Kuwaiti ships to sail under U.S. authority

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration and congressional leaders have reached an agreement under which the administration will be free to put Kuwaiti oil tankers under U.S. protection and then report to Congress, an administration official said today.

The official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the agreement was worked out Thursday in meetings held by Frank C. Carlucci, President Reagan's national security adviser; Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and Speaker of the House Jim Wright, D-Texas.

Arrangements are proceeding to place Kuwaiti tankers under the American flag, probably in the first week in June, with military escort ships to be provided soon afterward, the official said.

He said the agreement called for the Senate and House to pass resolutions calling for a report on the reflagging and escorting. The report would be due within seven days after enactment of the resolution, he said. However, the resolution would not require that the report be made before the reflagging and escorting could be done.

"We cannot let the Persian Gulf become a Soviet lake, and it will if we do not show our presence there," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

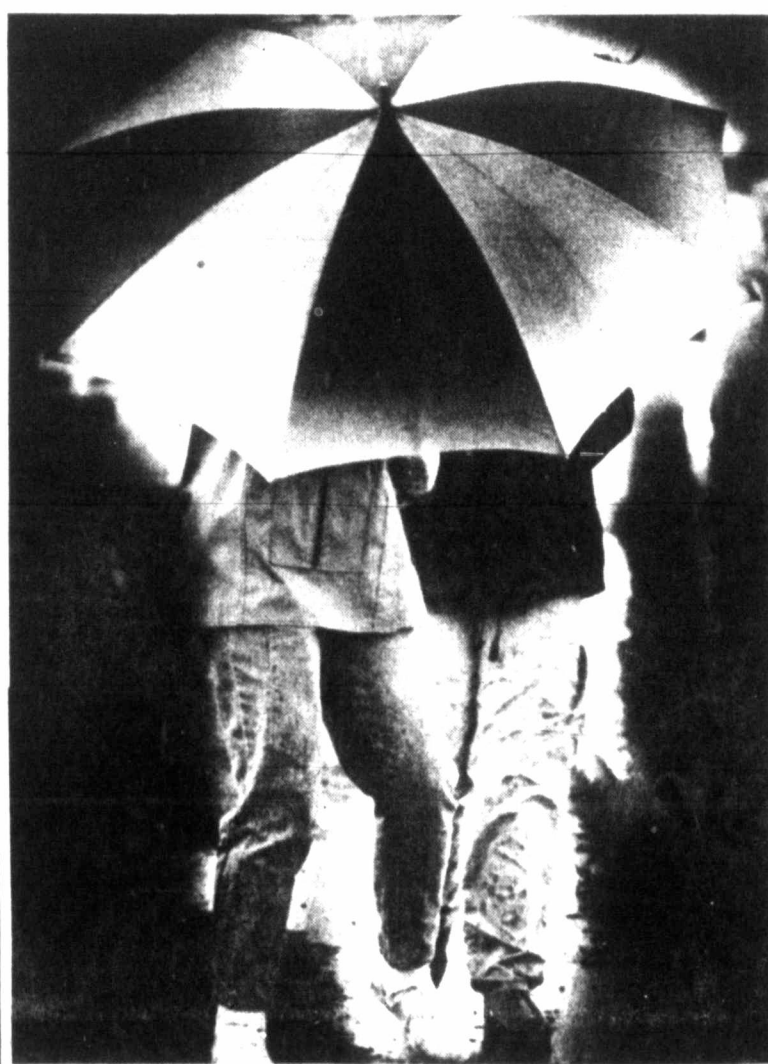

Sen. Larry Pressler, R-S.D., said, "Our goals are to keep the Russians out and the Iranian presence lower." Pressler noted that the May 17 attack on the USS Stark led Congress to question U.S. direction in the region.

"This is not a new policy, but since the apparent accident last week it has come under review," Pressler said.

The administration's plan to put 11 tankers under the U.S. flag, with American captains aboard, has raised concerns in Congress that the United States might be drawn into the Iran-Iraq war, now in its seventh year.

Initially, White House and Pentagon officials said the program to place American captains and the American flag on Kuwaiti

Stormy system keeps churning

From Staff and Wire Reports

"Juicy" May thunderstorms battered West and North Texas with torrential rains and tornadoes, flooding homes, snarling traffic and injuring six people in a Dallas suburb when a roof collapsed on an office party, authorities say.

About 200 people were at a party inside Challenger Electric Equipment Inc.'s offices when the roof fell in about 7:30 p.m. Thursday "during a blinding rainstorm" in Grand Prairie, police Lt. J.M. Gatlin said.

Only six people were taken to the D-FW Medical Center, however, where three were in serious condition with lacerations and head injuries, spokeswoman Phyllis Webster said.

Two others were in stable condition and one was treated and released, she said.

In the Tampa area, daily weather forecasts are beginning to sound like a broken record. Today's forecast called for a continued chance of thunderstorms, some severe, through Saturday.

KGRO-KOMX meteorologist Darrel Sehorn said today that the front that has positioned itself over the Panhandle all week may finally be losing its slippery, wet grip on the area. But Pampans can still expect at least evening thundershowers through Saturday, Sehorn said.

"It does seem to be losing some of its strength now," Sehorn said of the stationary front over the Panhandle. "It looks like a day-by-day improvement as we go on into the weekend."

Sehorn said Tampa received 0.48 inch of rain during the 24-hour reporting period ending at 6:15 a.m. today, pushing the May total to 6.91 inches and the year-to-date total to 12.42 inches. The normal May total is 3.3 inches and average year-to-date total through May 28 is 7.93 inches.

Skip Ely, a meteorologist in the National Weather Service's Fort Worth office, noted that much of North and West Texas has been under stormy weather for about a week.

"Late-May storms are real juicy, like this one," Ely said.

Forecasters predicted the violent weather that plodded slowly eastward across the Rapist begins life term after incident

Twice-convicted child rapist Troy Lee Grimes began serving his life sentence in Huntsville today, but facts surrounding his apparent suicide attempt last Friday remain a mystery.

Grimes and two other Gray County Jail inmates left Thursday morning for the state prison in Huntsville, Sheriff Rufe Jordan said Thursday.

Following a four-day trial last week in 223rd District Court, a nine-man, three-woman jury sentenced Grimes to life in prison for aggravated sexual assault of a 10-year-old Pampa girl.

The girl testified that Grimes abducted her from Marcus Sanders Park while she was walking home from Sunday school last November, and drove her to the Bowers City area, where he raped and sodomized her and threatened her with a knife. He then drove her back to the park and gave her $2, the youngster told jurors.

Grimes' attorney, Pink Dickens of Amarillo, had tried to pin the crime on the child's father.

The conviction was Grimes' second for child rape; he was convicted in January 1977 for raping a 9-year-old Pampa girl and served about seven years in prison.

Grimes, 28, formerly of 1013 Huff Road, left the courtroom sobbing "I didn't do it" after last week's verdict. Three hours later, Sheriff Jordan said, the defendant began screaming and convulsing uncontrollably in his jail cell.

Jordan said Grimes was rushed to HCA Coronado Hospital, then to Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo, after a syringe and a cup of Ajax mixed with water were found in the shower stall Grimes had used earlier in the day.

But tests run on Grimes since the incident have proved inconclusive, the sheriff said Thursday.

"I don't know. They haven't found anything," Jordan said. He added that the tests run at Northwest Texas Hospital included urinalysis, blood tests and brain scans.

Jordan said he had no problems with Grimes after the rapist returned from the hospital Sunday.

Time running out on budget deadlock

By MICHAEL HOLMES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — With the state budget deadlock unbroken, Gov. Bill Clements and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby are voicing sharply disparate opinions about the problem.

"There's a lot of people around this town that don't realize the election's over. And they don't realize who won the election and why I won," Clements said Thursday, again urging lawmakers to understand that taxes won't go up.

"I think there's a mandate from the people to provide a first-class education system in the state, to keep our prisons open, to keep our hospitals open," said Hobby, explaining why lawmakers voted for a larger budget than Clements wanted.

The Legislature has only four days left in its regular session, and if no budget passes, a special session will be needed.

Clements denies blame for the stalemate and again vowed to veto any tax increase greater than $2.9 billion, saying that's what voters wanted when they elected him.

"I don't feel any blame whatsoever... I was elected to come down here and I'm going to do the things the people elected me to do," he said.

Hobby, leader of the Senate and the man Clements now blames for the stalemate, said the dilemma would have ended weeks ago if Clements had compromised.

"It wouldn't have been impossible to have it done some weeks ago," Hobby said. "The governor continues to make puzzling statements."

Asked what it would take to break the deadlock, Hobby replied, "Some reality therapy, I suppose."

Their charges in separate news conferences Thursday appeared to leave little room for negotiation before Monday's adjournment.

Clements has proposed a $36.9 billion, two-year budget. The House approved a $39.4 billion spending plan and the Senate budget totaled $40 billion. Neither the House nor the Senate has approved enough new taxes to fund their budgets.

Clements said he sees no end to the deadlock until legislators realize that most Tex-

SMU expects to name president today

DALLAS (AP) — A Duke University law professor is likely to be named president of Southern Methodist University today, officials with the university indicated.

The Dallas Morning News reported in a copyright story today that A. Kenneth Pye, who twice served as chancellor at Duke, could be named the new SMU president at today's special meeting of the SMU board of trustees.

Pye, reached in Dallas Thursday night, declined to comment because he had not yet met with the board.

Asked if he would accept the job if it is offered, Pye said: "I have a tendency not to decide whether I'd take any position until it's offered to me. That's an idiosyncrasy of mine."

Dallas oilman Ray Hunt, head of SMU's presidential search committee and acting chairman of the board of trustees, was not available for comment this morning but a spokesman for him indicated Pye is the likely choice.

"I don't want to get into commenting on what that board is going to do," said Hunt spokesman Jim Oberwetter. Asked about the Dallas Morning News report, he told The Associated Press, "I don't think you have a problem with (reporting) that."

The university has scheduled a news conference after the board meeting and a spokeswoman who asked that her name not be used said the "candidate" would likely attend.

She said the university could not confirm or deny the newspaper report.

Sources told The News Pye met Thursday with Hunt.

L. Donald Shields resigned as SMU president in November, citing health problems. His resignation came after allegations of improprieties in the SMU athletic department and was followed by the resignations of the athletic director and football coach.

Committees question spy about Contra aid

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The congressional Iran-Contra committees questioned former CIA official Joe Fernandez privately today about his role in aiding Nicaraguan rebels during the time that U.S. government military assistance was banned.

Fernandez, the former CIA station chief in Costa Rica, was named in testimony Thursday as having met with Contra military leaders during the 1984-86 aid ban.

The House and Senate investigating committees agreed to question Fernandez privately to shield his identity and thus protect him from possible harm from enemies he made during his spy agency career.

Lewis Tambs, former ambassador to Costa Rica, testified Thursday that he had asked Fernandez, who went by the pseudonym of Tomas Castillo, to contact the rebel leaders as part of a U.S. effort to support Contra fighters along the so-called "southern front" and to encourage them to drive deeper inside Nicaragua.

