister Tomas Borge said.

The Nicaraguan foreign ministry denounced new cross-border raids by Honduran-based Nicaraguan exiles pledged to overthrow the leftist government, and Honduras denied a charge that its troops had aided the rebels by attacking Nicaraguan frontier posts.

Honduras also claimed that its security forces had intercepted 12 Nicaraguan soldiers carrying weapons to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

Borge, speaking at a news conference late Tuesday, said helicopters and small planes used the airfield to bring weapons, ammunition and other supplies to the rebel forces.

The insurgents also used an airfield in Honduran territory, he said, but stressed that the one bombed Monday was in Nicaragua, close to the confluence of the Coco and Bocay Rivers just across the border from Honduras in Jinotega province.

He said an undetermined number of rebels were killed or wounded in the bombing.

Borge said Nicaraguan troops and rebels clashed in the area of the bombing, with three Sandinista soldiers killed and three others wounded on Monday. He said there were casualties among the insurgents but gave no details.

Because the Nicaraguan government generally bars reporters from combat zones, none of the reports could be checked.

According to the government, the latest clash raised the number of Sandinista troops killed to 64, while the rebels have lost 280 soldiers since clashes began two months ago.

Borge said the rebels planned to use the Bocay River, one of many in the north, to travel into the interior of the country.

Elsewhere, rebels used mortars and small arms fire to attack the Nicaraguan border posts of Teotecacinte, 143 miles northeast of here in Nueva Segovia province, and El Kun, 155 miles to the northeast in Northern Zelaya province on Monday, and then fled across the border into Honduras, the foreign ministry said.

Earlier Tuesday the ministry had charged that Honduran guards attacked two other posts, El Suspiro and El Espino, 80 miles northwest of here in Chinandega province.

The Honduran government denied the charge.

"Honduran soldiers have not entered Nicaraguan territory nor will they because the position of our government is of absolute respect for the principle of non-intervention in the affairs of other states," a statement from the president's office said.

The Nicaraguan officials did not comment on the Honduran claim that security forces intercepted Nicaraguan soldiers carrying a "large quantity" of weapons Saturday at Nacaome, more than two-thirds of the way across the 70-mile neck of Honduran territory between Nicaragua and El Salvador.

Nicaragua repeatedly has denied charges by the United States and its allies in the Salvadoran government that the Sandinistas were funneling Soviet and Cuban weapons to the guerrillas.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council ended a five-day debate without taking action on Nicaragua's charges that the United States and Honduras were supporting the rebels. The session concluded with an appeal by the council president, Sir John Thomson of Britain, for Nicaragua and Honduras to negotiate a peaceful settlement with the assistance of U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru.

The United States has not answered the charge that it backs the rebels.

There were no new reports from the rebels' Nicaraguan Democratic Force, a Honduran-based organization that includes former national guardsmen under late dictator Anastasio Somoza and former Sandinista supporters, since its claim to have killed 20 government soldiers in an ambush on Saturday.

The Democratic Force, which claims to have at least 10,000 troops in Nicaragua, believes in using its own fighters to overthrow the government, while the other major exile group, the Costa Rican-based Democratic Revolutionary Alliance of former Sandinista junta member Alfonso Robelo is counting on internal dissent to provoke an armed struggle.

Sandinista government estimates of rebel strength vary from 1,200 to 5,000.

Alleged ouster attempt drawing much attention

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — For an operation that is supposed to be covert, the purportedly American-backed effort to oust Nicaragua's leftist leadership is getting more than its share of public attention.

The Reagan administration has steadfastly refused to address the allegations and instead has tried to portray the conflict between government and guerrilla forces in Nicaragua as an entirely internal uprising.

But for the most part, its efforts have fallen on deaf ears as a number of friendly as well as hostile countries in the ongoing U.N. Security Council debate have embraced Nicaragua's position, depicting the United States as the scapegoat for Nicaragua's internal problems.

These countries generally have ignored the administration's contentions that the opposition in Nicaragua extends far beyond disgruntled former National Guardsmen who served the ousted regime of President Anastasio Somoza.

An Analysis

The press leaks about the alleged covert operation began within days after President Reagan is said to have given the green light for it almost a year and a half ago.

The sources of the leaks are believed to have been administration officials who were attempting to sabotage the operation because they were fearful it would backfire.

What troubles officials here is not so much the criticism of the supposed U.S. intervention in Nicaragua but the relative absence of any corresponding indignation over what the Reagan administration claims Nicaragua is doing to destabilize the El Salvadoran government.

The administration's view is that Nicaragua's role as a conduit for weapons shipments to the Salvadoran rebels has continued unabated — a charge Reagan repeated on Tuesday.

Echoes of past conflicts ca be heard nowadays as the United States once again confronts an armed uprising in an area it regards as vital to its interests.

As the Cuban U.N. delegate said Monday, the alleged American campaign in Nicaragua is reminiscent of the Bay of Pigs conflict of April 1961 when an American-backed force of Cuban rebels unsuccessfully attempted to oust the Castro government.

During the Vietnam War, the United States attempted to "raise the price of Hanoi's aggression" by extensive bombing of North Vietnamese territory. Raising the price of Nicaragua's alleged aggression against El Salvador appears to be at the heart of the Reagan administration's strategy against the Sandinista government.

The furor over the alleged American role demonstrates once again how difficult it is for a democratic country such as the United States to undertake a covert operation.

A CIA effort in 1975 to oppose the emergence of a leftist regime in post-colonial Angola was exposed early on and was canceled by legislation barring use of any U.S. funds to intervene in that country.

Other CIA operations have been uncovered after they had been carried out. For example, the Senate Intelligence Committee learned of at least eight CIA assassination plots against Fidel Castro — a figure the Cuban leadertsays is far below the actual number.

Some reports have suggested the alleged plotting on behalf of anti-Sandinista forces in Nicaragua had a limited purpose at the outset.

According to these accounts, the administration felt initially that Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries based in southern Honduras could be used to halt weapons flows from Nicaragua to the El Salvadoran insurgents.

It is not clear whether any such trafficking was curbed by that tactic. But some experts, such as the former U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua, Lawrence Pezzullo, say it is foolish to believe the Nicaraguan exiles would be content to play such a limited role.

An empty police barracks is ignited by lava flowing from Sicily's Mount Etna volcano.

Volcanic eruption continues

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna rumbled and poured out a new stream of lava today, the third day of an eruption by Europe's most active volcano.

The volcano had quieted down during the night, but before dawn was shaken by a series of tremors, experts monitoring the activity reported.

Officials barred tourists from the upper slopes of the mountain but repeated that the eruption posed no immediate danger to inhabited areas.

Zimbabwe denies charges

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — The government said today that Roman Catholic bishops' charges of atrocities by army troops were "utterly one-sided" and rejected their call for an independent investigation.

"The government is ready to investigate itself," Information Minister Nathan Shamuyarira said in a statement published in the Harare Herald newspaper.

The seven-member Zimbabwe Catholic Bishops' Conference said Tuesday that "dissidents" loyal to self-exiled opposition leader Joshua Nkomo had initiated the violence that has swept Matabeleland province since Nkomo was fired from the Cabinet 13 months ago for allegedly plotting a coup.

Kohl's Cabinet takes office

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's new Cabinet took office today and the ministers were urged to start work immediately on the country's economic problems.

West Germany's unemployment, with a post-war record 2.5 million people out of work, is the gravest problem, Federal President Karl Carstens warned the 16 ministers shortly before they took the oath of office.

The Cabinet, which has only two new members, was sworn in one day after Kohl, a Christian Democrat, won easy re-election in the Bundestag, or lower house of the West German Parliament.

Seven injured in protests

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Seven people were injured today in demonstrations by Palestinians and Israeli Arabs marking the anniversary of the 1976 Land Day disturbances in which six Arabs were shot and killed by police.

Authorities reported making 21 arrests as they broke up disturbances in the heavily Arab Galilee region and the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip, home of about 1.3 million Palestinians.

MEXICAN VEGETABLE MIX
A recipe for Mexican food buffs — and who isn't?

4 slices bacon
½ cup diced onion
2 teaspoons chili powder
½ teaspoon ground cumin seed
1 can Campbell's Chunky for Cooking Thick Tomato Sauce
1 package (about 10 ounces) frozen cut green beans, cooked and drained
1 can (about 16 ounces) whole kernel golden corn, drained

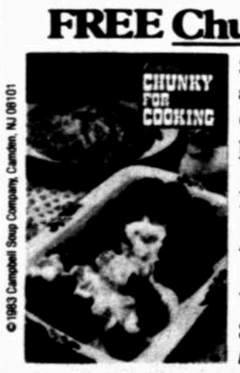

In skillet, cook bacon until crisp; remove and crumble. Cook onion with chili powder and cumin in drippings until tender; add Cooking Sauce, bacon, beans and corn. Heat; stir occasionally. Garnish with red pepper rings if desired. Makes about 4 cups, 8 servings.

SUMMER VEGETABLE PASTA TOPPER
Light, fresh eating for today's busy cooks.

3 cups cubed yellow summer squash
½ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon thyme leaves, crushed
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cans Campbell's Chunky for Cooking Creamy Mushroom Sauce
1 cup cooked peas
1 small tomato, cut in wedges
Cooked thin spaghetti

In skillet, cook squash and onion with thyme in butter until just tender. Add Cooking Sauce, peas and tomato. Heat; stir occasionally. Serve over spaghetti. Makes about 5 cups, 6 servings.

Dogs are seeking homes

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The pit bulldogs who survived the Aug. 29 raid of a dog fight southeast of Midland are to be auctioned in a public sale on the steps of the Midland County Courthouse.

"We terminated all the owners' rights (to the dogs)," said Mark H. Dettman, assistant county attorney who prosecuted promoters and participants of the fight. "Right now, the dogs are the property of the state.

"We didn't determine who the owners were (among the defendants)," he said. "It was just determined that the animals had been cruelly treated."

Of the 15 dogs who either were in the pit, in cages, tethered or held in a farm house at the site, only six or so were confiscated by Midland County sheriff's deputies and Texas Department of Public Safety troopers who carried out the raid. Initially, the dogs were taken to Tall City Veterinary Hospital for treatment and examination, then to the city of Midland's Animal Control Shelter for less than a month. Due to overcrowding there, the dogs were returned to the hospital for boarding.

The county recently paid the veterinary hospital $3,682.50 for boarding and treating the dogs at a daily rate of $5.50 per animal. The county's expense for boarding the dogs is being offset by $2,750 in fines levied against three defendants who either pleaded guilty or were convicted of fighting dogs and by $4,000 in forfeited bonds. Four defendants, who were released under $1,000 bonds each, have jumped bail and are still at large.

The number of dogs at the hospital reportedly is down to five.

"One of them died — got a little sick and passed on us," noted Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson.

Dettman said the auction would be held soon after Easter weekend. The dogs will be sold to the highest bidders, he said.