Tambs had been given this assignment when he was sent to Costa Rica two years ago by Lt. Col. Oliver North of the National Security Council staff, but he said Fernandez "also received instructions from Washington" to make contact with the Contra commandantes in the summer of 1985.

The investigating committees also heard testimony that Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, had detailed knowledge of the construction of a secret airfield in Costa Rica as early as September 1985, and had deeper involvement in the entire Contra aid affair than he has acknowledged.

In other developments:

■ Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., chairman of the House select committee on narcotics, said the Justice Department and CIA are trying to thwart his panel's efforts to learn whether there is a link between Contra supply flights and drug smuggling. He said Attorney General Edwin Meese III has refused to allow Drug Enforcement Agency officials to brief the committee, and the CIA has refused to provide information.

■ The Los Angeles Times reported today that the CIA has suspended a covert operations officer who used agency helicopters to carry explosives and other supplies to the Contras in early 1986. The clandestine agent, sources said, was the "chief of base" supervising CIA operations in support of the Contras in Honduras.

Tambs told the congressional committees Thursday that the order to arrange permission for construction of the clandestine airstrip near Santa Elena had come from North through Fernandez. The airfield was to be used as an emergency landing strip and refueling site for planes on airdrop missions to resupply the Contras.

Fernandez was recalled to Washington late last year, disciplined and forced to take early retirement from the CIA because of his active role in support of the Contras. Tambs said the administration appears to be making lower-level people scapegoats for policy made at a higher level.

"What I find to be disconcerting, to put it mildly, is to see officers who were carrying out what they believed to be orders from their legitimate superiors now... seeing their careers sacrificed," he told the committees.

state Thursday should die out by sunrise today, but more storms could begin anew by midday. At one point Thursday night, 66 counties, or one-fourth of the state, were under a tornado watch, including portions of the southwestern Panhandle.

Seven or eight homes in the Fort Worth suburb of Euless flooded when a nearby creek surged out of its banks during a heavy rainstorm, said police Lt. Gary McKamie.

The water had receded by 10 p.m., but officials were unsure when residents would be able to return to their homes, he said.

In Denton, a discount tire store's roof collapsed during an intense storm that dumped more 4 inches of rain, but it was empty at the time and no injuries were reported, a Denton County sheriff's dispatcher said.

Wind damage was reported at a Dallas junior high school, officials said, and several streets and highways in the Fort Worth area were closed temporarily because of high water.

Police said heavy rainfall inundated streets, roads and low-lying areas Dallas and its suburbs, traffic was at a standstill in many areas and some vehicles were caught in high water. There were no reports of injuries.

More than a score of flash-flood, severe-weather and tornado warnings were issued by the weather service as slow-moving, intense thunderstorms moved across North Texas.

Law enforcement agencies in counties under tornado warnings reported no damage or injury from twisters, although there were numerous reports of power outages and downed trees.

During the afternoon and early evening, tornado warnings were issued for Taylor, Jones, Shackelford, Brown, Wise, Parker, Palo Pinto and Eastland counties. Officials reported no injuries.

Flash flood warnings were issued for Dallas, Collin, Denton, Johnson, Wichita, Fannin, Hamilton and Parker counties. Much of North, West and Northeast Texas was under flash flood, severe thunderstorm or tornado watches throughout the night.

ships and to protect them with American forces probably would begin in early June.

Pentagon officials, speaking Thursday on condition they not be identified, said re-flagging the Kuwaiti vessels was continuing but the U.S. flag would not fly over those ships until the Navy was ready to escort and protect them — a process that could take several weeks.

Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said re-flagging of the tankers would not be complete until mid-June "and there won't be any escorting of those tankers by U.S. Navy vessels until the re-flagging is completed."

"I don't think from what I've been told that the administration has decided the degree of military force that will be required" to protect the tankers, the senator added.

A State Department official speaking on condition of anonymity said the tankers might not be put under U.S. control until the end of June.

White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater, however, denied there had been any slippage in the timing of the move. He said the re-flagging would start early next month.

Meanwhile, in Baghdad, the leader of a U.S. team investigating the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark said today his group achieved its objectives, but could not rule out further accidental attacks in the Persian Gulf.

Rear Adm. David Rogers, deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters the Baghdad end of the probe was over as the Pentagon-State Department team of eight left for Washington.

Asked if there were any guarantees there would be no more Iraqi attacks on U.S. Warships in the gulf, he said: "Any time that there are forces operating in proximity I can't tell you it will never happen again." But, he added, "We've reached preliminary agreements which will dramatically reduce the possibility it will ever happen again."

The admiral said the American team, which arrived Monday, is "certain we have the information to piece together what happened" in the attack on the Stark.

The U.S. frigate was hit by two missiles. One of them, a wave-skimming Exocet, did not detonate and the other, whose type was not determined, exploded killing 37 American sailors, wounding 21 others and setting the guided-missile frigate on fire.

Iraq, which called the attack an accident, says the missiles were fired by one French-built Iraqi Mirage F-1 fighter-bomber.

Rogers refused to say if the American investigators had been allowed to question the pilot of the warplane, who the Iraqis say mistook the Stark for an Iranian target.

Budget

ans oppose higher taxes.

"We need to look a little bit deeper than these superficial statements that are made by some of these prima donnas here in Austin, Texas," Clements said.

"They need to get out of their cocoons and get out there and talk to the people of Texas and understand what grassroots Texas is talking about. The people of Texas don't want those kinds of increases in state government. Period."

The Republican governor blames the Democratic-controlled Senate, whose budget would require a $5.8 billion tax increase.

"They've been totally unreasonable and unrealistic when they start talking about a $5.8 billion tax increase for a wish list that the people of Texas don't want," Clements said.

"When anybody starts personalizing arguments, they've lost the argument on the merits. That's why people resort to tactics like that," Hobby responded.

Clements voiced strong opposition to taxes higher than $2.9 billion, either now or in a special session later.

"I'm not going to change. I'm not going to change," he declared. "Whether it's in this regular session, which is very shortly to come to a conclusion, or whether it's in the next special session or the next special session or the next special session, I'm not going to change."

House opens more meetings

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislation to strengthen the state's open meetings law has won preliminary approval from the House, and its sponsor said the bill should help guarantee that the public's business is done in public.

"This bill strengthens the Open Meetings Act, closes loopholes," Rep. Juan Hinojosa, D-McAllen, said Thursday. "There is public pressure to make sure public officials deliberate public business in the open."

The bill was approved on a voice vote. A final vote still is needed before it goes back to the Senate for action on an amendment that Hinojosa said senators would accept.

That amendment permits "incidental" discussion of public business should officials meet at a social function, convention or professional workshop.

Gunman fires on hotel crowd

EL PASO (AP) — A Hidalgo County sheriff's deputy has been charged with attempted murder after allegedly opening fire at a hotel where homicide detectives were meeting, wounding a teenager and barricading himself in a room, authorities said.

Police Lt. Richard Perez said Keith Allen Faires, 27, of San Juan, Texas, was charged with attempted murder and was in the El Paso County Jail today. Bond was set at $75,000, Perez said.

Authorities said Monica Medina, 16, was shot in the foot during the Thursday night attack as she was playing poolside volleyball at the Marriott Hotel. Marie Villa, nursing supervisor at Sierra Medical Hospital, said the girl was in stable condition.

RRC uses computer to track abandoned oil and gas wells

ODESSA (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission plans to do sleuthing by computer to hunt down abandoned oil and gas wells that could become pollution risks, officials say.

The program that may be ready by fall would flag wells out of production and pinpoint operator names and field locations.

"This year we expect anywhere from 700 to 800 inactive and abandoned wells to reach the point where they may endanger the state's fresh-water supplies, and frankly, we don't have enough money in the state well-plugging fund to take care of them all," Commissioner John Sharp said.

"We're trying to identify some of these wells that can be rehabilitated before they go sour," he told The Odessa American Thursday.

Through the beginning of May, the commission spent $331,532 in fund money sealing off 54 wells in District 8, which incorporates Midland and Ector counties.

Midland-based district director Ron Strong said the wells ranged from 1,350 feet to 12,925 feet and were scattered across the 38,000-square-mile district.

District 8 is home to about 61,000 producing wells and has its share of abandoned ones, he said, estimating another 55 remain unplugged.

In the standard process, cement is pumped to the bottom of the well, closing off holes and restoring the well bore to near-original condition.

"People are walking away from marginal wells because of the price of oil," said District 8 plugging overseer De Witt Carnes. "We make certain they don't leak any more — that's our prime concern."

The state does not appropriate money for well-plugging. The RRC's Austin spokesman, Brian Schaible, said those funds are generated from $100 drilling application fees and pollution penalties the RRC collects.

Plugging requests are filed with the Austin office that then develops a statewide priority list for funding. The state closed off 714 wells in 1986 where no financial operators could be pinned down to foot the bill, Schaible said.

The RRC usually contracts private companies and last year paid an average $3,000 to $5,000 to plug a typical well, a cost sometimes rocketing to $25,000 for more complex jobs.

Each one eats into the plugging fund. Schaible said about $2 million remains in the fund, but warned that by Sept. 1, it will be exhausted, leaving 400 wells still unplugged across Texas.

"If abandoned wells aren't properly plugged, leakage could run out at the surface or into subsurface fresh water," Schaible said. "It's difficult, if not impossible, to clean up that pollution."

The computer program will not turn up new information as "it's something we keep track of," Schaible said. "But we've never put it together in a handy-dandy list like that."

The data will be broken down by district or county and made available to operators interested in taking over wells on the verge of abandonment.

Once a well goes past 90 days without a production report, its operator is required to either bring it back into production or plug it properly. But the RRC is anxious to know in advance what that operator is planning, Schaible said.

"We want to make productive wells out there stay productive," he said. "It keeps alive some oil and gas reserves that otherwise might be lost."

Armed hijacker takes bus, stabs passenger and driver

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police believe they know who may have commandeered a city bus, stabbed its sole passenger to death and then attacked the driver, but they say there have not yet been any arrests.

The driver, 22-year-old David Jeanfreau, told police a black male passenger commandeered the bus at knifepoint about 11:15 p.m. Wednesday, ordering him to drive to a park.

Once at the park, he said the man ordered him to the back of the bus while he sexually assaulted the only other passenger, 34-year-old Johnnie Gray of Fort Worth. She later died of stab wounds.

Jeanfreau managed to flee through the bus' back door, swim across the Trinity River as the hijacker pursued him and flag down a motorist on Interstate 30. He was later treated for the stab wound and not hospitalized.

Homicide Detective Sgt. Paul Kratz said police have ruled out Jeanfreau as a suspect because "we have been able to substantiate major portions of (Jeanfreau's) story through other witnesses."

Kratz said Jeanfreau did not activate the bus' emergency warning signal because the hijacker "was standing over him the whole time and the man specifically asked about the emergency warning system and seemed to know about it."

The suspect, however, is not another bus driver or a city employee, Kratz said.

Kratz also said the hijacker took Jeanfreau's billfold containing $60 in cash and went through Ms. Gray's purse.

The hijacker used a "large-bladed pocket knife" to stab Ms. Gray to death and to stab Jeanfreau once in the neck, the detective said.

Police later found Ms. Gray dead in the back of the bus, which still was parked in the southern end of Trinity Park.

Ronald Gray, Johnnie Gray's husband, said his wife never feared for her safety while riding the bus home from work at John Peter Smith Hospital at night because she knew most of the bus drivers.

"As far as I know," he told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, "she felt pretty safe on the bus. She knew most of the bus drivers on the route and most of them knew her."

John Bartosiewicz, general manager of the Fort Worth Transit Authority, said the bus was equipped with a radio and a hidden device that triggers a message saying, "Emergency. Please Call Police," on the front of the bus.

The message was on when police found the bus yesterday morning. But neither police nor Bartosiewicz knew who activated it, or when.

Clements was slow

It was one week ago today that a twister thoughtlessly and selfishly claimed 29 lives in the West Texas community of Saragosa.

Like everyone who heard the news, I was saddened at what had happened. Quite frankly, with all the adverse weather in the Panhandle this week, I became a bit frightened that the same thing might happen here.

Fortunately, we have been spared of any of Mother Nature's wrongdoings.

Sadness, fear, relief. I thought my emotions had run the gamut — but, I was wrong.

One more emotion crept into my head Tuesday — anger.

Texas' fearless leader, Gov. Bill Clements, finally decided Tuesday he would pay a little visit to Saragosa.

It took the man four days to grace the ravaged town with his presence.

The question I have asked myself over and over is, "Why did it take him so long?"

Sure, residents of what is left of the town may receive state and federal aid to help them rebuild their dreams and their lives. That would help.

But when people suffer a tragedy of this magnitude, the one thing they should always be able to take for granted is a prompt visit by the state's top ranking official.

In waiting four days, Gov. Bill's visit was practically — if not totally — meaningless.

The residents needed economic assistance, and the first thing out of Clements' mouth when his plane landed in Saragosa was assurance that they would get it.

When he said it, it was almost as if he was trying to worm his way out of not having come to the town earlier.

Saragosans were fuming at Clements. One resident lambasted him on network television.

"What do you think of the governor?" the reporter asked.

"He makes me sick," the woman responded. Clements, who seemed to have an answer for everything the day of his visit, also had an answer for the looting problem.

The same woman who had verbally thrashed Clements tried to tell him about the senseless thievery.

"Well, if you wanted us to call out the National Guard, then all you had to do was call us," Clements explained weakly.

Public opinion of our governor is at a low ebb, and you can bet he has no friends in Saragosa.

If the governor hopes for re-election, he is certainly going about it the wrong way.

Parks board asks groups to compromise on projects

Three groups with proposed projects for Memorial Park were asked Thursday to get together and present a consolidated plan for use of the site at a regular meeting of the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

Board members said it was hard to decide in favor of only one of the projects at the expense of the others and suggested a single proposal involving the different plans would probably benefit all concerned.

The three proposals include a memorial for Gray County veterans who have died in wars, a Pampa Army Air Field museum, including a B-25 bomber on display, and a municipal arts and cultural center.

Individuals supporting the war memorial and the aviation museum indicated they felt their two proposals could probably be developed mutually, but they expressed concern about the appropriateness of the arts center being located in Memorial Park.

Pampa veteran John Triplehorn, saying he was working in conjunction with the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post, presented the proposal for placing a war memorial at the north end of the park site, located in the triangular section bounded by Hobart, Ward and Montagu streets.

Representing the Pampa Army Air Field Reunion Association in its proposal for a museum on the former World War II training field were Blake Laramore, vice president; Nina Spoonemore, executive secretary, and Thelma Bray, treasurer.

Local artist Jerry Richards, saying he has support from other community residents, presented his proposal for the development of an arts and cultural center, possibly including outdoor sculptures relating to veterans.

Triplehorn, who also appeared before the board in February with his memorial proposal, said he still has no specific size or design for the war memorial. He said that will depend to a great extent on the amount of money that can be raised toward the monument, adding that he has begun to check on prices for various types.

He said he feels the memorial would fit in very well with the air field association's concept for its proposed museum, adding that the museum and the war memorial together could help to inspire more patriotism in the county.

Triplehorn said both projects would be appropriate monuments for the county's war dead and for those who received B-25 training at the air field once located east of the city.

"I would like to think people would stop to see the bomber and then also go over to look at our memorial" to the county's fallen veterans, he stated.

"I think we ought to be ashamed" for not having a memorial to the county's war dead in Pampa, Triplehorn said.

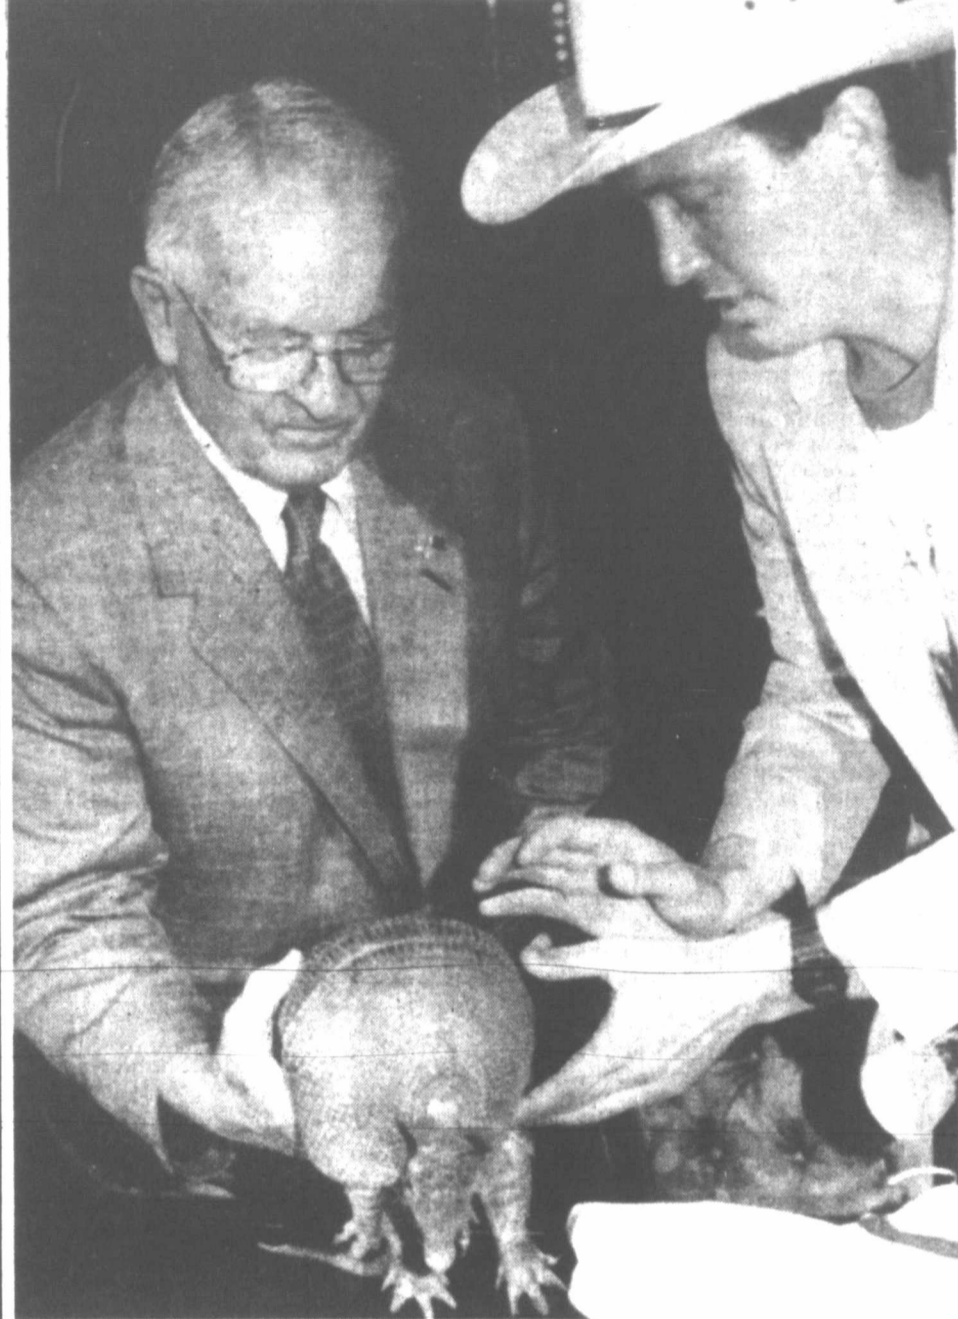

Laramore said the reunion association was hoping strongly to receive approval of its suggestion, and then turned the presentation over to Spoonemore, who has been executive secretary for the group for 15 years.

Spoonemore read a letter from Laramore dated April 27 and addressed to the mayor and city commissioners, giving a brief history of the air field and the reunion association and asking for support of the museum project.

Spoonemore said Memorial Park offers a good location for the museum because of the permanent building — the old Pump Station No. 1 — that is already there and its area of high visibility off Hobart.

Mike Fraser said he thinks the war memorial is a

Abortion measure moves to House

AUSTIN (AP) — Senators have sent back to the House a late-term abortion regulation bill that some called "historic" but others said was not strong enough.

House members are expected to vote on the Senate changes today.

The compromise approved by the Senate prohibits a person from performing an abortion on a woman pregnant with a viable, or living, fetus during the third trimester of pregnancy.

An exception would be allowed to prevent the death or serious impairment of the woman's physical or mental health or of the fetus, or in the case of "severe and irreversible abnormality."

McAllen officer charged in fellow officer's shooting

PHARR (AP) — A McAllen police officer was charged with involuntary manslaughter after he allegedly pointed what he thought was an empty gun at a fellow officer during a chess game and pulled the trigger, police say.

Officer Jesus A. Ruiz, 22, was pronounced dead on arrival Thursday at McAllen Medical Center with a bullet wound in his abdomen, Pharr police spokesman Lt. Jesse Medina said.

McAllen police officer Noe Lara, 31, was charged with involuntary manslaughter in the shooting, and was later released from the Hidalgo County Jail on $20,000 bond, Medina said.

He said the shooting occurred about 4:40 a.m. while three officers and a civilian were at Lara's apartment playing chess.

"There was some evidence of (alcohol) consumption," Medina said, adding that there was no sign of a confrontation between the two men.

"The suspect officer recklessly got his weapon, probably thought it was empty and hit a live round," Medina said. "I would say there was not exactly horseplay, but a reckless use of the gun. . . Certainly we wouldn't have charged him if we didn't think so."

The Associated Press could not reach either Lara nor his attorney for comment Thursday.

The bullet that killed Ruiz was the only one in Lara's .357-caliber pistol, Medina said.