"If no one bids on the dogs, the law provides that they are to be put to sleep — destroyed," Dettman said.

Deputy undergoes rigorous training

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

Any police officer wanting to improve his or her overall fitness for duty might consider talking to Tommy Jones about his experience at the FBI Academy in Quantico, Va.

Married and the father of three boys, Jones is a 30-year-old college-educated deputy in the warrant division of the Midland County Sheriff's Department.

He holds the rank of lieutenant and just returned from a rewarding but somewhat grueling 11-week FBI training program conducted at government expense for select law enforcement officers from around the world.

Some 249 officers from 13 foreign countries and all 50 states attended daylong classes ranging from "Constitutional Criminal Procedure" to "Interpersonal Violence."

"That one was most interesting," said Jones, who has almost nine years in law enforcement, five of them with the Midland Police Department. "You learn that there are a lot of deviates in this world."

Wincing and shaking his head as he recalled an FBI capsule account of one California case, Jones said:

"These two guys tortured and killed 12 teen-age girls before they were caught. They tape-recorded their third victim, who took 12 minutes to die, and then played the 12-minute tape for their subsequent victims prior to torturing them.

"They (the FBI) played 40 seconds of the tape for us. If they had played any more, I'd have had to leave the room."

Tommy Jones

Purpose of the course was not to show how sick some people are — something most cops learn early in their careers — but to teach criminal "profiling" — an investigative technique used in determining the type of person likely to commit certain crimes.

Jones said various pieces of evidence gathered at the scene of a crime can be compiled into a profile so detailed that police often know the criminal's age, his marital status, the type of work he does, how much money he makes and whether he lives alone or with his family.

One thing Jones learned in a class on recent Supreme Court decisions is that suspects do not have to have their Miranda rights read to them until they're officially placed under arrest.

"I was under the impression that any time you talked to a suspect you had to Mirandize him," he noted.

The only course required of all participants was the one on constitutional criminal procedure; other courses were electives chosen from five subject areas.

Included in the classes Jones took were two on police administration and one on international terrorism.

As examples of how difficult some of the classwork was, it took him 15 hours hours to complete one 17-page "take-home" final, and the better part of two hours to answer three questions of another five-question test.

He also had to write three research papers and participate in firearms and physical fitness training.

Jones lived in one of two, seven-story dormitories on the sprawling Academy complex, located 40 miles from Washington, D.C., and took only two week-end furloughs during his 11 weeks there.

"It's all self-contained with enclosed walkways and you don't have to leave the grounds for anything, unless you want to," he added. "I was really impressed."

The rigors of the physical fitness training were on a par with those of the academic training. Before the 11 weeks were over, Jones was running six miles — non-stop.

"Some of the others got up to 8.5 miles. It was all hills and it seemed like you were always running uphill."

Together, the participants lost 1,195 pounds and shed 18.5 feet of waistline.

Summing up his 11-week Quantico stay, which ended Friday, Jones said: "It was a class operation."

Volunteer's deeds honored

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

Coila "Tup" Ferguson was enrolled in the Book of Golden Deeds at the 30th annual Exchange Club awards banquet Tuesday night at Midland Country Club.

Coila Ferguson

"Tup Ferguson is indeed an individual who has transformed her faith into service," said A.K. Smith, superintendent of Big Spring State Hospital for which she has donated 24 years' of volunteer service. "She is a most worthy addition."

"I feel so humble, but thank you so much for thinking of this and thinking of me," she said in acceptance.

Smith said the honoree "gives personal care directly to patients...people who do not have family ties. People like Tup become the sole contact patients have with the outside world other than staff."

For the past 21 years, he said, she has twice weekly commuted to the hospital from Midland in pursuing volunteer duties, been active in Christmas decorations preparation, conducted arts and crafts and served as a moving force in capital projects.

"In the years she has accrued more than 16,000 hours of selfless help to people in need," he said, and received recognition from the governor of Texas and the U.S. Senate. "In the volunteer process, we're talking about people who have given their time and their talents to assist their fellow man...she has been a prime mover in that movement in Big Spring State Hospital."

Also recognized at the banquet were past recipients Mrs. Ray Gwyn, Mrs. Marion Culbertson, O.W. "Preacher" Roberts, Maurine Igou Keefe, Mayme Kroenlein Martin and Bobby Trimble.

City Councilmen deal with speed limits, drainage

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Midland City Council acted on a batch of sundry items Tuesday, including tinkering with speed limits in several areas of the city and deciding to let some developers north of Loop 250 handle drainage problems for themselves.

The council also decided to postpone continuing with more than $18,000 in engineering studies on crumbling Doug Russell Pool and approved drafting of plans for a bridge to span the Northwest Drainage Channel and link Midland College's campus with Wadley Avenue.

Developers and landowners north of Loop 250 between Fairgrounds Road and State Highway 349 will handle their drainage problems on an on-site basis after the council rejected as too expensive tentative plans for a drainage channel system.

Plans called for construction of a drainage channel to funnel water from north of Loop 250 to a detention basin. The system could either have been operated by the city or the cost split by the landowners involved.

The proposition proved too expensive for the city, however, and some landowners and developers balked at bearing the cost of drainage from land other than their own.

The council rejected the channel system — which could have cost between $4 and $5.8 million — because it would have added as much $4,300 per acre to land prices in the area.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said drainage on an individual basis was "adopted by default" because of the costly channel plan.

The council voted to draw plans and seek bids on a bridge to replace the "I" Street crossing that clogs the northwest drainage channel at Wadley Avenue. Councilmen voted for the bridge plan, which could cost $300,000 according to preliminary estimates, over replacing the crossing with a new, more-expensive low-water crossing.

They also voted to seek bids on a traffic signal to govern traffic at the intersection of Wadley Avenue and I Street. Fred Baker, public works director, suggested the light would generally flash yellow for Wadley Avenue traffic and be used to stop vehicles only when traffic flow from Midland College onto Wadley Avenue is heavy.

The councilmen — minus Jesse Hatfield, who's recovering from hip surgery, and Gordon Marcum II, who was absent — elected to post a 55 mph speed limit on the portion of Loop 250 from U.S. Highway 80 north to about 2,000 feet east of Holiday Hill Road. The stretch east of Holiday Hill Road to Garfield Street will be 50 mph, and east of Garfield Street to State Highway 349 will be 55 mph.

Loop 250 had been subject to a 45 mph speed limit while under construction.

Speed limit hikes on portions of Illinois and Texas Avenues were also approved. The speed limit on Illinois Avenue, from "A" Street to Andrews Highway, is boosted from 30 to 35 mph, as is the speed limit on Texas Avenue between "A" and "L" streets.

Councilman Tom Sloan suggested the city try to save itself $18,900 by avoiding extensive engineering studies for repairs to crumbling Doug Russell Pool.

Wayne Kohout, parks and recreation director, said the pool needs extensive refurbishing and preliminary studies are a necessary first step.

Sloan questioned whether the studies were necessary and suggested the city instead contact a professional pool contractor to assess the work and make necessary repairs.

"I'd like to send it back to the parks and recreation people and see if we can't cut another $18,900 out," Sloan said. "I'm just saying I don't think that's a necessary first step."

The council instructed Kohout to consult with a pool contractor for an assessment of what repairs are needed.

During the meeting in City Hall Council Chambers, the council also:

—Granted Lee High School a zone change to accommodate expansion of its band hall 12 feet closer to Neely Avenue.

—Voted to waive lighting and tournament fees charged to the Midland Softball Association so the association could use the money to construct a caliche road connecting Lamesa and Hogan Park Roads. The fees were $4,250 for 1982-1983 and could be as much as $13,000 for 1983-1984.

—Granted Midland Community Theatre a temporary beer permit and permission to close Colorado Street between Illinois and Texas Avenues from 1 p.m. to midnight, May 12. The theater group plans a celebration for the Midland opening of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

—Approved on second reading a liquor license for a restaurant in Mesa Verde Shopping Center.

—Approved on first reading liquor licenses for a restaurant on the southeast corner of Big Spring and Palmer Drive and two restaurants in the Mesa Verde Shopping Center, and a beer and wine license for a restaurant in the basement of Claydesta Towers.

—Deferred until April 12 a public hearing on a request by Abbott Development Co. for a specific use permit for a lounge and liquor license in a bowling center to be located northeast of the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Loop 250.

—Deferred until April 12 a public hearing to consider a request, on appeal, by Dale Forse for a specific use permit for a lounge just north of Loop 250 west of Midkiff Road.

Third suspect arrested in double slaying that occured two years ago

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The third of three suspects in a robbery and drug-related double slaying here two years ago has been arrested and is being held by authorities in Savannah, Ga.

Lt. Tommy Jones of the Midland County Sheriff's Department said today that 22-year-old James Irving Posey, also known as James Harris, formerly of Midland, was arrested Tuesday by federal law enforcement officers in Savannah. Details of the arrest were not known.

Posey was indicted by a Midland County grand jury on two counts of capital murder in the case and a warrant for his arrest was issued in June 1981. He is being held in Chatham County Jail at Savannah.

Posey is charged in the May 31, 1981, deaths of 26-year-old Charles Cole and 18-year-old Tracy Endres, both of 507 Spraberry Drive. They had been shot once in the head with Cole's own gun, a .38-caliber pistol. Both bodies were found fully clothed in an east bedroom of the residence. Cole was an alleged cocaine dealer.

The couple had been dead about 12 hours when their bodies were found by neighbors the morning of June 1. Police said there was no sign of a struggle. A Doberman pinscher belonging to the couple was unharmed.

Another suspect in the case, 23-year-old Milton Clyde "Papa" Keith, received a 46-year prison sentence following his Jan. 8, 1982, conviction on charges of murdering the Endres woman. He was not tried in Cole's death.

A second suspect, 22-year-old Ollie Kemp, received a 25-year, plea-bargained sentence in return for his testimony in the case.

According to trial testimony, the motive for the murders was 47 grams of cocaine and $18,000 in cash. Keith allegedly masterminded a robbery of the couple, but maintained throughout the trial that Posey was the actual triggerman in the slayings.

"It is not known at this time if Posey will fight extradition," said Jones. If he does, it might take up to three months to return him to Midland.

Program pits friend against friend

LEWISVILLE (AP) — In the past 10 days, news reports have made this Dallas suburb famous, as well as infamous. And all the attention is leaving many townspeople longing for a return to obscurity.

The issue that has attracted national interest is a 7-month-old drug informer program instituted at the town's only high school.

Under the program, any of Lewisville High School's 2,220 students can be paid up to $100 for providing "information leading to the arrest and conviction of another student who is using or selling drugs."

So far, 30 students have been turned in; drugs — mostly marijuana — were found on 15. The Parent Teacher Student Association, which sponsors the program, so far has paid $450 to student informers.

The informer program has received widespread news coverage. It has been investigated, disected and criticized. It has been called a last-ditch attempt to solve a desperate drug problem. It has been labeled a snitch tactic, pitting friend against friend.

Lewisville, though, sees the issues quite a bit differently.