Ruiz was staying at Lara's Pharr apartment temporarily while waiting to move into another apartment, the spokesman said. Pharr is just east of McAllen in the Rio Grande Valley.

Lara will be suspended pending the outcome of an investigation.

VFW plans memorial service

Though Memorial Day was celebrated across the nation on Monday, the local Veterans of Foreign Wars post has decided to hold its observance Saturday morning.

Don Emmons, commander of VFW Post # 1567, said the post and the VFW Auxiliary will be having a Memorial Day ceremony at 8 a.m. Saturday in Fairview Cemetery to commemorate the nation's veterans who have died.

May 30 was the traditional day for the observance before the holiday was included in the move toward three-day weekends for holidays.

The post will have a table set up with small U.S. flags that residents may pick up and place on the graves of individual veterans buried in the local cemetery. Post members will collect the flags at the end of the day.

Guest speaker for the ceremony will be Gray County Sheriff Rufe Jordan.

A color guard from the local Texas National Guard unit will present flags during the ceremony, with a bugler playing the familiar "Taps."

Emmons said the post hopes to make the observance an annual event.

He said the public is invited to attend the ceremony to honor veterans.

Nations now grow crop of subsidies

Getting government officials to agree on any sort of policy is difficult; getting them to agree on non-traditional proposals, even when they make sense, is even harder. That's why a public statement from ministers of 24 industrial nations that it is about time to start reducing expensive farm-support programs is surprising — and heartening.

The agreement came at the end of a recent two-day gathering of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) in Paris. Perhaps the fact that farm-support programs cost taxpayers in OECD nations about $100 billion a year — while they cause huge crop surpluses and raise food prices for the poor — finally got the ministers' attention.

Of course it's one thing to recognize a problem and quite another actually to do something about it. While farm subsidy programs in this country and abroad have plenty of critics, they also have politically influential constituencies. Farmers are an important element in the ruling coalition in Japan and most European countries, and even a determined effort to reduce subsidies is bound to encounter domestic opposition.

If any of the OECD countries want an example of how difficult it can be to reduce agricultural subsidies, they have only to look at the record of the Reagan administration.

Before elected president, Ronald Reagan was an unsparing critic of programs that pay people not to grow food and that misallocate resources on a massive scale. But, even as administration spokesmen claimed to be devising programs to restore agriculture to the economic rather than the political marketplace, spending on those subsidy programs has grown dramatically.

Every specific proposal to reduce a specific program not only brings forth the wrath of special interests, it becomes another element in the litany of supposed "heartlessness" that fashionable folk claim is characteristic of the Reagan years. If only a little sympathy could be spared for the taxpayers who pay all the bills for all those special interests.

Other industrialized nations will get down to the specifics of trying to reduce agricultural subsidies. We wish them well, of course, but even with the best intentions, reducing wasteful government spending is a long and tough road to hoe.

Banks face bad-loan crisis

Last week began a new chapter in the 5-year-old world debt crisis. In an audacious move, Citicorp announced that it would incur the biggest quarterly loss in U.S. banking history, the result of increasing its reserves against losses. This sort of action is long overdue, and it can only work to the benefit of the world's economy.

Citicorp's problem is one shared with most of the nation's big money-center banks. During the 1970s it made billions in loans to the Third World nations, many of whom are now economically strapped. It has become painfully clear over the past five years that these countries simply lack the means to fully repay the debt — now or ever. They are functionally bankrupt. Some are paying only interest. Others, like Brazil, are paying nothing.

The banks, Western governments and multi-lateral lending agencies have muddled along trying to avoid confronting the obvious. But recent economic events have made the delusion impossible to maintain. On the one hand, Brazil, Mexico, Argentina and other borrowers have seen their export prospects hurt by slow economic growth in their crucial Western markets. Prices for commodities, which are crucial to their earnings, have stayed punishingly low. On the other hand, interest rates are rising, thus increasing their debt load. That adds up to serious trouble.

Citicorp, faced with this bleak situation, did the realistic thing and acknowledged that its Third World loans are worth considerably less than their face value. The bank, which has $12.8 billion in Third World debt, increased its reserves against future loan losses to $5 billion, or 39 percent of the total. That figure roughly corresponds with the market's discount of these loans.

Accepting reality is never a bad idea, but the move helps Citicorp in tangible ways. Most important, it strengthens its position in negotiations — particularly with Brazil, the biggest Third World debtor and biggest problem in the bank's portfolio.

The threat of default has been the debtor's principal weapon, but Citicorp has pre-empted them. Now it can afford to demand a realistic compromise, or to simply sell off its loans at their market value, secure in the knowledge that the worst blow already has been absorbed. The stock market, contrary to what might have been expected, greeted the news favorably.

Citicorp's bold measure may not be received so warmly in the debtor nations or the other big banks. Its competitors, notably Manufacturers Hanover and Bank of America, are now under pressure to follow suit, at some cost to their profitability and shareholder's equity. The blame for that predicament, though, lies less with Citicorp than with their own lending mistakes.

But in the long run Citicorp's action serves the interests of the other parties too. The sooner everyone accepts that these loans are uncollect-able, the sooner the debtor nations can start fresh in rebuilding their economies. Once their debt burdens are brought into line with their earnings potential, banks will be better able to extend sounder new loans to finance that growth. (Not only the Third World gain: The debtors' economic austerity has cost U.S. exporters dearly in lost sales.)

As University of Chicago economist Robert Z. Aliber puts it, the debtors are in the position of a company that is unable to borrow because lenders think it's headed for bankruptcy under Chapter 11. Once it has taken that painful step, however, new loans will flow. Most of the debtor countries have made impressive growth in exports. The problem is that their debts have risen just as fast.

A good share of the blame for that lies with the Reagan Administration and the International Monetary Fund. Their approach has been to ease the immediate pinch by extending new loans — which are no more payable than the old ones. The problem isn't solved, only postponed.

Citicorp's decision, by contrast, offers no hope that, in the not-to-distant future, both lenders and borrowers will be able to put the debt crisis behind them. Left to their own devices, and deprived of the hope of new bailouts, they will find means to accommodate the crucial interests of both sides. The best thing the U.S. government and the international lending agencies can do is get out of the way and let them.

Minds drift into the ozone

Beyond this world there are many others. Even our minuscule finite comprehension of infinite space confirms that we are not alone.

Whether other planets are peopled nobody knows yet.

Though some claim to, But who isn't fascinated with the fiction and films and fortunetellers who offer to share their best guesses concerning what's out there beyond the beyond.

The gypsy with the crystal ball is now being outdied by people who claim to have been visited by extraterrestrial beings. Some Americans, otherwise responsible citizens, seem genuinely to believe that they have seen — even visited aboard — alien spaceships.

I don't use the word "impossible" anymore. To me, radio and TV seem "impossible" — and thus materialization of three-dimensional apparitions would neither surprise nor frighten me.

The problem comes when charlatans in these pseudo-sciences seek to fleece money from people who really can't afford it. The movie actresses claiming involvement with the current occult fad — channeling — can afford to indulge their imaginations.

Actress Shirley MacLaine may even further enrich herself with books on the subject.

I don't know how much of "channeling" involves hypnosis but I've yet to see any spiritual benefit from it.

Channeling seems to provide escape, especially for Californians.

Most channels say they go into a trance, and energy from beyond talks through them. They close their eyes, breathe loudly, twitch and then rattle off opinions — in stilted English — on every subject from nuclear energy to self-respect.

And you will pay $20 to attend a group session or as much as $300 for a weekend class. And the classes are usually sold out.

These channels claim other worldly contacts, which may be individuals who yet live in the lost civilization of Atlantis or on a planet that is billions of miles beyond our Milky Way.

The channels offer only very fuzzy explanations, but this does not deter the people who flock to them.

One of the California channels claims to channel dolphins.

These fads are probably less harmful in themselves than in what they represent.

And what they represent is a growing disillusionment — a growing and understandable disenchantment — with traditional religions.

Coming to grips with grief

I never quite understood "cemetery day" when I was a kid, but I did know I both liked it and disliked it. Despite the picnic, the playing cousins and the holiday atmosphere, the adults' secret hung in the air like clouds before a storm.

I learned early that there would always be a time, every cemetery day, when the adults would band together in a terrifying sadness, and we children would be left out of it. So I approached the day with a mixture of excitement and dread, waiting to grow up and be let in on its mystery.

I don't think many children of the '50s were any more prepared to deal with death than my cousins or I were. And when death came, it was awful. I knew then that the secret the adults shared was that ultimately they had no save for the terrible aloneness death brought, and they gathered together once a year for protection.

When my mother died in 1976, I hated Memorial Day as I've hated no other day since. My mother committed suicide; and visiting her grave only tore open the soft scab that had formed over my grief. This time there were no relatives, no playing cousins, no picnics. My mother is buried in the city she and my father moved to, away from family on both sides. For several years after she died, it was just me, the grave and the artificial flowers I poked into the sand of the concrete vase on her stone.

I looked at Memorial Day then as a cruel joke. I believed I'd missed the great opportunities of her life, yet here I was poking flowers in sand she'd never see or appreciate.

Yet I went to the cemetery out of respect, because she'd always gone for her people and I felt someone had to go to her grave. Other people would know by the flowers and by the care with which they were arranged, that although her loved ones might have failed her at times, they loved her still.

And I went to register my protest that a life spent in such good came to such an end, that the strongest memory others had of her was not her humor or talent or gentleness. As much as I hated her tragic death, I hated that she ended her life in a way we still can't put into proper perspective, a way some of us call cowardly and others call crazy, and all of us without knowing anything about it.

When anyone dies for any reason, it is difficult to get past the grief and celebrate the life that was. With suicide, there is also guilt, the unrelenting feeling that you should have known and you should have been able to do something — that the sin of omission, you believe, must have added to the pain that exacted such a price. The terrible 20-20 hindsight is never more clear than after someone suffers enough to take her own life.

Slowly during the 10 years I've been visiting my mother's grave, and without my help, memories of the good things in her life began to overtake the shocking images of emotional pain and death. The graveside visits, which had once seemed like a shabby substitute for not having done something when it mattered, became an occasion to remember her unique and numerous wonders.

This year, I looked forward to cemetery day. What used to be the loneliest duty in the world had simply become something done alone. Just me, my plastic flowers and my memories of her.

As I think back on the cemetery days of my childhood, I wish the adults had shared with me their grief. More than that, I wish they had shared with me their memories of those they had loved and lost, so I could have more easily understood the value of a life lived, even after it ends.

High-ranking Cuban seeks asylum in U.S.

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Reagan administration, exultant over the defection of Cuba's second-ranking defense official, is describing it as perhaps the biggest U.S. intelligence coup in the 28 years of the Cuban revolution.

Brig. Gen. Rafael del Pino Diaz, deputy chief of the Cuban Defense Ministry, flew a small plane to Key West Naval Air Station in Florida on Thursday with his wife and three children.

Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said del Pino, formerly chief of the Cuban Air Force, requested asylum on arrival and was undergoing questioning.