"The media makes it seem as if Lewisville High School has this great big drug problem, which it doesn't, and that there's this great big controversy about the program, which there isn't," says Cathy Quagliana, a senior at the high school and editor of the school newspaper, Farmers' Harvest. "People don't understand what the big deal is."

According to interviews with students, parents and community leaders, Miss Quagliana's view is shared by most of the 30,000 residents of Lewisville, a former farming community just 23 miles from downtown Dallas.

Today, the town is the home of people who commute to jobs in Denton, Dallas and at Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, says Marjorie Head, secretary of the town's chamber of commerce. But Lewisville still is proud of its heritage; the high school's athletic teams are the Fighting Farmers, whose emblem is painted on a Lewisville water tower.

The town works to maintain its small-town atmosphere, says Ms. Head.

Says City Councilman Bill Cross: "There are a lot more families here than single people, and they are conservative families."

This conservatism, says Cross, has shown itself in the town's defense of the drug informer program. Cross himself equates the program with the honor system at a military academy, and he applauds the idea.

"The real thing you don't have anymore is honor, like at West Point or the Naval Academy," he says. "Honor is the most important thing a person can have. When I was young, if you saw somebody do something wrong, you called the police. Nowadays, I see people not getting involved."

The school's principal, Douglas Killough, instigated the drug informer program after coming to Lewisville last summer from Alabama, where he operated a similar program.

Under the rules, a student who gives a tip receives $50 in cash if drugs are found on the suspect. The money has been donated by Lewisville businesses and individual residents. Either the pricipal or an assistant principal conducts a search of the suspect's pockets or purse. The identity of the tipster is closely guarded.

Of the 15 students found with drugs through the informer program, all were reported to the Lewisville police, remanded to the custody of their parents and expelled from school. The maximum expulsion time is one year. Formal drug rehabilitation is not offered by the school district, nor is it mandatory.

Mark Allen, 16, a sophomore at the school, says he is one of the students who was searched. A couple of weeks ago, he says, he was pulled out of biology class and taken to the principal's office, where he was asked to empty his pockets and wallet. No drugs were found.

The action was taken, he says, because someone saw a friend repay a loan and thought it looked like a drug deal. "They said someone had seen us exchange money," Allen says. "But they didn't have nothing (on me)."

Angered by the experience, he opposes the drug informer program. 'It was humiliating," he says.

Yet he, like most students, has not gone before the student council, school administrators or the PTSA to raise questions about the program.

In fact, before this month, the only public opposition to the program was voiced in three unsigned letters to the editor published in a Lewisville newspaper in September.

One of the letter-writers, Tony Methvin, 18, a senior at the high school, now openly discusses his feelings. He originally wanted to be anonymous, he says, because of the pressures of living in a small town.

"If I put my name on that letter and I was one of only five people in town who felt that way, there's a lot of flak I would get," he says.

But since he appeared on a national network morning news show last week to debate principal Killough, says Methvin, he hasn't received any of the expected criticism.

"I think if people had strong opinions one way or another," he says, "some difference in the atmosphere at the school would have occurred. But since most people are lackadaisical and don't have any opinion about it, there hasn't been any change."

Methvin says the main agument anyone has voiced against the program is that it offers a monetary reward. "They're afraid of the ramifications of money being dangled in front of someone's face," he says. "A student may be willing to make up some information or get someone they don't like in trouble."

But not all the informers have taken the reward, says John Zepka, who co-chairs the PTSA with his wife, Kathy. Mrs. Zepka confirms the PTSA has made nine payments of $50 each.

The Zepkas are among the program's most ardent supporters.

"We did it to help the children, and it' coming out so differently, like we're infringing on their rights," says Kathy Zepka. "That's not the way it is at all."

And both are determined to stand by the community's feelings.

"The phone calls received at the school, at the administration office, at my house are completely in favor (of the program), overwhelingly in favor, might add," says John Zepka.

B'nai B'rith donates $850

Permian Basin Chapter 2409 of B'nai B'rith has donated $850 to Midland County in expressing appreciation for the county lending the Midland County Exhibit Building grounds for a B'nai B'rith fund-raising carnival.

"We so appreciate what you fellows have done for us," County Judge Bill Ahders told three representatives of the organization.

The funds were used to improve the building's kitchen facilities.

"It's well received," Commissioner C. Wallace "Wally" Craig told the threesome, Michael Abrams, chapter president, and David Hoff and Stanley Saikin.

Funds raised by the chapter are used to benefit charities.

Aspirins can poison

As few as 12 aspirins in a 24-hour period can induce mild poisoning, called salicylism. Symptoms include headache, dizziness, ringing in the ears, dimness of vision, mental confusion, drowsiness, sweating, thirst, hyperventilation and nausea. Even deafness can occur.

Pit bulldogs are looking for homes

"I would hope somebody would adopt them," said Dettman. "I could see why someone would be hesitant (to adopt them) because of their prior treatment. They might not make the best family pet. I think some of them are purebred."

Dettman said he would do "everything in my power" to ensure that those people convicted of cruelty to animals don't get the dogs.

"I don't think it would be proper for the people who were convicted of cruelty to animals to bid on them," he said.

"It (the auction) is better than giving them back to their owners," Dettman said. "I think we're doing the right thing."

Cruelty to animals is a Class A — the highest order — misdemeanor, which is punishable by a one-year jail term and/or a $2,000 fine.

"Our position is still the same," Dettman said of the county attorney's stance on cruelty to animals. "Whether it's starving a horse, torturing a cat or fighting a dog, I'm going to prosecute to the best of my ability."

Absentee voting turnout is high

Travels planned for the Easter weekend probably contributed to the higher than usual turnout in absentee voting in Midland and Greenwood. Absentee polls closed Tuesday afternoon.

According to Elections Administrator Janice Builta, 893 absentee Midland County voters cast ballots for candidates in the Midland city, hospital and school races.

Last spring, 716 absentee votes were counted in Midland County.

In Greenwood, where six persons, including one incumbent, are seeking two seats on the Greenwood Independent School District Board of Trustees, 91 persons cast early votes.

Woman critical after fire

ODESSA — The city fire marshal's office is investigating the cause of an early morning fire that injured a 6-year-old girl and left her mother in critical condition with burns to 80 percent of her body.

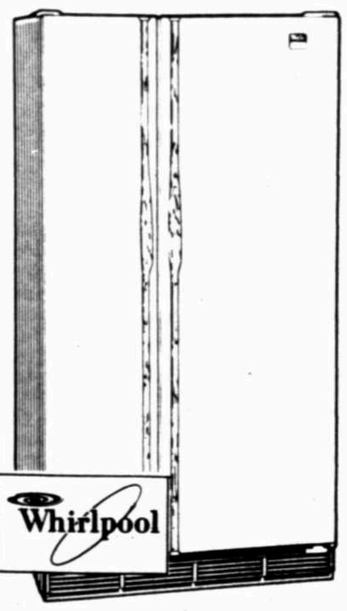

Kim Dansvey, 24, was flown to Lubbock General Hospital with second and third degree burns suffered in the blaze, which broke out about 5 a.m. in the 1500 block of Palimar Street, according to fire officials. The exact address was not immediately known.

The woman's daughter, 6-year-old Heather, was released from Medical Center Hospital following treatment for minor facial burns.

Men jailed in drug scheme

BRYAN (AP) — Four men were held in Brazos County jail here in lieu of $50,000 bonds each in connection with a scheme to smuggle Jamaican marijuana on board a small plane.

Teacher paints the town with love

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

Not only do many of Midland's elderly, handicapped and low income residents get facelifts for their homes, but Christmas in April helps strengthen the community's foundation, says Pearlie Johnson.

That is what is important, said Mrs. Johnson, a member of the Christmas in April board of directors.

The program is Midland's only volunteer housing repair project designed to benefit the elderly, handicapped and low income.

Volunteers will meet April 7 at the First National Bank, Wall Street, to select a dwelling in need of repairs to match their skills.

Midland will hum with activity, Saturday, April 30, as 2,500-3,500 volunteers from churches, civic groups and businesses paint, roof and revamp heating and plumbing systems.

For four years, Mrs. Johnson, a third grade teacher at Ben Milam Elementary School, has been involved in Christmas in April.

"The joy is when you get together and know you are doing something good," she said.

A member of the city's Human Relations Council, formed to ease the tension of racial integration in the '60s, Mrs. Johnson learned about CIA through her involvement on the council.

"I thought it was marvelous the (were fixing up people's houses.

As a member of the Negro Business and Professional Women's Club, Mrs. Johnson, a 24-year resident, has volunteered her elbow grease to fix up Midland's substandard houses.

The first year she volunteered, she said, her organization selected a house which needed a new interior paint job. What the women did not think about, she said, was moving heavy furniture.

The last three years the group has stuck to painting exteriors to avoid lifting furniture.

Last year, she said, the group had a house divided into three levels. "Our ladders were not high enough so one of our members got on the roof and leaned over the edge to scrape paint off the outside of the house.

We got a man with a higher ladder to help us."

After three years of climbing up and down ladders for CIA, Mrs. Johnson chuckled, "I have overcome my fear of heights."

Looking forward to picking the house her organization will work on this year, Johnson said, "we do not have expertise in anything but slinging a paintbrush.

We can scrape paint, put on primer and paint, but we have not tried roofing yet," she said.

I do sling a mean paintbrush," she added smiling.

Although the official work day is April 30, volunteer groups often roll up their sleeves and begin repairs before that day, Johnson said. "If a new roof is not completed on April 30, volunteers will work until the job is completed.

Some projects, she said, have taken a year to finish.

They've done over some homes you would not believe," she said. "They have restructured houses."

Other eligible homes which do not get rejuvenated during April are worked on during the year.

Most people who end up with homes that are better places to live are very grateful, Mrs. Johnson said. "They are glad someone is there to do the repairs. Whether they are grateful is not the point," she said. "We do not do this for thanks. We do this for self satisfaction in helping our fellow man."

The pleasure she gets from assisting others, she said, keeps her active in Christmas in April.

"It is so rewarding to stand back and look at a pretty good paint job you did."

Although it involves work, Mrs. Johnson said, she believes in having a good time while participating in a good cause. "We visit while we work. The comradeship is fun.

The Christmas in April board member is sold on the program because there are no government strings attached.

We get volunteers to contribute materials and labor. The funds go where they are supposed to go. It is a way to help without government involvement.

With the economy the way it is," she said, "who can afford house repairs? Instead of letting a house fall apart, we fix it up."

The program is a tribute to Midland, she said.

She compares the program with an old fashioned barn-raising. "Instead of raising barns, we help people repair their houses."

French tradition of friendly concierge preserved

The Los Angeles Times- Washington Post News Service

PARIS — In this computer age when travelers are often reduced to blurred numbers on a hotel printout, it is nice to know that the French tradition of the conscientiously friendly concierge is persevering.

Embodied in the hotel employee wearing a set of crossed keys on his lapel, the concierge is the person with the unenviable task of, among many things, making unhappy guests happy and finding a room for a person with a reservation when there is no room available.

With a constant smile and a knowing nod, he also at times must function as a travel agent, tour guide, medical aide, secretary, adviser, valet and confessor. And if unable or unwilling to carry out certain tasks, he at least should know someone who will. All you have to do is just ask.

"The motto of the concierge is that the guest is to be served," says Jean Gillet, who should know. The concierge of the Hotel Meurice for 16 years and now its general manager, Gillet also is past president of the Les Clefs d'Or, the French Professional Union of Portiers of the Grand Hotels, and the holder of the title "Grand Concierge International."

In serving the guest, Gillet says the concierge should consider no requests odd or impossible, whether it be securing tickets to a sold-out opera, a seat on an overbooked plane, the choice table at a four-star restaurant or a doghouse in the middle of the night. He has done it all.

The request for the doghouse was made by an American, not for a dog but for himself. He explained to Gillet that he had been "naughty" the night before, much to the chagrin of his wife, and thought if a doghouse were placed in their luxurious suite for him to lie in his wife would be assuaged. Apparently she was.

Gillet would not disclose who the "well-known" American was and was hesitant to relate other odd stories. He feels strongly that concierges should not talk about their guests, declaring, "Our philosophy is to protect them."

The son of a concierge, the 59-year-old Gillet grew up in a hotel, taking to the profession naturally. He stresses that the calling is very much a profession, noting that he is a graduate of a Swiss university where he majored in hotel administration and is fluent in four languages. And to top that he has a firm handshake and a disarming smile.

Founded in 1929 by Gillet's father, Ferdinand, the very select Les Clefs d'Or has about 6,000 members. It also has an international branch of about 4,000 members. They tend to be clubby, Gillet says, exchanging information about tour groups, travel agents and deadbeats while doing favors for one another, such as making unavailable rooms available for select guests.

Although the role of the concierge reflects a distant time when travel was generally limited to a leisure class that expected such services, Gillet believes it is needed more than ever. "With travel today so hectic and impersonal, it is important that the traveler feel particularly comfortable in the hotel," says the Grand Concierge. "The hotel should be a refuge."

For this reason, Gillet notes, more and more hotels are either reviving the position of concierge or creating new positions. "Any hotel can provide a bed," he says, "but the reason why one hotel can charge much more for that bed than another hotel and get it is the service they provide. And critical to that service is the concierge."

The services of the concierge, as well as other hotel employees, are calculated and included in the charge for a room. Of course, gratuities for particular services outside normal hotel operations, such as making nightclub reservations or obtaining a baby sitter, are always welcome.

Zinfandels: Excellent wines

Copley News Service

One of the sadder developments in California's recession-hit wine industry in the last two years is the public's lack of interest in Zinfandel.

Where once Zinfandel was considered the red wine of the state's future, suddenly it has fallen from favor. It's still heavily planted, but many Zinfandels sitting on store shelves are not selling, and that's too bad.

A well-made Zinfandel can be a great joy. But then the question arises: What should a good Zinfandel be?

After two columns in which I contended that most Zinfandel doesn't age gracefully, I have been chided (perhaps that's too polite a word) by wine makers who feel I am wrong. They argued that I'm not appreciative of old Zinfandel, and besides, they said, I shouldn't be advertising the fact that Zinfandel isn't selling. They said that would lend credence to the situation and things would get worse.

The current sad state of Zinfandel isn't my doing, and by reporting on it I doubt that I'm aggravating the situation — but this column is intended to point the way to a better understanding of this variety and perhaps lead to discovery of a few good values.

Zinfandel, in my view, can be made in one of four major styles:

• Delicate: Similar to Beaujolais, this is the way California Zinfandel used to be made. It is soft, quaffable, has little tannin and may even be chilled. Not many wine makers make their Zinfandels in this style, but one who does, in a most appealing manner, is Fetzer Vineyards. Its new 1980 Lake County Zinfandel is light in alcohol (12.4 percent) and has a strawberrylike aroma.

• Medium-Bodied: This is the most popular style of Zinfandel. It's the style that popularized the variety in the 1970s, and there is still some demand for it today, albeit diminishing. These wines usually have alcohol in the 12.5 to 13.5 range and the wines are usually aged in American oak, yielding a slight vanilla component in the aroma. Chateau Montelena, Hacienda, Cassayre-Forni, Caymus, Martini and a host of others still make wine this way. The better ones age nicely for a few years. One good example is the new 1980 Sutter Home; a wine of charm and richness that will take some aging. Ridge Vineyards in Cupertino makes some of the best Zinfandels in the state, and most of them are in this style. Ridge's best from year to year are those with the designation York Creek.

• Late Harvest: Wines made from grapes picked with high natural sugars. They usually have aromas more like port, raisins or prunes, and they have high alcohol levels (usually over 14.5 percent), and occasionally residual sugar and gobs of tannin. Many of these wines are impossible to serve with any food, and it is this style that has given Zinfandel a bad name. Carneros Creek Winery used to make wine this way until wine maker Frank Mahoney realized they do not age. They simply lose their fruit, retain their harsh tannin and alcohol and become clumsy oafs.

• Claret: This is the style that seems to be gaining popularity in a strange sort of way. Very few wine makers attempt it, but those who do are revered by the Zin "in" crowd. Wine made in this style is aged in French oak, and thus is quite similar in some ways to Cabernet Sauvignon. After many years in bottle, some of these wines do a sort of Rich Little impersonation of Cabernet.

The claret style was pioneered and perfected by Bernard Portet of Clos du Val. Portet makes modest, lean, thoughtful wines; they are not big, rich and bold.

And his newly released 1980 is perfectly true to the form. The wine shows its European-type handling and breed.

"I think it's the most claret style of all the wines I've made," said Portet. "It's slightly less powerful than the '79, but it's fruitier. It's the only wine I've made that I could drink two weeks after bottling, but I think it will age for at least ten years."

Another excellent claret-style Zinfandel is the 1980 Iron Horse, an excellent value. In a small six-acre plot, wine maker Forest Tancer planted 800 vines per acre instead of the normal 400, and then he pruned back the vines heavily. The result was more concentration of flavor, yet the wine has none of the late-harvest, port-type aroma.

To wrap up, I like Zinfandel and prefer the medium-body and claret approaches. It's a shame that the late harvest style has hurt the image of the variety, since it can offer a wonderful match for food.

Rock lobster tails suit Lenten meals

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

DEAR CECILY: My husband often orders broiled South African lobster tails when we go to a seafood restaurant. During Lent I'd like to broil them at home for him and a few guests. I'd be grateful if you would tell me how to do so. I'd also like to know how to cook the lobster tails to use for a salad or for lobster rolls. — EAGER.

DEAR EAGER: There's a way I particularly like to prepare South African lobster tails for broiling.

Use lobster tails that weigh from 4 to 6 ounces. Thaw them by holding them under running cold water. With a sharp heavy knife, cut through the hard shell down the center of each (including the thin flat part of the tail) and through the flesh, taking care not to cut through the underside membrane. Or with a kitchen scissors, cut through the hard shell down the center of each (including the thin flat part of the tail); then with a sharp knife cut down through the flesh of each, taking care not to cut through the underside membrane. With your hands, bend each tail so it opens as flatly as possible. Wrap a small piece of foil over the end of each tail to prevent scorching.

Place the tails, flesh side down, in a single layer in a foil-lined shallow pan. Broil about 4 inches from high heat for 5 minutes. Turn the tails flesh side up; cup foil around tails; spoon the sauce you are using over the flesh. Continue broiling until flesh is opaque through (test by cutting into a tail) — 5 to 10 minutes more. Remove foil from tails.

To cook 4- to 6-ounce South African lobster tails for use in lobster salad or lobster rolls, thaw the tails under cold running water. Drop them into a generous amount of boiling water. When the water comes to a boil again, boil the tails until the flesh is opaque through — 4 to 5 minutes. Drain at once and drench with cold water.

Almonds versatile

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

The versatile seed known as the almond once appeared in only a few desserts and candies, or was munched salted. Today the almond plays a role in all three daily meals.

For breakfast, it gives a lift to pancake, waffle and muffin batter. And fresh sliced fruits get a boost from a dollop of yogurt sprinkled with almonds.

For lunch, many salads are improved when sprinkled with chopped almonds, and they add crunch to cottage cheese and tunafish.

Oriental cooks lean heavily on almonds for their main dishes, and Italian pasta is improved with almonds included in the sauce.

In desserts, of course, almonds have long played an important role. Tortes are delicious when ground almonds are used in place of flour, and ice cream scoops become festive when roiled in toasted almonds.

The almond grows on a tree that has a gray-green fruit that resembles a small, elongated peach. The almond is concealed inside the pit.

The almond tree does not pollinate itself and must be grown in an orchard that includes other trees. Growers usually bring bees to the orchard during the February bloom to help pollinate the alternating rows of almond trees.

Here's a recipe for Almond Fettucini.

8 ounces thin egg noodles
¼ cup butter or margarine
1 cup grated Parmesan cheese
¾ cup blanched, slivered almonds, toasted
½ cup whipped cream
2 tablespoons sliced green onions

Cook noodles in boiling, salted water in large saucepan as package directs. Turn into colander to drain. In same pan, melt butter; stir in noodles. Heat and gently toss 2 minutes. Add remaining ingredients. Toss lightly to mix and serve. Makes 4 servings. Good with a dry white wine, well chilled.

THE BUTCHER

Best sausage often homemade

By MERLE ELLIS

As longtime readers of "The Butcher" are aware, I'm something of a sausage freak. I love it in almost any form. Homemade summer sausage is one of my favorites. It is evidently one of yours as well. Several years ago, I shared with you a receipe for "Easy Beef Salami" which was at that time one of my family's favorite summer sausage-type recipes.

Since then, dozens of you have written to share your favorite summer sausage recipe with us. What follows is a collection of recipes for a variety of different summer sausages, all tried and found true in my kitchen but conceived in some of yours. I have taken the liberty of changing the proportions in some and adding an ingredient or two in others in order to make each recipe yield four approximately one-pound sausages after cooking.

SUMMER SAUSAGE NO. 1

3 tablespoons curing salt
4 tablespoons dry red wine
2 tablespoons liquid smoke
1-1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
2 tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons pepper flakes
1-1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
2 tablespoons brown sugar

Mix all of the ingredients together in a large bowl. Then dip in with both hands and blend thoroughly. It is important that the ingredients, particularly the curing salt, be blended well. Cover the bowl and refrigerate for 24 hours. Mix again two or three times during the next 24 hours to help the spices permeate the meat and the curing salt to do its job of flavoring and producing a nice color.

Divide the meat into four equal portions and roll each into a log-shaped roll 2 to 3 inches in diameter and 6 to 8 inches in length. Roll each in nylon netting and tie the ends securely with string.

Bake on a rack in a 225-degree oven for 4 hours, rolling them back and forth from time to time so they don't flatten out on one side.