Perry Rivkind, district director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Miami, said the family has been paroled into the United States, a status permitting them to remain here indefinitely without passports or visas.

"If this guy is who he says he is, this is the biggest intelligence coup since (Fidel) Castro took power," said an administration official who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

"This is a very important guy," said another official, who added that del Pino is believed to be one of the founders and organizers of the post-revolutionary military establishment in Cuba.

There have been several high-ranking defectors from Cuba in recent years, most of whom have remained largely anonymous out of fear that Cuban authorities might retaliate against their families if they go public.

The Reagan administration had almost nothing to say officially about del Pino aside from providing his name and rank. His motives for defecting were not disclosed. Privately, however, officials acknowledged that del Pino's flight represented a rare piece of good news at a time when the Iran-Contra hearings have been keeping the administration on the defensive.

The only other known Cuban military official who fled to the United States was Air Force Lt. Eduardo Guerra Jimenez. He left Cuba in a MiG-17 fighter on Oct. 5, 1969, but 10 years later returned to Cuba after hijacking a U.S. jetliner.

Pentagon officials who asked not to be identified said del Pino's plane, a small Cessna, was picked up on U.S. military radar at Tyndall Air Force Base, Fla., at 1:42 p.m. EDT.

Two F-16 fighter jets were scrambled to check out the plane and were in the process of moving into visual contact with the aircraft when the Key West Naval Air Station established radio contact with the Cessna. The naval station said the Cessna reported it wanted to land at Key West. The two F-16s remained in the area until the Cessna landed, the officials said.

The plane landed on Boca Chica Key about 2 p.m. EDT, according to Art Skelley.

Extended rain pummels Midwest

By HOWARD GOLDBERG
Associated Press Writer

An 11th straight day of rain in Oklahoma today kept up to 1,000 people from their homes as a ribbon of thunderstorms blamed for two deaths caused tens of millions of dollars in damage in the Midwest.

A state of emergency remained in effect in Oklahoma, where 6 to 9 inches of rain fell in the central part of the state Thursday, after moist air from the Gulf of Mexico clashed with cool northern and western air along a 1,000-mile front.

Thunderstorms in Texas on Thursday spawned eight tornadoes as well as baseball-size hail at Knickerbocker and 70 mph wind gusts at Wills Point, while in Wisconsin lightning hit at least 10 people, seriously injuring several of them.

The rain was so heavy in a Dallas suburb Thursday night that it sent the roof crashing down on an office party, injuring six people. Three were hospitalized in serious condition.

"We have been on the edge of a very potent situation for about a week," said Skip Ely, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Fort Worth, Texas. "Late-May storms are real juicy, like this one."

"Some roads and bridges remained closed in Oklahoma, where a 2-year-old girl died Thursday when her family's car was washed off a road, and a 14-year-old boy drowned in a flooded creek Wednesday. In central and southwest Oklahoma, muddy water from swollen rivers and creeks drove about 1,000 residents from their homes. The forecast called for 2 more inches of rain today.

"It won't be as heavy as we have had in the past few days," said meteorologist John Victory. "But even light rain will hurt."

State Civil Defense Director Norris Price said damage in Oklahoma could rise as high as $20 million.

In Iowa, an earthen dike burst in Hamburg, sending waters from the record-high Nishnabotna River swirling into the town of about 1,600 people. The National Guard spent the day sandbagging, patrolling and assisting with evacuations, said Lt. Col. Jerry Gorden.

Elsewhere in Iowa, conditions were starting to return to normal, said Ellen Gordon of the Office of Disaster Services, but state officials estimated agricultural damage alone at $3.6 million.

Reports from the four hardest-hit counties in the southwest tip of Iowa showed that 20 percent to 30 percent of the area's corn and soybean crops were harmed, said Dennis Olson of the state Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service.

In Texas, 66 counties, or one-fourth of the state, was under a tornado watch Thursday night. There were numerous reports of power outages and downed trees. In Wisconsin, at least 10 people were struck by lightning Thursday.

Advisers urge Reagan to push AIDS testing

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Reagan's domestic policy advisers are urging him to press states to start routinely giving AIDS tests to hospital patients, prisoners, marriage license applicants and others, sources say.

The Cabinet-level Domestic Policy Council, at a meeting Thursday that Reagan attended, also recommended that the federal government take steps to make AIDS blood tests routine at Veteran's Administration hospitals, federal clinics and federal prisons, said administration sources who insisted on anonymity.

The Domestic Policy Council reached a consensus on the issue by saying the expanded AIDS testing should be "routine," but not mandatory, the sources said.

U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop and the Public Health Service had vigorously opposed mandatory AIDS tests, except for immigrants.

Under the blueprint presented to the president, state and local authorities would be strongly urged to make AIDS tests a routine part of hospital admissions and marriage license applications, but a person could refuse to undergo the test if he or she wished.

AIDS tests also would be recommended for patients at clinics treating sexually transmitted diseases, and for those in state prisons and local jails.

The president is expected to approve the recommendations.

Reagan may outline his AIDS policy and the testing recommendations in a speech Sunday at a fund-raising dinner for the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

Presidential spokesman Martin Fitzwater said last week that Reagan "would probably look favorably" on mandatory testing for marriage license applicants and immigrants.

Reagan called AIDS "one of the most serious health problems facing the world" when he approved a national commission to suggest ways to cope with it earlier this month.

Koop has argued that mandatory tests would discourage carriers of the deadly AIDS virus from coming forward.

Koop had voiced concerns at a Domestic Policy Council meeting Wednesday that the blood tests are not 100 percent accurate and that false positive results could cause serious harm to the persons involved.

Secretary of Education William J. Bennett called in April for widespread mandatory tests. He subsequently softened that stance by calling for routine testing of hospital patients and others, with the understanding that a person could refuse to undergo the test if he or she wished.

That switch—from mandatory to routine—was sufficient to allow the Domestic Policy Council to reach a consensus on the AIDS recommendations, and Koop and Bennett shook hands.

Gary Bauer, the head of Reagan's Office of Policy Development and a stalwart conservative, also argued strongly that the administration should encourage routine AIDS testing to help check the spread of the disease.

Sources said the Domestic Policy Council decided that the Justice Department should develop a plan for routine testing of federal prisoners; the Department of Health and Human Services a plan for routine testing of immigrants; and the White House Office of Policy Development a plan for routine tests at VA hospitals and other federal clinics.

Abducted British diplomat released

LONDON (AP) — British diplomat Edward Chaplin, kidnapped in Tehran by six armed men, has been released and returned to his family, the Foreign Office said today.

Chaplin, Britain's No. 2 diplomat in Iran, was abducted as he drove along a Tehran highway with his wife and two children Thursday.

Britain protested to Iran today over what it described as the "horrific incident."

At the same time, Iran said it had protested "the illegal arrest" of an Iranian diplomat in Britain, and said Britain "will be responsible for the consequences of this unlawful act."

Chaplin's wife, Nicola, and their 3-year-old daughter and infant son, who also were in the car, were left alone, said the spokesman, who in keeping with British custom refused to be identified.

Mrs. Chaplin provided details of the attack to Iranian and British officials, he said. The exact location of the attack was not immediately known.

No group claimed responsibility, and there was no immediate comment from officials in Iran. The abduction took place at about 4:30 p.m. Iranian time, the spokesman said.

The abduction came one day after Iran protested to Britain about the arrest two weeks ago on a shoplifting charge of Ali Qassemi, an attaché at the Iranian consulate in Manchester.

A Foreign Office spokesman said Christopher MacRae, head of the office's British interests section in Tehran, had been called to the Iranian Foreign Ministry to receive the protest.

The official Iranian news agency IRNA said today that Qassemi was released a few hours after he was detained but that he had been "insulted by the British police."

The Iranian agency also said Qassemi had been attacked and beaten a few days before his arrest and blamed the attack on "Iranian counter-revolutionary groups who are freely active under the protection of the British police."

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Britain today protested the kidnapping to Iran.

The Iranian charge d'affaires in London was summoned to the Foreign Office today. A Foreign Office spokesman identified the charge as a Mr. Akhundzadeh-Basti and said his first name was not available. The Iranian Embassy was closed today for a Moslem holiday.

Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe said Britain held Iran responsible for Chaplin's safety, but said the Iranians, like Britain, "probably have no idea" who was behind the kidnapping.

The foreign secretary ruled out any deals to secure the diplomat's release. "The British government's policy remains absolutely unwavering because we have no doubt that it is that policy that minimizes the risk to British subjects from hazards of this kind," he said.

Britain has a 19-member diplomatic team in Tehran that operates from the former British Embassy building now housing the Swedish Embassy.

Britain closed its embassy there Sept. 9, 1980, following Iranian charges that Iranian students detained after a violent anti-American demonstration in London were ill-treated by prison guards.

The charges were denied by the Home Office.

West German plane lands in Red Square

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — A white, single-engine plane with West German markings that circled Red Square, buzzed Lenin's mausoleum and landed near the Kremlin wall was towed away before dawn today by police who had guarded it overnight.

The pilot and his female companion landed about 7:30 p.m. Thursday on the cobblestoned Red Square. They were arrested after the pilot jumped from the plane and shouted to about 300 amazed Soviets that he was an engineer from West Germany, a Russian witness said.

According to witnesses, he did not explain why he landed in Red Square.

Reports from Finland and West Germany today indicated the plane may have left Helsinki, penetrated one of the most closely guarded borders in the world and flown over several hundred miles of Soviet airspace to reach Moscow.

The pilot, who landed in Moscow on the Soviet holiday honoring the nation's border guards, handed out a few autographed pieces of paper before he and his companion were arrested, the witness said.

The plane had a wide blue stripe and appeared to be a U.S.-made Cessna aircraft. It was towed away on the back of a Soviet flatbed truck about 4 a.m. today. French television journalists who witnessed the removal said the plane was escorted by six police cars with flashing blue lights as it headed out toward Sheremetyevo Airport.

The Soviets provided no official information about the aircraft, and the West German Embassy said it was investigating reports the pilot was a German but had received no information from Soviet officials.

The Finnish air rescue service had mounted a search for a missing four-seat Cessna 172B that left Helsinki but failed to reach its planned destination of Stockholm, Sweden, officials in Helsinki said.

"The pilot identified himself as Matthias Rust," said Raimo Seppanen of the Malmi Airport flight control office.

"He took off in the right direction and we gave him the altitudes, but then he vanished," Seppanen told The Associated Press in Helsinki.

Stark probe ends

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — The leader of a U.S. team investigating the Iraqi attack on the USS Stark said today his group achieved its objectives, but could not rule out further accidental attacks in the Persian Gulf.

Rear Adm. David Rogers, deputy director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told reporters the Baghdad end of the probe was over.

"We have established what happened and more importantly, we've reached preliminary agreement with recommendations I'll take back to Washington...for a mutual agreement between the two countries to prevent this type of thing from happening again," Rogers said. He spoke with reporters before the Pentagon-State Department team of eight left for Washington.