After baking, allow the sausage to cool and remove the netting. Dry thoroughly with paper towels. Wrap in aluminum foil and refrigerate.

SUMMER SAUSAGE NO. 2

5 pounds lean ground beef (This one is very good using a coarse "chili grind" ground beef.)
4 teaspoon coarse ground black pepper
3-1/2 teaspoons mustard seeds
2 teaspoons garlic powder
2 teaspoons seasoned salt
2 teaspoons liquid smoke
3 tablespoons curing salt

Proceed as described above.

SUMMER SAUSAGE NO. 3

5 pounds lean ground beef
1 cup dry white wine
1 cup Parmesan cheese
3 tablespoons curing salt
3 tablespoons Italian seasoning
2 or 3 cloves of garlic, finely minced
2 tablespoons white pepper

Proceed as described above.

Notes:

It is important to use a "complete cure" curing salt, that is a mixture of salt, sugar and sodium nitrite or nitrate in the proper proportions for home use. Two companies making such a curing salt are: Morton's — "Tender Quick" and B. Heller's — "Complete Cure With Sugar." To help blend the curing salt well into the meat, first mix the cure with any liquid called for in the recipe.

Nylon netting is available at any yard goods store and it is quite inexpensive. Using netting allows the sausage to dry in the cooking process, which acts as a preservative. Aluminum foil can be used instead of nylon netting, but since the aluminum foil holds in all the juices, the sausage will be less dry and will not keep as long in the refrigerator.

The reason for the low (225-degree) heat for a relatively long cooking time is to aid in the drying process. If aluminum foil is used, increase the oven temperature to 325-degrees and reduce the cooking time to two hours.

DEAR ABBY

Name change costs woman's fortune

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I had to write after reading the letter from the "Proud Orlikoffs," who were upset when their son married a woman named Reilly and he changed his name to Reilly instead of insisting that she change her name to Orlikoff.

My brother, Edward Moravitz, married a girl who thought Moravitz sounded too ethnic, so she nagged him until he changed their name to Moore.

After Edward passed away (unfortunately at a much too early age), my mother, in making out her will, left the following bequests:

"To my two grandchildren, I leave $25,000 each. And to my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Edward Moore, I leave $1,000 — the other $24,000 she can get from some family by the name of Moore."

I hope you print this. Don't worry about embarrassing anybody. I've changed all the names, but the idea is the same. — OLGA IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR OLGA: Let's hear it from a man who takes the woman's part in this name-changing controversy:

DEAR ABBY: The "Proud Orlikoffs" felt that their son was abandoning his heritage when he changed his name to "Reilly," which is his fiancee's name.

I ask you: What about the proud Reillys? Why should the woman be expected to change her name to her spouse's just because of an outdated custom?

A man who changes his name to his wife's name is not disgracing his family any more than she would be had she changed her name to his.

Too bad we can't all do as Eleanor Roosevelt did — marry a person with the same last name. — OHIO MALE

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column a few months ago from a daughter whose father had developed a relationship with a lady shortly after the death of his wife, who had lost a long battle with cancer. It hit home with me because my father very lovingly nursed my mother through six years of cancer before we lost her. My father was devoted to Mom for over 30 years — and especially those last six.

About two months after Mom's death, Dad met a lovely lady. There were some unkind comments from family members about the short mourning period he gave Mom. Almost two years later, he still mourns Mom, and this lovely lady understands his grief and comforts him. They have a very caring relationship. Neither one is ready for marriage, but they find it financially advantageous to live together. Now they're getting pressure from family members who want them to get married.

I support my father in his decision as long as he is happy and comfortable with the relationship.

My point: Where do family members get off judging and putting pressure on a man who has lost a beloved wife, and now has a second chance at happiness? No one will ever take Mom's place in our hearts. But Mom is gone, and Dad must go on living.

I hope you'll print this so others won't judge a situation unless they've been there. — A LOVING DAUGHTER IN NEW MEXICO

DEAR LOVING: Amen.

Repairing appliances begins at home

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

Home appliance repairs by consumers are becoming more common because of the high cost of repair service. Know your limitations before attempting any repairs, and start out with simple tasks to develop your skills. You may find that repairing your own appliances is easier than you think.

Determine whether repair is really needed. Be sure that the appliance is plugged in, and that a fuse is not blown or a breaker tripped. This will eliminate wasted time or service calls.

Before you begin your repairs, find the manual or instruction sheet that came with the appliance, and re-read it. Make a habit of keeping manuals in a central place so that they can be found quickly and easily.

Many "do-it-yourself" repair books are available commercially or through appliance companies. You may also find pamphlets and workshops offered in your community.

Each job will require different tools, but it is good to start out with a few basic good quality items. Add extra tools as additional skills are developed.

Beginners usually need a claw-type hammer and several screwdrivers, both blade and Phillips head types, in various sizes. Adjustable wrenches are useful, as are both slip joint and needle nose pliers.

Other handy items include a spray can of silicone and a can of all-purpose oil to free rusty, clogged or stuck areas. Scrap fabric or "rags" are needed to clean appliances and hands.

For your own safety, be sure the appliance is unplugged or turned off before you tackle a repair job.

Remember that some repair jobs can be avoided by following the use and care manuals that come with the appliance. Keep all appliances cleaned and oiled, and change filters as needed. Preventive maintenance may prolong the life of your appliances.

Food grades, shields, benefit consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — What's the difference between USDA Prime Beef and USDA Choice beef?

A recent survey sponsored by the Closure Manufacturers Association (CMA) indicates that 64 percent of consumers could benefit from additional information for their shopping decisions. Of these, 26 percent said they were not sure what government food grades and shields stood for.

"Food grading is a service consumers can rely on to get the most out of their food dollar," said John B. Carroll, vice president of CMA, producer of container caps for prepared fruits, vegetables, juices and snacks.

"Government agencies and food packers developed this efficient system of grades and symbols to provide a uniform standard of quality for meat, poultry, fruit and vegetables and dairy products."

Government food grades, which are issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), first appeared during World War I.

To help promote understanding of these grades and other quality indicators, the CMA offers these tips:

— U.S. Prime grade beef and lamb is the tenderest, juiciest and most flavorful, with abundant "marbling" (flecks of fat) within the lean. USDA Choice grade is high quality with slightly less marbling. USDA Good is leaner, lacking some juiciness and flavor.

— Select poultry by its age, grade and size. U.S. Grade "A" is top quality — the most meaty and attractive. Young smaller birds such as fryers, broilers or fryer roasts are most suitable for barbecuing, frying, broiling or roasting. The less tender mature birds, often called fowl or hen, serve well for stewing, baking, soups and salads.

— In prepared fruits and vegetables in jars, cans and frozen food sections, Grade A are the best, most uniform, flavorful and juicy.

"Closure-sealed foods packed in clear glass jars offer visible evidence of their quality in color, uniformity and lack of blemishes," said Carroll. "Thus, many packers select the very best grades to 'show off' in jars."

— Grades for raw fruits and vegetables — U.S. Fancy (premium quality), U.S. No. 1 (good quality and the most prevalent), U.S. No. 2 and U.S. No. 3 — are used to a limited extent in sales from retailer to consumer. The largest fruits and vegetables are not necessarily the best and less than perfect-looking produce can be good value, provided there's no substantial trimming of waste.

— Grade "A" means pasteurized milk that meets established standards for wholesomeness. For whole milk, fat content is a minimum of 3.25 percent; lowfat milk, from 0.5 to 2 percent milkfat and fortified with Vitamin A; skim milk has less than 0.5 percent milk-fat and added Vitamin A. Cream is 18-30 percent butterfat; half and half, 10.5-18 percent. For dairy products, check the stamped freshness date on the package.

— The USDA butter grade shields "AA" and "A" are found on 70 percent of all dairy case packages. They indicate level of flavor, aroma, texture, spreadability and quality of the milk from which the butter is made. All butter contains at least 80 percent milkfat. Margarine is not similarly graded.

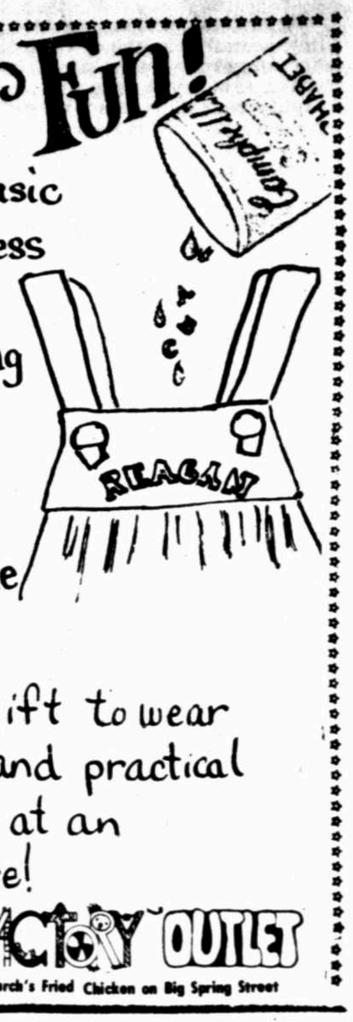

— U.S. Grade "AA" (Fresh Fancy) and Grade "A" eggs are especially good for frying and poaching; Grade "B" are used mainly in recipes and baking. But shell color or size does not affect quality or nutritive value.

Leftover spinach pie

Associated Press

Every year since the early 1970s my colleague, Jonathan Dudley, has given an Easter Buffet Lunch. He was inspired to plan the first one because he found an appealing main-dish pie recipe in a New York newspaper. Since then the recipe has appeared in two cookbooks, one published in 1974 and one in 1975. All three recipes annointed the pie with an Italian name. Jonathan calls his version of it simply Easter Spinach Pie.

It's a big pie, made in a 10-inch pie plate to serve eight people with hefty appetites. When Jonathan invites two or three times that number he makes two or three pies, wraps them appropriately and stores them in the freezer for anywhere from one to four weeks. Before serving, he unwraps and thaws them and heats them in a preheated 375-degree oven for about an hour. (If the top crusts brown too much, he places sheets of foil over them.) He says the pies do not need to be served hotter than hot — they can stand for 15 to 30 minutes on the buffet table.

A salad of sliced tomatoes and sweet onion or chunks of avocado and cherry tomatoes dressed with a vinaigrette sauce accompany the pie.

Two 10-ounce packages frozen chopped spinach
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 medium onions (each 4 ounces), finely chopped
1 pound cooked ham, diced (½ inch)
1½ cups grated Parmesan cheese
1 cup ricotta cheese
Salt and pepper to taste
Pastry for a 10-inch double-crust pie (based on 3 cups flour)

In a large bowl, beat eggs until foamy.

Cook spinach according to package directions, turn into a strainer to drain and press out liquid.

In a 10-inch skillet, in the hot oil, gently cook onion until wilted — about 5 minutes. Stir spinach and onion into eggs with ham, Parmesan, ricotta, salt and pepper.