Asked if there were any guarantees there would be no more Iraqi attacks on U.S. warships in the gulf, he said: "Any time that there are forces operating in proximity I can't tell you it will never happen again."

But, he added, "We've reached preliminary agreements which...will dramatically reduce the possibility it will ever happen again."

The admiral, flanked by U.S. Ambassador David Newton and an unidentified Iraqi brigadier general, said the American team of Army, Navy and Air Force specialists, which arrived Monday, is "certain we have the information to piece together what happened" in the attack on the Stark.

The U.S. frigate was hit May 17 by two missiles. One of them, a wave-skimming Exocet, did not detonate and the other, whose type was not determined, exploded killing 37 American sailors, wounding 21 others and setting the guided-missile frigate on fire.

Iraq, which called the attack an accident, says the missiles were fired by one French-built Iraqi Mirage F-1 fighter-bomber.

Rogers refused to say if the American investigators had been allowed to question the pilot of the warplane.

Stephanie Petit, an eighth grader from Bethel Park, Pa., received her gold trophy after winning the National Spelling Bee.

How do you spell victory? 's-t-a-p-h-y-l-o-c-c-o-c-c-i'

By DONNA CASSATA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Girls ruled the 60th National Spelling Bee with a 13-year-old junior wordsmith capturing the coveted title in a contest that in the end was all female.

The trend became obvious in the seventh round when girls outnumbered the boys nine to six. After that fray, in which "meerschchaum" and "polysemous" did some of the boys in, only four female spellers remained.

The new national spelling champion is Stephanie Petit, a dark-haired, eighth-grader from Bethel Park, Pa., who successfully spelled "dyscalculia" and "staphylococci."

The runner-up, Rachel E. Nussbaum, 14, of Ithaca, N.Y., credited the female success to a theory that girls are more adept than boys in certain fields.

"Some people say girls are just smarter, but I think that's not true," said the daughter of two college professors. "Maybe girls are a little smarter at things that have to do with languages, like spelling."

For her victory, Stephanie earned a gold trophy cup, $1,500 plus prizes and a national television appearance.

She and the other 184 spellers were meeting today with President Reagan and his wife, Nancy, following a White House tour.

"I can't believe this is me," Stephanie told reporters as they mobbed the stage to get her reaction to the triumph.

Stephanie, a straight-A student who enjoys tennis and plays violin and piano, said she studied spelling every day, including six hours each Saturday and Sunday. But after the win, she said: "This is it. I'm done with spelling."

The championship came down to the correct spelling of two medical terms.

Rachel incorrectly spelled "dyscalculia," meaning an impairment of mathematical ability due to an organic brain condition. She began the word with the letters "di."

Stephanie corrected Rachel's error, prompting shrieks from the dozens of spellers sitting cross-legged on the hotel ballroom floor. She then spelled the winning word.

Depression strengthens

MIAMI (AP) — The first tropical depression of the year has become better organized, a forecaster said today as the Bahamian government issued a tropical storm warning for its northern islands.

"Conditions are becoming more favorable for slow strengthening," hurricane specialist Bob Case said in an advisory issued by the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables near here.

The depression was about 200 miles east of Nassau and about 375 miles east of Miami at 6 a.m. EDT, the advisory said. Its coordinates were reported as 25.5 north latitude and 74.5 west longitude.

The depression is moving westward at 10 mph and should continue to do so throughout today, Case said.

Maximum sustained winds are estimated to be near 35 mph, but increased thunderstorm activity will produce stronger gusts, he said.

The six-month Atlantic hurricane season officially starts Monday.

IN MEMORY OF A Leader

Monuments have been erected to great men in all parts of the world. Some are in recognition of Leadership, others for specific brave acts, and others to those who have shown love and compassion for their fellow men.

The Bible is a monument to God. It reminds us of His great leadership, of His compassion and love, and tells of His great gift to us. But it is even greater than other monuments, for it still leads us.

THE CHURCH IN EVERYONE

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long survive and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even persons and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even persons and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. His Touch

By Charlotte Barbaree

Scripture: Which of you fathers, if your son asks for a fish, will give him a snake instead? Or if he asks for an egg, will give him a scorpion? If you then, though you are evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give the Holy Spirit to those who ask him? (Luke 11:11-13 NIV)

I was a child prodigy in the junk food department. As a matter of fact, I was so precocious I was a junk food junkie before the label was invented.

I attained, at an early age, a superbly developed palate for sweets and have managed to maintain into adulthood my high degree of culinary cultivation.

I have persevered in my dedication to desserts in spite of trying hardships; for example, my parents occasionally got the ridiculous notion in their heads that I should taste such poisons as asparagus and liver; but I courageously protected my tastebuds from contamination.

On the other hand, I have had some invaluable support from my grandparents.

My maternal grandmother owned a cookie jar. It was a brown, ceramic jar with a handpainted tiger lily on the front of it. It looked ordinary enough, but every now and then it was elevated to a level of excellence rarely maintained by an inanimate object. Occasionally the cookie jar contained, instead of cookies, fresh, glazed doughnuts!

The mouth of the jar was just barely big enough to ease a doughnut out; however, my hand was small, and if I could locate two doughnuts stuck together, and if I worked carefully enough, I could manage to pull them both out. If they were still stuck together (and I suspect because Grandmother thought I was adorable), I was allowed to eat both of them.

Give me one doughnut and I'll follow you anywhere; give me two doughnuts and I'll follow without even asking where we're going!

Because of my strong feelings toward the cookie jar, I inherited it when Grandmother was called Home. It decorates the top of my microwave oven, a constant reminder of its early days of glory and my innocent days of eating without getting fat.

Along with the memories, I now have a greater understanding of what the cookie jar contained. The doughnuts were there, not just because I especially loved to eat them, but because Grandmother especially loved me.

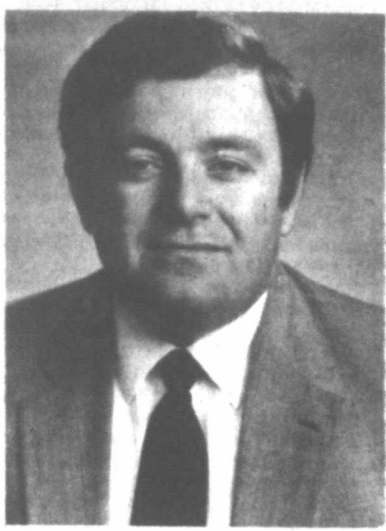

Our Heavenly Father possesses a magnitude of love beyond our comprehension. Out of His infinite love, He gives to His children the presence of the Holy Spirit miraculously multiplied and intensified by our sincere hunger.

All His grace is ours for the seeking, not just because we especially enjoy His touch, but because He especially loves us.

Brazil missionary to speak at First Assembly of God

Eldon L. Tracy, a newly assigned missionary to Brazil, will be the guest speaker at special missions services Sunday at First Assembly of God, 500 S. Cuyler.

Tracy will speak at the 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. services, announced Rev. Herb Peak, pastor.

"I see Brazil today as a great harvest field where God has richly blessed His church with great growth," Tracy said. "But now the need is to train pastors, evangelists and missionaries to minister to the people in and outside the church."

"This is their need, and our desire is to help the church train these needed ministers," he continued. "In a country of 141 million people, there are still millions who need to receive Christ."

Tracy and his wife Twyla have spent the last four years on the staff of the Portuguese Bible Institute in Lisbon, Portugal. They have also taught and ministered throughout the nation of Portugal.

Now they have been assigned to work in pastoral training in Brazil.

In the special missions rally Sunday, Tracy will have with him a pastor, Paulo Cardoso, from Portugal. Cardoso is a product of the missionary efforts in Portugal. He will be ministering the word in Portuguese and Tracy will interpret.

Tracy will share concerning the couple's new assignment to train pastors and evangelists in Brazil.

"You will not want to miss this opportunity to hear the reports and be a part of this great missionary rally," said Rev. Peak, inviting the public to attend.

Community Christian Center plans covered-dish luncheon

Community Christian Center, 801 E. Campbell, will give a covered-dish luncheon Sunday for guest speaker Rev. David Barker and his family of Baxter Springs, Kansas.

Rev. Barker will be ministering in both the 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. services. Accompanying him will be his wife Maud and daughter Lisbeth.

Barker is currently pastoring at the Keelville Church and has experience in youth ministry, counseling and prayer ministry.

The congregation invite the public to attend the meetings and to enjoy a good time of fellowship.

The church also enjoyed the fellowship during services last Sunday with four generations of the Comstock family, with a covered-dish luncheon also held.

Ministering in sermon, music, testimony and songs at the center last Sunday were Rev. Walter L. Comstock, McLean; Mr. and

Rev. Barker and family

Mrs. Gene Manning, Fritch; Rev. and Mrs. J.G. Lucas, L'Ammon, Okla.; Mr. and Mrs. R.P. Destarac and daughter Tina, Thornton, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gross and son Jeffrey and Mrs. Ruth Sullaway, all of Pampa, and Kathy Huff and son Jon and Steve Lucas, all of Lefors.

Religion Roundup

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — A noted religious statistician says the number of Christians in the world rose last year from 1.57 billion to 1.64 billion, up from 32.4 percent of the total world population to 32.9 percent.

The Rev. David Barrett, editor of the World Christian Encyclopedia, says the growth trend indicates that a previous decline has been "dramatically halted and reversed."

Barrett, an Anglican priest now serving as consultant to the Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board, said the most surprising growth has been in China. Of the world's total says there are 907 million Roman Catholics, 322 million Protestants, 51.6 million Anglicans, and 273 million Eastern Orthodox Christians.

St. Paul's to honor pastor

Rev. James Putnam and family will be honored Sunday with a church dinner at St. Paul's United Methodist Church at noon immediately following morning services.

Rev. Putnam is taking a year's disability leave of absence due to health reasons. The family will reside at 3466 Linda Drive in Dallas, Texas 75226, following their move in June.

The congregation is holding the dinner to express their appreciation and gratitude to Rev. Putnam and his wife Jewel for their diligent work in building spiritual growth within the church.

Friends and relatives are invited to bring a pot-luck dish and attend the dinner following the Sunday morning worship service. Drinks will be provided.

Putnam has served St. Paul's for three years. His prior ministry services include the Grace

Rev. Putnam, center, with wife Jewel, daughter Janine and son Ron.

New ways will enable you to fulfill your secret hope in the year ahead. Your reward will be pleasurable, not material.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Events will have a way of working out for your ultimate benefit today, provided you don't rock the boat. This could be especially true if your reputation is on the line.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Exercise gentle and considerate behavior on those with whom you're involved today. Kindness is a powerful force that will generate favorable responses.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Be alert for a financial opportunity today from other than your usual sources. If this situation can be put together properly, it could yield long-term benefits.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) A decision you may have to make today will work out favorably for all concerned if you base it upon unselfishness. Consider everyone's needs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Today will be meaningless unless you are involved in something you feel is productive. You'll be especially pleased if it's a labor of love.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If you haven't been too fortunate in the romance department lately, don't despair. Starting today, conditions could suddenly change for the better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) A good way to express your creative and artistic urges today is to make some of those little changes around your house that you've been contemplating.