Line a 10-inch pie plate with half the pastry. Add spinach mixture. Cover with remaining pastry; cut 6 one-inch vents in it; seal and flute edges.

Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven on the rack below center until golden — about 40 minutes. Let stand on a wire rack 10 minutes before serving.

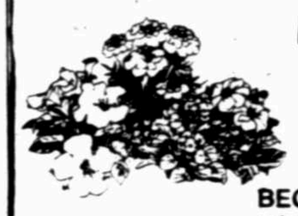

Makes 8 servings.

Conscientious objectors in Switzerland may be jailed

FRIBOURG, Switzerland (AP) — In tiny, neutral Switzerland, which has not fought a foreign war in 468 years, few institutions are more highly respected than its well-trained army of citizen soldiers.

The army consistently scores high in public opinion polls.

When Swiss men turn 20, they do 17 weeks of basic military training. Then, after a mandatory year of active duty, they are obliged to be ready the rest of their lives to defend Switzerland's place in central Europe. Arms, ammunition, and green-gray uniforms are taken out of home closets for periodic refresher exercises.

"It's really a break from the routine, to go out and throw hand gernades and sleep in a tent," says a student in the university town of Lausanne. "They might complain about it, but I think most Swiss enjoy the diversion."

Nevertheless, Swiss men increasingly are refusing to bear arms, for religious, political or ethical reasons. Last year, there were 729 conscientious objectors; the year before, 593, then a record. Twenty years ago, there were just 70 such cases.

In Switzerland, military tribunals try and sentence the objectors to jail.

The policy, without parallel in Western Europe, draws criticism from human rights organizations, notably Amnesty International.

"The government's failure to establish an alternative civilian service has meant that every year hundreds of citizens are convicted for the exercise of their conscientiously held beliefs, contrary to internationally recognized norms," Amnesty has said.

Switzerland appears every year on Amnesty's list of countries keeping "prisoners of conscience."

Five years ago, Swiss voters rejected, by an 8-5 margin, a proposal to exempt conscientious objectors from the army. A proposed constitutional amendment that would end the policy of jailing objectors might come before voters next year.

"It's a scandal that in Switzerland, human rights are violated this way almost every day," said Michael Tschanz, who quietly campaigns for an alternative service which would require conscientious objectors to do extended humanitarian and "peace-building" tasks.

Jail terms for objectors seldom are longer than 10 months. But after they've served the sentence, objectors continue to pay a penalty, says Tschanz. They suffer job and housing discrimination, he says, and "are apt to pay a long time."

"The Swiss society believes a lot in the military, that's for sure."

On occasion, though, conscientious objection can assume almost folkloric dimensions, as in the case of Francis "Fritz the Objector" Perrin, a writer whose refusal to bear arms brought him a five-month prison sentence.

Before he was caught, Perrin lived and worked for two years in the Alpine pastures of southwest Switzerland. He occasionally surfaced to give interviews.

George-Andre Chavallaz, head of the Federal Department of Military Affairs, says a top-notch army is essential, even in neutral Switzerland.

"We aren't living in a psychedelic paradise where angels take the hands of devils or where wolves become lambs," Chavallaz said in a speech two years ago in this university town.

Chavallaz likes to point out that, compared to the 400,000 Swiss on active duty in a given year, the number of conscientious objectors is small. And, it is noted, changes last year made it somewhat easier for one to fulfill national obligations by serving in non-military sectors of the army.

Under the proposed constitutional amendment, objectors would be able to serve the country by such work as helping the elderly, handicapped or disaster victims, or perhaps environmental tasks. But their stint would be 1½ times longer than the active military commitment.

The proposed amendment is probably doomed, however, because it permits what critics say is tantamount to a free choice between the army and civilian service.

The federal government and Parliament have rejected the proposed constitutional amendment.

In its message last year, the government said, "The free choice... really means to abolish the general obligation to serve (which) permits our country to keep a strong army without making excessive demands. ...To refuse to participate in the defense of the country...is as grave as refusing to pay the taxes that are indispensable to the state."

Reagan years have 'split personality'

LEADVILLE, Colo. (AP) — Gov. Richard Lamm tried to make a connection between the state of the nation and the length of women's hemlines, but found that fashion and economics in the Reagan years apparently have a split personality.

At a recent luncheon for business executives, the governor noted that during the Depression, skirt lengths took a plunge, while during the prosperous 60s, hemlines crept up well past the knee.

During the Reagan era, he said, he's puzzled by a certain ambiguity: "Hemlines now are just below the knee," the governor said, "but split to the thigh."

Lamm was unable to explain how that might reflect supply-side economics.

Retired senators will attempt to cure the Senate's ills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Someone once asked James B. Pearson how the U.S. Senate could improve upon its often meandering and cumbersome ways. "I told them I'd be very glad to provide them with an orderly Senate if they'd provide me with an orderly world," he recalls.

In the last few months Pearson, who retired in 1978 after 16 years as a Republican Kansas senator, has been beating the bushes himself for ideas to bring the Senate to some semblance of efficiency.

Pearson and former colleague Abraham Ribicoff, a Connecticut Democrat, last year were designated a two-man troubleshooting team to try to lead the Senate out of the morass of rules which lately have been used to tie the body into parliamentary knots.

"Everybody's so unhappy up there" on Capitol Hill, says Pearson, now a Washington attorney. "My old friends I talked to seemed so frustrated that we decided to do something rather radical."

Precisely what steps Pearson and Ribicoff will recommend won't be known for about a month, when the Senate Rules Committee releases their report on how the body does — or doesn't do — its business.

But he said in an interview that the recommendations will be "sweeping," covering rules for bringing up amendments, ending filibusters and taking roll-call votes. There also will be recommendations in the sensitive area of committee assignments and jurisdiction.

"We got to feeling like we were a surgeon who opened up a patient and found he was sicker than we thought he was," Pearson said. "So we figured if we're going to have a fight anyway (over the proposals), we might as well have a big fight."

He said the recommendations will in part be an effort to balance the body's traditional respect for minority and individual rights against the need to free the Senate from obstructionism.

"It is to see if somehow for the sake of orderliness and organization we can restrict the rights of everyone just a little bit. That's about the only way I can see you can do it," Pearson said.

Among the most discouraged with the Senate's seeming inability to control itself is Majority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Pearson said.

In recent months the body has been tied up by one individual senator after another, many of them members of the Republican majority. Freshman Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis., for example, frustrated the leadership for a week with an amendment to a recession-relief bill on an unrelated subject, the withholding tax on interest and dividends.

"I think Sen. Baker finally felt like he'd gotten himself into a crisis situation," Pearson said. The study of possible reforms "which started out to be an academic, sort of scholarly review, got to be a real task force."

"The basic question is how do we have the time around here to talk about the big issues?" says Sen. John Danforth, R-Mo. "How does the Senate become a deliberative body instead of a body of grandstanding and one-liners?"

Pearson said he has no illusions that the recommendations will right all the Senate's ills. "I don't have any great hopes that much of this is going to be accepted," he said.

Disabled skier won't give up

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Anna Conrad, buried for five days in an avalanche one year ago, has returned to the ski slopes even though she lost part of a leg and foot, and says the accident taught her "don't give up."

"There's a lot of sadness involved and it's kind of scary, thinking that it's been as long as a year and it's only been a year," she said of the avalanche that killed seven people, including her boyfriend.

Ms. Conrad, 23, has a special artificial "sports leg" and has been skiing this winter at Mammoth Mountain, near Yosemite National Park. She plans a skiing vacation this week in British Columbia.

Lately, much of her time has been devoted to working as a high school student teacher, instructing in biology.

"I've always wanted to teach students so they might get a little more excited about what goes on around them," said Ms. Conrad.

Since the avalanche, "I try as hard as I can to do everything as well as I can. I tell (my students), 'Don't give up on things easily.'"

Two avalanches roared down the slopes of the Alpine Meadows ski resort in the Sierra Nevada last March 31, covering a ski patrol building, damaging the main lodge and burying resort employees and visitors.

Ms. Conrad, a ski lift operator who was cross-country skiing that day because the lifts were closed, was inside the three-story ski patrol building and got trapped in an air pocket formed by debris.

She was found five days later, her feet badly frostbitten. She later lost her right leg below the knee and part of her left foot.

"People died who were very close to me," she said. "It's hard to look back and say they're not here any more."

She hasn't been back to Alpine Meadows, which she is suing, but plans to return next week for a national handicapped ski race.

"My feeling is I want to be active. I've always been active and I don't want to change my lifestyle any more than I absolutely have to. Skiing is something I can do and it's exciting, exhilarating and thrilling."

She said her skiing has steadily improved and she can now race down advanced slopes. Before the disaster, Ms. Conrad was an expert.

"I'd like to have something good come out of this. I'd like to help other disabled people have confidence and not have fear in doing some things," she said.

Zsa Zsa still campaigns for 'one of brightest people:' Nixon

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — When former President Richard M. Nixon made a rare public appearance before an arts society, an old friend showed up — actress Zsa Zsa Gabor.

Nixon was in town for a meeting Tuesday night of the Society of the Four Arts where he delivered a 90-minute foreign affairs briefing attended by about 700 people, including Miss Gabor.

While Nixon dealt with the subject of U.S.-Soviet relations, Miss Gabor offered a commentary on how she felt about him.

"He's one of my closest friends and I am very fond of him," said Miss Gabor. "I'm still campaigning for him. He's one of the brightest people in America."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Barbara Bel Geddes is out of the hospital after heart surgery, but there's no word when she'll be back as the powerful matriarch on television's "Dallas."

Bel Geddes

Miss Bel Geddes, 60, was released Tuesday from Cedars-Sinai Medical Center where she underwent a quadruple heart bypass two weeks ago.

She entered the hospital for tests March 12 after complaining of chest pains, and three days later suffered a major heart attack.

"She was in good condition and in good spirits when she was released," said hospital spokeswoman Virginia Bohannon.

At Lorimar Productions, the producer of "Dallas," spokesman Bob Crutchfield said taping for the season ended March 8 and is not expected to resume until late May. He said he does not know when Miss Bel Geddes will be back to work.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country music star George Jones, known for his hit "He Stopped Loving Her Today," is putting a stop to his concert tours for at least two weeks.

Jones

Jones' agent, John McMeen, says the 52-year-old singer is suffering from severe stress and fatigue brought on by a heavy concert schedule.

Since September, McMeen said, Jones has performed more than 86 shows "in his effort to rebuild the faith of his fans and to push his new album. He wanted to do it, but the schedule finally caught up with him physically."

He's recuperating at his home in Lafayette, La.

McMeen added that Jones, scheduled for another medical checkup next week, will miss a seven-show European tour which been scheduled to start March 30.

Jones was the Country Music Association's Male Vocalist of the Year in 1980 and 1981.

Designer clothes go to dog for Pittsburgh nightclub act

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For his nightclub act, Robear "Troubles" Fay has a spiffy wardrobe featuring a $320 coat of blond beaver, three tuxedos, a top hat and a 14-karat solid gold chain.