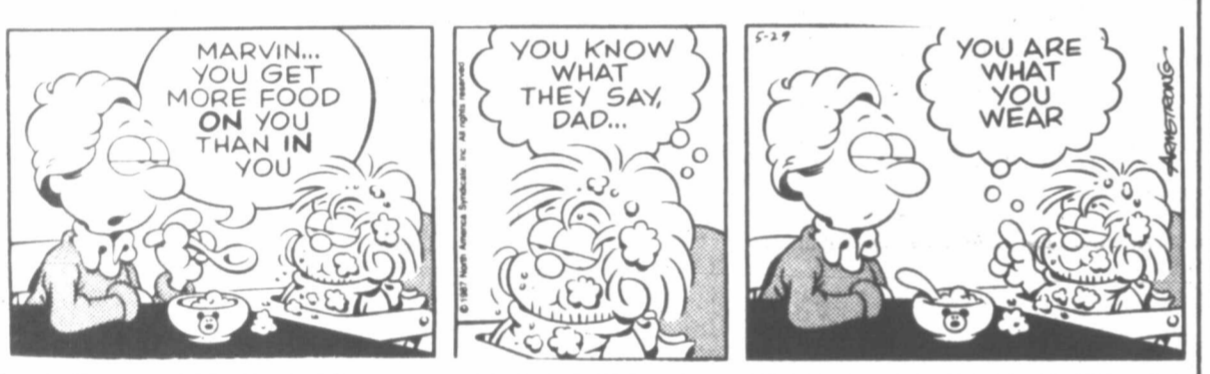

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Someone who likes you will be formulating pleasant social plans in which you'll figure prominently. He or she is anxious to make you happy.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Someone to whom you have a strong emotional tie may play an instrumental role today in helping you get something you've been eager to possess.

Easy-to-make pyramid planter is small, has layered growing area for variety

By BOB SAWYER

The hip mystics of the '70s may have had something when they claimed the potent powers of the pyramid.

I have never gone so far as to sleep under one or wear one. But it's a fact that the planter I built in the shape of a pyramid has transformed a tiny balcony area into a rich garden spot.

The unique planter is only 27 inches square at the base and 48 inches tall, but it contains six levels of planter boxes. A hollow interior cuts down on overall weight and amount of dirt required.

It rolls on casters, so the structure can be moved easily to take advantage of available light. You can water the layers separately or spray the entire structure with a garden hose.

Trailing vines are especially nice looking, but a wide variety of plants will thrive in the pyramid. The best part is, it is an extremely easy project to build in the home workshop.

Our fan-shaped planter trellis is another unique, attractive project you might enjoy building. It can be made as a planter or to post in the ground. The heart-shaped insert is a real eye-catcher.

Our detailed plans include complete materials lists, full-size patterns where required, and step-by-step instructions.

To order plans for the pyramid planter, specify Project No. 2044; or for the planter trellis, No. 2074. Send $4.95 for either plan, or save a dollar and order both for only $8.90.

Mail to: Backyard Builder, Dept. 79065, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. 74008-1000. Add $2.95 for a catalog with discount coupons.

I used redwood, waferwood and plywood for the pyramid planter, but other types of wood will work just as well.

For the interior pyramid, cut from 7-16 inch waferwood a 6-inch-square top; a 13½-inch-square base; two tapered walls, each 40 inches tall, 13½ inches across the bottom and 6 inches across the top; and two more tapered walls, each 40 inches tall, 12½ inches across the bottom and 5 inches across the top.

Nail and glue the walls together, with the narrower ones between the wider ones. Attach the top and bottom.

Cut from ¾-inch plywood a 27-inch-square lower base and a 25½-inch-square upper base. Cut a 1½-inch-square notch from each corner of the upper base.

Cut small triangular braces to go under the four corners of the lower base, where the swivel casters will be attached. Center and attach the upper base to the lower base, and the inner pyramid to the base assembly.

For the frame that will support the planter boxes, cut four 45¼-inch lengths of 2x2 and miter the ends at an 8-degree angle. Cut a 13½-inch-square frame top from ¾-inch plywood, and cut a 6-inch-square hole in the center.

Fit the lower ends of the 2x2 braces into the notches at the corners of the upper base. Turn them so they all lean in toward the center. Nail in place at the bottom. Nail the frame top to the upper ends. Cut two 10-inch-long supports from scrap wood and nail them between the frame top and inner pyramid.

The planter boxes are assembled separately, and slip down over the top of the 2x2 frame. Each one is supported by boards nailed directly to the 2x2s.

For the largest planter box, which goes at the bottom, cut the following lengths of 1x4 lumber: two 27-inch supports, two 25½-inch supports, two 32¼-inch box sides, two 31¼-inch box sides, and four 31¼-inch box floors.

Miter both ends of each support at an 8-degree angle. Nail the shorter supports to opposite sides of the 2x2 frame, resting on the planter base and flush with the outer edges. Nail the longer supports to the two remaining sides.

The supports for the next box are attached about 9¼ inches above the bottom supports. Continue adding supports for five layers of boxes. (The top box rests on top of the inner pyramid.)

To construct the largest planter box, miter the ends of each box side at a 10-degree angle. Assemble them with butt joints, placing the shorter sides between the longer ones. Miter the ends of the four floor boards at a 45-degree angle and assemble to form a square frame.

Attach the assembled sides to the floor, and slip the planter box down over the 2x2 pyramid frame. It should rest on the lowest support boards.

Each planter box is assembled in the same manner, except for the top box, which has a solid 13-inch-square floor. It sits on top of the inner pyramid.

Handsome pyramid planter is an easy build-it-yourself small-space garden.

Wedding shower gift keeps on giving for recipient

DEAR ABBY: Now that the wedding season is here again, I thought I might pass along a funny thing that happened to me when I got married five years ago. (I learned a valuable lesson from it.)

During my bridal shower, I opened a gift from a girl who (fortunately for her) could not attend the shower. The card read: "For Sue and Jim with love from Donna and Sam." As I removed a beautiful set of salad bowls from the box, another card fell out — so I picked it up to read aloud, and nearly fell over when I read: "To Donna and Sam, happy wedding and love from The Smiths." Luckily

I caught myself before I read it out loud.

My husband and I think of the Smiths every time we use those lovely salad bowls. I also learned a valuable lesson before I made the same mistake.

Donna never found out that her faux pas was discovered. The names above are not the real ones, so just sign me ...

NOT FOOLED

DEAR NOT FOOLED: You have passed on a valuable warning. There's nothing wrong with recycling a gift, but one should carefully examine the wrappings to make sure there is no card nestled in the tissue from the original giver.

Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old Minnesota male, dating a 21-year-old female from Georgia. Her folks are strict Southern Baptists, and the time has come for me to ask "Papa Daddy" for his daughter's hand in marriage. So what's the problem? Well, I've been divorced for six years and my girlfriend and her sister say, "Don't tell the folks!"

However, I love her folks, and we get along very well. I am of the same religion, and I know they like and trust me.

What do you think? To tell or not to tell? Please answer soon.

GEORGIA ON MY MIND

DEAR GEORGIA: A failed marriage is not a crime. But one question: Are there any children in your closet? I advise you to tell your future in-laws the heretofore undisclosed details of your past. And the sooner the better.

DEAR ABBY: I just read about the poor guy who took a gal out to dinner and on their first date she rubbed her shoeless foot against his leg. I've given it lots of thought and concluded that:

1. She "knee-ded" him badly.
2. She was starting a romance from scratch.
3. Her behavior was "leg-endary."
4. In confessing to her priest the next day she said, "Father, I have shinned!"

HAROLD Z., CHICAGO
P.S. Abby, is this true?

DEAR HAROLD: Of course. Truth is stranger than friction.

Family tree should include collateral kin

Gena on Genealogy

The term "first cousin, once removed" is not used in conversations and therefore is often misunderstood.

The number removed indicates the number of generations between the descendants establishing the relationship. For example, your great-grandfather has two sons, one being your father and the other your uncle, two generations removed, or twice removed.

Children of this uncle and of your grandfather are first cousins. Any of the children of your granduncle is your first cousin also, only they are one generation removed from you. Thus they are your first cousins, once removed.

Cousins are collateral relatives, along with aunts, uncles, nieces and nephews, and often provide the necessary information to complete a family tree. Collateral relatives should be considered with your direct ancestors to eliminate backtracking later on when the relationships are established.

Direct ancestors are those related by blood that follow the line from parents to grandparents to great-grandparents, etc.

Other types of "kinship" that should be considered include STEP RELATIVES, or those related by marriage, either in your own family or in a relative's family, that provide a "substitute" for parents or brothers or sisters.

IN-LAW RELATIONS are the members of a spouse's family that are not blood related to yourself, and ADOPTIVE relationships are those resulting from adoption that are figured the same as for blood lines.

Many beginning researchers make the mistake of following the direct lines only. Check all the relationships to make the family tree complete.

McMinns win third in tournament

Mark McMinn of Pampa Sheltered Workshop participated in a recent scrambles golf tournament at Ross Rogers Municipal Golf Course in Amarillo.

Mark and his team members, including his father, Floyd McMinn; Steve Mills of Amarillo; and Keith Mullinaz of Borger won third place in the third flight and were presented trophies.

The tournament, sponsored by Family Out Reach of Amarillo State Center, drew 17 teams competing for trophies.

Proceeds from the tournament were to go to Family Services, according to Mrs. McMinn, Mark's mother.

Mark was the only mentally handicapped player in the tournament, his mother said. She added that he was the first Pampa to compete in the International Special Olympics, and recently entered the area special track and field events in Canyon.

"He really tries hard, and we're very proud of him," Mrs. McMinn said.

Pistons ease past Celtics

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Boston forward Larry Bird feels like he's heading for the wrong coast. Bird and the Celtics wanted to travel to the West Coast, where the Los Angeles Lakers are awaiting an opponent for the NBA final.

Instead, the Detroit Pistons got 24 points each from Adrian Dantley and Vinnie Johnson and 21 from Isiah Thomas and beat the Celtics 113-105 Thursday night to send both teams back to Boston for Game 7 of the Eastern Conference final series.

The series, tied 3-3, will be decided Saturday afternoon in Boston Garden with the winner opening the final series in Los Angeles on Tuesday.

"I just wish we could have gotten out of here tonight," said Bird, who had a game-high 35 points for Boston. "I wanted to play the Lakers on Sunday, but we have to play Saturday. We're going back home."

"Game 7, that's it, for all the marbles. Saturday is a big game for us. We're ready for it."

Kevin McHale scored 23 points for Boston, despite a touch of flu, while Danny Ainge and Darren Daye scored 16 apiece.

The game was close through the first three quarters with the Pistons leading 84-83 as the final period began.

Then Johnson, who thrives in his reserve role, scored 10 of his 12 fourth-quarter points during a run in which Detroit rolled to a 104-91 lead that all but decided the outcome with 5:04 remaining.