All of his outfits are custom made because Troubles is a dog, a 7-year-old, 6½-pound, chocolate brown Chihuahua.

"He's a high class model for designer clothes. Most other dogs don't wear gold chains or genuine furs. How often do you see a dog in a tuxedo sitting at a bar?" said his owner, Kathleen McElary, a 35-year-old clerk for Allegheny County.

Troubles' fashion career was launched at the St. Patrick's Day parade here in 1980 when he was dressed in a green hat and scarf. His picture wound up on the front page of The Pittsburgh Press, so Ms. McElary expanded the act.

Designer jeans, jogging togs, gym shorts, a Steeler uniform and sweater, a Pirate uniform complete with batting helmet, a ski cap and scarves add to his collection.

Troubles' tongue droops from the side of his mouth through some missing teeth. He'll sit up and beg and lap an occasional soft drink, but mostly he just models his sartorial collection.

"The people just go crazy over him. Our goal now is Hollywood," said Ms. McElary.

Dog won't get day in court

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Blitzen, a police dog whose nose was "pretty much the case" in a murder trial, won't have his day in court after all.

After a three-week hearing on the legality of using evidence obtained by a dog's ability to distinguish odors, Superior Court Judge Jacqueline Taber ruled a jury may not hear how Blitzen helped link Earl McMullen to the 1979 slaying of his neighbor.

Prosecutor Michael Cardoza said after the ruling Monday that the decision "blows out 80 percent of our evidence. The dog was pretty much the case."

Gang members learn to dress for success

PICO RIVERA, Calif. (AP) — A polka dot miniskirt and outsized black shoes were among the fashions donned by unlikely models — female gang members hoping to leave behind their often jobless street life.

The fashion show attracted about 65 teen-age girls, many of them members of Hispanic gangs, who listened to tips on applying makeup, dressing for interviews and finding information about entry-level work in data processing and hospital service.

"They (Los Angeles County) asked me to put on a softball league and I said no," said Carmen Ybarra, 24, a former gang member who set up the project through the Los Angeles County Youth Gang Services project. "They won't benefit from that. They'll go home and their kids'll still be hungry and they won't have a job."

The seminar last week was geared to combat the "tough" gang image which often offends employers, Ms. Ybarra said.

A public park building in this Los Angeles suburb was decked out with pink paper garlands and balloons. A professional makeup man touched up eyes and lips while girls traded jeans for dresses.

"I'm going to wear a miniskirt?" asked Yvette Hinojos, 17. "I don't know how they talked me into it!" A small audience applauded as she modeled a polka dot dress, parading in the only matching black pumps available — three sizes too large.

The seminar was geared to help the teens improve their image, Ms. Ybarra said.

"Some of these girls are proud of being cholas (female Hispanic gang members)," Ms. Ybarra said, but added that inside they want to get out of the gang life. "You stick a label on yourself and then you can't change it."

The counselor said she herself has changed her style, and old friends sometimes don't recognize her in her tailored suits and subdued makeup.

"If I can do it, they can do it," she said.

Deidre Curtis, 17, modeling a gauzy gown, said her drug counselor told her about the seminar.

"Maybe it's a start for me. I don't know," she said. "That's what we're here for — to show that there's more than getting high or whatever."

Participants received a comb and mirror, an emery board, a small sewing kit and a notebook entitled "Live Today and Dream of Tomorrow."

"A lot of the girls told me they started throwing away their drugs," Ms. Ybarra said the morning after the seminar. "They said, 'You know what? You're right...I gotta grow up, I gotta get my act together.' If we could reach at least 10 out of 65, it was worth it."

Court: Women must qualify

Father charged in son's death

HEMPSTEAD (AP) — A man whose 8-year-old son burned to death in a house fire which started after a family argument has been charged with murder, authorities said Tuesday.

Ozzie Taylor, 48, an unemployed laborer, has been held without bond in the Waller County Jail since Sunday.

Deputy Sheriff Raymond Cooke said Taylor admitted setting the fire but insisted he thought his son, Robert, was out of the house.

"Taylor admitted doing it. He said he'd been arguing with his wife, and he told her, 'If I can't live in this house, nobody can.' So he lit a paper sack on fire and threw it on top of some other old sacks and then he just walked down the street," Cooke said.

Nancy Taylor, 41, gathered most of her eight children and left the house before the fire started, Cooke said.

Nine-person drug ring indicted

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal grand jury indicted nine people Tuesday on charges alleging they ran "sophisticated" drug labs in three Texas cities, authorities said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney W.W. Torrey said as many as 30 people may be involved in the alleged methamphetamine manufacturing and distribution ring.

Drug Enforcement Agency investigators found two labs in Houston and Galveston and uncovered another in Conroe, Torrey said.

Indicted were Andrew Lee Armacost, Cathy Lynne Armacost, Robert Daniel Davis, Joseph A. Dearmas, Ronnie Dale Dernehl, Allen T. Ginn, Patricia A. Robertson, Eugene Carroll Stone and John Ray Tarver.

All were charged with conspiracy to manufacture, possess and distribute methamphetamine and manufacturing, possessing and distributing the drug, Torrey said.

Man to be tried in stabbing death

PORTALES, N.M. (AP) — A Muleshoe man will stand trial for murder in connection with the stabbing death of a Clovis man earlier this month.

Oscar Flores, 22, was bound over for trial after a preliminary hearing Tuesday. Benito Reyes, 31, was in a Portales lounge when he was stabbed in the chest March 20, police said.

Flores, a parolee from a Texas state prison, was being held in the Roosevelt County Jail in lieu of $100,000 bond.

Oilfield equipment company will remain open

AUSTIN (AP) — A company shut down after an accident contaminated at least one worker with radiation won a temporary reversal of state actions by convincing a judge that the firm was not given a fair chance to respond to the closing.

State District Judge John May agreed Tuesday to issue a temporaryinjunction blocking the Texas Bureau of Radiation Control's move to close the Gulf Nuclear Inc. facility at Webster, attorneys said.

Dudley Murrey, representing Gulf Nuclear Inc., said May's ruling upheld company contentions the agency violated state law "by not providing us with proper notice of the action and by not providing us with a hearing on the order dated March 18."

The Webster plant was ordered closed after officials learned of a Feb. 8 accident. Preliminary tests show one employee was contaminated with 13 times the allowable amount of americium 241, officials said.

Gulf Nuclear manufactures and handles equipment generally used in oilfield work, including well logging and radiographic inspection of pipes, Murrey said.

But Brian Berwick, an assistant attorney general who represented the state, said May has left the state in a "legally clouded position."

"We need to study the law books and find some way to respond," Berwick said.

Berwick said the state, in a suit filed Monday, asked the court to back the bureau of radiation control's order.

Ed Bailey, director of licensing for the state agency, said the contamination apparently occurred Feb. 8 when a lathe ruptured a container of the material.

Tests are being conducted at a federal lab in Oak Ridge, Tenn., on several plant employees who were in the area of the accident. Final results have not been released.

The accident was reported three weeks later by an employee who feared he might be contaminated, officials said. That worker was subsequently fired. Murrey said the termination stemmed from excessive absences and had nothing to do with the report.

The company filed suit Friday against the state Health Department, which supervises the radiation control agency. The state responded Monday with a suit charging that Gulf Nuclear shipped radioactive materials on commercial passenger flights to Mexico six times in 1980 and 1981.

That suit also asked the court to back the agency's ruling. It also alleged that excessive radiation levels were measured at three spots on the company's fence line at Webster.

Gulf Nuclear, in a company statement released last week, said it believes its safety procedures are adequate to protect its employees and the public.

The attorney general's office said in court papers that "the continued operations of Gulf Nuclear involving the handling of radioactive materials now poses a threat to the public health and safety and the environment."

Legislator, lobbyist at odds over betting bill

AUSTIN (AP) — An anti-gambling lobbyist says no matter what records a House committee forces him to submit, the result will always be the same — his efforts are not financed by out-of-Texas race tracks trying to protect their business.

"The organization is composed of individuals who are business professional people and churchmen. (Legislators) can take our blood tests and that's still all they're going to get. That's who we are," said Allen Maley Jr., a Dallas resident.

Rep. George Pierce, R-San Antonio, has not asked for blood. But Pierce, chairman of the House Committee on Urban Affairs which is considering the pari-mutuel betting bill, said Tuesday that a financial report sent in by Maley raises more questions.

Pierce wants more answers and gave Maley until April 6 to submit more complete records.

The report Maley sent to Pierce shows that Texans Against Gambling, of which he is director, was funded by a $10,000 loan from the Anti-Crime Council of Texas. The council got $5,000 from the Baptist General Convention of Texas and $2,500 from the Texas United Methodist Church.

The remainder came from smaller donations, according to the report.

Pierce, a legalized horse race betting advocate, said he wants to know, "Who are the people?" backing Maley.

In a letter to Maley, Pierce asked for more records and complained the financial report does not answer "core questions," including whether out-of-state interests are paying Maley's way.

"To our knowledge" his anti-gambling efforts have not been backed by "money from anybody connected to any racetracks anywhere," Maley told a reporter.

Maley and the committee have been at odds since his refusal at a hearing to disclose his financial backing. Last week the committee authorized Pierce to subpoena the records. Maley complied without subpoena, but sent only the report released Tuesday.

Pierce said Maley had made "a mockery of the legitimate questions" asked by the committee. He said the financial statement includes several inconsistencies, including a conflict with a previous report showing no contributions accepted.

Maley asked Pierce if the committee would investigate pro-gambling lobbyists "if I charge that the Mafia is putting money" into their efforts.

Pierce said Maley is trying to cloud the issue.

Judge starts 'DWI Work Force'

ROCKDALE, Texas (AP) — Here in rural Milam County, drunken drivers caused 49 accidents last year, injuring 28 people and killing one. Halfway through the carnage, County Judge Phil Smith decided that he'd had enough.

Now, eight months later, a large yellow sign reading "DWI Work Force" has become a familiar Saturday fixture on county roads and highways.

The portable sign accompanies a yellow pickup that carries a traveling group of a dozen or more men and women, each of them convicted for the first time of driving while intoxicated.

They are serving a year's probation which includes cleaning trash off the shoulders of the roads four hours each Saturday for six consecutive Saturdays.

"It sure has caught the public's attention — more than anything I've done as county judge," Smith said.

Smith isn't certain that his community service solution fulfills all the niceties of permissible justice, but then he's not trying to please everybody.

"A smart lawyer might come down here and upset it; that's true," he said. "But I don't care. I'm determined to be tough on DWIs, and the time to do it is on the first offense."

Besides the public humiliation of working behind Milam County's large yellow sign, first offenders are also hit hard in the pocketbook.

Smith charges them an average of $30 for their supervision on the trash detail, a $350 fine, $53 in court costs — and $25 for eight hours of classes on the dangers of drunken driving.

At that, he figures they are getting off easy because he won't take away a driver's license until the second conviction.

"WHY DID TIME MAGAZINE SELECT HIM AS MAN OF THE YEAR?"

. . . maybe it's because he wasn't outspoken or didn't argue. Time magazine's reason was because he contributed so much to the changing environment.

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Some women get gestational diabetes

Dear Dr. Solomon: A neighbor of mine tells me she developed diabetes when she was pregnant, but that she is not bothered by it any longer. Is she one of the lucky ones or is it possible to have diabetes only when you are pregnant? — Rose, Salt Lake City, Utah

Dear Rose: Some pregnant women develop what is called gestational diabetes, a condition that disappears following the pregnancy. However, it is estimated that from 30 to 40 percent of these women develop diabetes within five to 10 years. It is therefore important that women who have experienced gestational diabetes watch their weight and have frequent checkups so that if the disease does occur, it can be detected at an early state.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've been told by my doctor that I should get more calcium. I like cheese so that should not be a problem for me. But my daughter tells me that not all cheesed have the same amount of calcium. I always thought that cheese was cheese. Would you please clear this up for me? — Mrs. E.K., San Antonio

Dear Mrs. K.: Cheese may be cheese, but the calcium content of various cheeses differ. For example, an ounce of Swiss cheese contains from 250 to 350 milligrams of calcium, while an ounce of cream cheese has only from 20 to 50 milligrams of calcium. Among the foods with the highest calcium content are lowfat yogurts, dry nonfat milk, and sardines with bones.

Dear Dr. Solomon: How can a person tell if he has hypoglycemia? It seems it is becoming a very popular disease if you can believe all the articles that have come out about it. Ten years ago I don't think I even heard hypoglycemia mentioned. — Andrew, Queens, N.Y.

Dear Andrew: The only way anyone can tell if he or she has hypoglycemia (too little sugar in the blood) is by having a physician make the diagnosis. If you are asking about the symptoms of hypoglycemia, they include tremors, hunger, sweating, headache, nausea, blurred vision and eventually loss of consciousness.

The hypoglycemic reaction can be relieved for the short term by having the patient take some orange juice or candy or some similar food or drink.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A friend of mine has cancer and I suppose it is not surprising that he has lost a great deal of weight. I've heard of this happening with other people but I never understood why. Is it simply because they lose their taste for food? — Stuart, Memphis, Tenn.

Dear Stuart: Cancer patients who are unable to eat apparently retain their perception of taste. The exact mechanism that causes these patients to restrict their intake of food is not completely clear.

In one study, 62 cancer patients were given varying concentrations of four taste substances dissolved in a beverage. According to Dr. Aileen Sontag Trant and her colleagues at Cornell University, the patients

Dear Dr. Solomon: Many of the questions sent to you have to do with men who never go to the doctor even when they're not feeling well. My husband has the opposite habit. He's always going to the doctor. I wouldn't mind this so much except that he doesn't take care of himself, so I don't know what he expects the doctor to do. He drinks too much and he hardly sleeps and then he'll go to the doctor because he has a headache. Can you give him any advice? — Mrs. K.D., Trenton, N.J.

Dear Mrs. D.: Any advice I could give your husband would appear to be obvious. Although prompt treatment of a medical condition provides greater assurance of a satisfactory outcome, prevention of the condition is always preferable. For example, avoiding high blood pressure by controlling one's weight and exercising appropriately is better than treating it.

Your husband should realize that both excessive drinking and lack of sleep can trigger headaches. He may save himself some trips to his physician merely by altering his lifestyle.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Doctors always recommend aspirin when someone has a cold, but they say there is no cure for a cold. What does the aspirin do if it is not meant to cure the cold? — Francie, Hempstead, L. Is., N.Y.

Dear Francie: Aspirin helps make a cold sufferer more comfortable by reducing the person's fever and alleviating headache and muscle ache. However, aspirin has no effect on viruses and bacteria so it can't cure a cold or the flu. In addition, gargles that contain aspirin do not help a sore throat.

One disadvantage of using aspirin to alleviate the symptoms of a cold is that it may prompt the patient to be more active than he or she otherwise would be. The fact that symptoms may be relieved does not mean that the illness has run its course.

Dear Dr. Solomon: There is a community sex education program for teen-agers that stresses the use of condoms. Any idea why this is so? — Sol, Morristown, N.J.

Dear Sol: There may be a number of reasons why the use of condoms is emphasized, including their availability. In addition, however, the condom is the only contraceptive method that can effectively prevent man sexually transmitted diseases, and can do so without any adverse side effects.

Invisible ostrich takes top honors

AURORA, Colo. (AP) — An out-of-sight 7-foot ostrich named Florence took top honors at the second annual Invisible Pet Show, an exposition where winners are considerably less than meets the eye.

"I know she's not your typical pet," said 12-year-old Todd Shatritz, stroking the invisible neck of the make-believe creature.

"Sometimes she lays one of her invisible eggs on the living room carpet and we accidentally step on it, smelling up the whole place. Invisible ostrich eggs can get pretty smelly, you know."

The pet won Shatritz and fellow trainer Paolo Cammarota $300 in real money last weekend at Aurora Mall.

HERE'S A TASTY TIP.

CARNATION TEAMS UP WITH VEGETABLES AND EGGS.

CREAMY EGG AND VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

(Makes 6 servings)

2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1⅓ cups undiluted CARNATION® Evaporated Milk, ⅓ cup water, ¾ - 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon white pepper, 2 teaspoons instant minced onion, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 tablespoon prepared mustard, 3 packages (10 ounces each) cooked, drained broccoli spears (or 3 pounds cooked, drained fresh asparagus spears), 4 sliced hard-cooked eggs (or 1⅓ cups - 6 ounces - cubed, cooked ham), 1 cup (4 ounces) shredded process American cheese

Melt butter in medium saucepan. Stir in flour. Gradually stir in evaporated milk and water. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture just comes to a boil and thickens. Stir in salt, pepper, onion, Worcestershire sauce and mustard. Arrange half of vegetable spears in bottom of 12 x 7½ x 2-inch baking dish. Top with half of egg slices. Pour half of sauce over eggs. Sprinkle half of cheese over top. Repeat layers. Cover dish with foil. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 20-30 minutes or until sauce is bubbly.

Vincent Ferrara, a 48-year-old deaf mute from Valley Stream, N.Y., is reunited Tuesday with his deaf-mute bride at New York's Kennedy Airport. Finlandia Ferrara arrived from the Dominican Republic after a 16-month battle to obtain a visa from the U.S. Embassy in Santo Domingo.

Deaf couple triumphs over bureaucracy

NEW YORK (AP) — A deaf-mute couple who had to overcome immigration regulations before they could be reunited here began their honeymoon today after 16 months apart.

Vincent Ferrara, 48, of Valley Stream, and his wife Finlandia, 35, a native of the Dominican Republic, embraced Tuesday when she arrived at Kennedy International Airport.

They said "I love you" to each other in sign language, and Ferrara presented his wife with a bouquet of red and yellow roses.

"He's on cloud nine," said Ferarra's sister, Connie Berkowitz, as Mrs. Ferrara kissed her husband and then giggled as she wiped the lipstick off his face.

Rep. Raymond McGrath, R-N.Y., who intervened in the case, said it was the triumph of the couple's dream of "living out their lives in the land of opportunity."

Ferrara, a U.S. citizen who was born deaf and unable to speak, met his wife while vacationing in the Dominican Republic in December 1981. Her deafness comes from a childhood accident in which she hit her head on a concrete floor, but doctors say surgery may help restore her hearing.

The Ferraras married three weeks after they met. He returned to the United States, but the State Department withheld approval of Mrs. Ferrara's visa until American friends guaranteed they would support her if she could not support herself.

John Caulfield of the department's Bureau of Consular Affairs said such a guarantee is required of all who immigrate to the United States and had nothing to do with Mrs. Ferrara's handicap.

He said Ferrara's guarantee was not enough because he had worked only at odd jobs since being laid off from a Queens art company. Ferrara receives $5,600 a year in Social Security disability payments.

But Ferrara told reporters through an interpreter, "I have worked all my life. I will never let my wife end up on welfare."

Angela and Edward Palmieri, a Queens couple who are friends of Mrs. Ferrara, donated a rent-free apartment where the Ferraras will live after their honeymoon at a relative's house in Pittston, Penn.

Mrs. Ferrara will go to work either as a housekeeper at a nursing home or wrapping coins, according to McGrath, who wrote a letter to Robert Anderson, the U.S. ambassador to the Dominican Republic, on Mrs. Ferrara's behalf.

During their separation, the Ferraras communicated through a special telecommunications hookup from the Palmieris' house to Mrs. Ferrara's home in the Dominican Republic.

Condor embryo peeks at world

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A tiny California condor embryo is gradually pecking through its egg shell and may break through within days, becoming the first of the almost extinct birds to hatch in captivity, zoo officials said today.

The bluish egg was snatched Feb. 23 from its parents' nest at the condor sanctuary in Ventura County and has been incubating at the San Diego Zoo ever since.

"There are no problems that we see. The embryo is very active and right on course," zoo birdkeeper Cyndi Kuehler said Tuesday. She has been babysitting the egg for the past month.

Zoo spokesman Jeff Jouett said early today that there was no change in the condition of the embryo.

Because no condor egg has ever hatched in captivity, scientists aren't sure how long hatching will take.

Ms. Kuhler said experience with the Andean condor — a close relative of the nearly extinct California condor — shows that hatching takes about three days once the embryo "pips," or begins to poke out of the shell.

Jouett said the embryo at the zoo "pipped" late Monday and has knocked out a finger-sized hole in the shell.

Jouett said the embryo had to rest periodically because trying to break out of the shell "is the most strenuous thing that critter has had to do in his whole life."

The condor egg, five to six times the size of a chicken egg, has been monitored around the clock by zookeepers and a video camera. It was plucked from the nest as part of the captive breeding program aimed at rescuing the condor from extinction.

Scientists estimate there are only 17 to 20 California condors left in their natural mountain habitat near Ventura. Three male condors are in captivity, all at the Los Angeles Zoo.

The ash-gray birds of prey are dying off at the rate of three a year and could be extinct by 1990.

The San Diego Zoo is also incubating a second condor egg at its avian propogation center. That egg, taken from the wild March 8, is expected to hatch early next month.

State officials gave scientists permission to take the first egg laid by each pair of breeding condors in the wild. Once an egg is taken, the condors can mate again and produce another egg.

THE PROMISE OF PERFORMANCE.

One look is all it takes for you to know what the Kawasaki LTD is all about — performance. A race-bred DOHC four-cylinder delivers breathtaking power. Air-adjustable forks and damping-adjustable shocks provide responsive handling and control. And the LTD design promises unmistakable style. Long leading-axle forks, alloy wheels and megaphone mufflers give the LTD a sleek, unique look and feel. Because great performance is also a matter of style. Test drive a Kawasaki LTD today.