The Pistons, who have lost 17 consecutive games in Boston, seemed confident they could break the spell Saturday. If they do, they'll make it to the NBA final for the first time in the team's history.

"One game left. It will be a shootout," said Detroit center Bill Laimbeer, who scored 12 points. "I'm looking forward to it. It's going to be a lot of fun."

The Pistons, who let an apparent victory slip away in Game 5 when Bird stole an inbounds pass from Thomas and fed it to Dennis Johnson for the winning basket with one second remaining, seemed tentative at first — as if haunted by the memory of that heartbreaking defeat.

"I knew we would bounce back, because I would bounce back and the team follows my lead," Thomas said.

Donations needed for track girls

A local pizza house has joined in a fund-raising campaign to send Laquita Brown and Andrea Hopkins of the Pampa Lady Harvesters track team to China for an international meet.

Mr. Gatti's will donate three dollars for every large pizza delivered or picked up to the fund-raising campaign. Mr. Gatti's manager Rick Massick said the promotion will start today and end June 7. Massick said no coupons will be accepted or discounts given for the large pizza orders.

Brown and Hopkins are among 140 high school athletes selected by the International Sports Exchange to represent the United States.

The United States team will compete in China June 15-25.

Brown is a member of the state champion 440-relay team while Hopkins won the state shot put event.

"We've got enough to get them there. Now we've got to raise enough money to get them home," said Jack Gindorf, who is in charge of the fund-raising effort.

Persons interested in making donations can contact Gindorf at 665-6709, Gary Cornelsen at 665-0323 or Mike Lopez at 665-7063.

Thomas ready to fight Tyson

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Pinklon Thomas "is ready to go to war."

The enemy is Mike Tyson. The spoils of their scheduled 12-round battle Saturday night at the Las Vegas Hilton will be the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association heavyweight championships held by the 20-year-old Tyson.

"I'm going in there to fight Mike," the 29-year-old Thomas said. "I'm going to take him to the bridge."

"If he's not intimidated, then we'll just fight," Tyson said. "This is the fight I'm going to prove I'm the best fighter in the world."

Tyson won the WBC title on a second-round knockout of Trevor Berbick here last Nov. 22, then won the WBA title on a unanimous decision over James "Bonecrusher" Smith here March 7.

The fight was marred by Smith's holding tactics, which Tyson couldn't solve.

"I wasn't satisfied with my performance, but what could I do," Tyson said. "It takes two to tango."

"This guy will try to win. He knows what he lost and he'll try to win it back."

Thomas lost the WBC title on a 12-round decision to Berbick here March 22, 1986.

College World Series gets under way today

By STEVEN WINE
Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Jim Brock and Cliff Gustafson, who between them have brought 35 teams to the College World Series, say the event improves each year.

"It's getting better and better all the time," said Gustafson, whose top-rated Texas Longhorns play Southwest Conference rival Arkansas in a first-round game Saturday. "On paper this is the strongest field I've seen."

Today's opening games pitted Brock's Arizona State team against Oklahoma State and Louisiana State against Florida State. Stanford plays Georgia Saturday in the other first-round game of the double-elimination tournament.

Brock and Gustafson, who have each won two national championships, said expanded NCAA regional tournaments that determine the College World Series field have made it more balanced.

"The NCAA has worked really hard to get the eight best teams here this year," Brock said at a news conference Thursday.

"When I first came here, there were oftentimes three teams that were clearly better than the other five. But there isn't anybody this year that you want to play against. They're all winning about 80 percent of their games."

Brock said if there's an underdog this year, it's his team. The Sun Devils, 40-25, had to overcome NCAA and Pacific 10 Conference sanctions that left them with only seven scholarship players.

"We are unbelievably surprised to be here," Brock, who is making his 10th appearance in the World Series, said. "We didn't think about much more than keeping our program together until early May."

Texas reached the College World Series for five straight years before falling short last season. That was a good lesson, according to Gustafson.

"I think you do tend to get spoiled when you have things quite easy," Gustafson said. "I don't think millionaires appreciate a dollar as much as us poor people do."

Texas has won four out of five games this season against Arkansas.

"I would hope we'll maintain the things we've done against them in some areas and do better in other," Razorbacks Coach Norm DeBriyn said. "We haven't scored very many runs against them, I know that."

Another regular entrant in the series field is Oklahoma State, making a record seventh straight appearance but still looking for its first title.

The Cowboys are led by sophomore third baseman Robin Ventura, who has a 56-game hitting streak. Coach Gary Ward said Ventura will face strong pitching in the series.

"I think in two or three weeks down the road you're going to see as much as a million dollars spent by professional baseball in procuring players on these ballclubs — for pitchers alone," Ward said.

Louisiana State will be without its best hitter, Joey Belle, who was suspended for the fourth time this season by Coach Skip Bertman before the NCAA South II regional tournament.

"He has one problem — he has a temper when he strikes out," Bertman said. "I hope this method of discipline will help him."

The Tigers' first-round opponent, Florida State, made the series with a more subdued attack than usual.

"I'm glad we don't have a temper striking out, or we wouldn't have any players left." Seminoles Coach Mike Martin said.

"We're still struggling, trying to find a way to steal first. We have good pitching, good defense and the best team speed we've had."

Stanford Coach Mark Marquess said balance has been the key to his team's success.

"If we had to pick a most valuable player, I don't think it could be done, because it's been a different player every game," Marquess said. "I've had better offensive teams at Stanford and I've had better defensive teams. Pitching depth is our strength."

The Stanford-Georgia game will mark the Bulldogs' first series appearance but not the first for Coach Steve Webber.

"I was here one other time, as a player in 1969," Webber, who played at Southern Illinois, said. "Guess who played in the first game? Texas and Arizona State. I saw Burt Hooton pitch against Larry Gura."

"They're outstanding programs and they've been doing it for many years."

School budget figures should be more available to taxpayers

All the nit that's fit to pick: I agree with the caller. The school budget should be made available to the taxpayers by being placed in Lovett Library for perusal. It is now available only at the School Business Office and at hours the office is open.

Why not move the NCAA annual convention to mid-October or better still, to late May or summertime, so basketball coaches can attend and protect their turf. In mid-January, as it has been for years, it comes during the heart of the college conference cage schedules, with each team playing 2-3 games during convention week. Let's be fair. But then the luxurious California, Florida and New Orleans suites and weather aren't as attractive during the summertime.

Do you, too, get upset with Con-

I can't forget how these same double-dealers circumvented the intent of the law to get into your pocketbook and mine with their latest round of pay raises.

the school board is going to charge 'snow days' to the taxpayers, steal a day or two of education from the students, why not withhold the pay, too, and use it to hold down school taxes? And when is the last time a teachers' organization begged the school board not to waste a day of learning, as they insist on high salaries, over-schedule pay, and more and more money for education? Does it upset you, too, when TV network officials and major newspaper editors when asked why they don't report certain news stories, reply: "We give you what we think you need to know." These are the same people who hide behind the First Amendment.

Clark leads Cards past Braves 11-5

By PAUL LeBAR
AP Sports Writer

At least until an early pattern starts to shift, Jack Clark is content taking what National League pitchers are willing to give him. "They don't want to give me anything in," Clark said after hitting two more homers and driving in three runs to lead the St. Louis Cardinals past the Atlanta Braves 11-5 in the only National League game Thursday.

"That's why I'm in the closed stance," Clark said. "I'm not feeling comfortable, but I'm hitting more balls to right and center field. As long as it (style) works, why fix it?"

Atlanta pitcher Rick Mahler, 26, who gave up Clark's 14th and 15th homers this season, saw no reason to disagree.

"He's paid to hit home runs, and that's what he's doing. You've got to give a lot of credit to Jack Clark," Mahler said. "This is not the easiest of ballparks to hit home runs in."

Clark picked on a 1-2 fastball and hit a two-run homer in the first inning that gave St. Louis a 2-1 lead.

His second homer, off a 2-2 curve as the leadoff hitter in the fifth, ignited a three-run St. Louis inning.

"It didn't seem like it should carry," Mahler said. "But it did."

Clark also had a single as St.

Louis rapped a season-high 18 hits.

"It was too much Jack Clark today," Atlanta Manager Chuck Tanner said. "He's a superstar. He's one of the top five players in the game, in my opinion."

Bill Dawley, 1-4, relieved St. Louis starter Tim Conroy in Atlanta's third and worked 4 2-3 innings for his first victory in 12 decisions since Oct. 2, 1985. The only run he allowed was Dale Murphy's 14th home run.

Clark's binge has given him an NL-leading .465 on-base percentage and .728 slugging percentage that ranks second in the league.

Football coaches suspended for violating UIL regulations

By LISA FEIND
Palestine Herald Press

PALESTINE, Texas (AP) — When the stadium announcer at this year's state high school track and field meet in Austin called out the lane assignments for the girls Class 3A 100-meter dash, one name was missing from his list.

It was that of Palestine Westwood senior Andrea "Squeaky" Wilson — the defending state champion in that event.

Later, when the names of the Class 3A competitors in the 200-meter dash echoed through Memorial Stadium, again there was no "Squeaky."

Two years ago as a sophomore, she capped an undefeated season in the 200 with a gold-medal performance at state. She also won a silver medal in the 100.

As a freshman, Wilson anchored the Lady Panthers' state champion 800-meter relay squad.

Last year, the Westwood speedster's state championship in the 100 was the apex of a perfect year in that event. After a rain delay of almost six hours last year, Wilson finished a disappointing fourth in the 200 — only the second time in 1986 she had not won the race.

Losing the state title in her favorite race made Wilson more determined than ever. She vowed to return to Austin this year and recapture the state crown in the 200.

In addition, she planned to defend her title in the 100 and perhaps pick up a couple more gold medals in the long jump and triple jump or maybe the 400.

Before the track season began, Wilson had several college coaches waiting anxiously to watch her final performance at the University Interscholastic League state meet.

But the senior would never make that last trip to Austin. She tore two ligaments in her knee during the basketball season. After two months, her doctor decided to operate, and she was on crutches for two more months, and she missed the entire track season.

"It was a heartbreak because I was really going to give everything, give my best shot this year. I was going to go all out for it, and I wanted to dedicate this last year to all the people who supported me," Wilson said.

"I felt so empty because during this time of year, I'm usually doing something, and my life just felt like there was something missing. I thought about the state track meet, and I thought that I could be a state champion in at least two events this year."

Already having three gold and one silver medal from prior state meets only made her pain worse, she said.

"I looked at my medals Monday night, and I was saying, 'I could have had more than two or three gold medals. I could have had a lot more.' And after looking at the times in the paper, I was thinking I could have done this plus better."

"I've gotten hurt before, but it was minor," Wilson said. "But when I found out I wasn't going to be able to finish out the basketball season and run track, it kind of blew my mind. I was just saying, 'Why me?'. I mean I was going to try so hard this year, and I wanted to do so much. And this was my last time to run for Westwood."

It will be a while before she can compete again, she said.

The University of Texas at Arlington has offered her a scholarship.
