Six Members Of Family Die At Crossing

Commissioners Expected to Call City Hall Bond Election Tuesday; Many Names on Petitions for Vote

HOME TOWN TALK

By BEDDY

Beginning Tuesday morning Big Spring people may register at the Chamber of Commerce offices as delegates to the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention in Lubbock Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The official badges will be ready at the local office. The registration fee has been reduced this year to one dollar. This money goes for payment of convention expenses.

At 6:30 a. m. Friday a Big Spring delegation will leave for Lubbock to spend the day in the convention city. Plenty of Big Spring paraphernalia will be available; attractive hats, streamers, canes, poppers and other things that will make our crowd show up well.

The most constructive program in the long history of the W.T.C.C. has been arranged for Lubbock.

Aside from three days chock full of entertainment features conferences each day will hear noted men in various lines of endeavor and study problems confronting West Texas.

The general convention sessions will be addressed by men whose remarks are bound to be of benefit to all those who hear them.

Big Spring, located but 120 miles from the convention city, should be represented by not less than 100 delegates.

Those interested in problems facing the oil and gas industry will have an opportunity of hearing such leaders as W. S. Hamilton and T. F. Hunter of Wichita Falls; H. H. Rogers, president of the largest oil bank in the mid-continent area, located at Tulsa; W. S. Farish, president of the Humble Oil and Refining company.

Industrial development will be studied in another section. This is a topic of vital interest to Big Spring. If we study the market properly and advance opportunities to the manufacturer before the proper people we can within the next few years obtain many new industries.

Bankers, farmers and all business men should be interested in the breeder-feeder, general agricultural and production loan conferences.

Get everything ready and shove off at 6:30 Friday morning for Lubbock with the Big Spring crowd. It will be a day full of pleasure and profit to all who attend.

A $200000 bond issue election for the construction of a city hall, auditorium, central fire station and jail in all probability will be ordered at the regular meeting of the city commission, to be held Tuesday night.

City Manager V. R. Smitham expressed the opinion today that the commissioners would order the election immediately after petitions favoring it were presented.

Six petitions asking that the building be constructed have been in circulation since a mass meeting held at the courthouse last Tuesday night. The petitions, it is said, have the signatures of approximately half of the bona fide voters in the city.

The board of city development recommended to the city commission that the building be constructed. The matter, however, was placed before residents at the mass meeting and received unanimous approval.

According to resent plans the building would be erected at an approximate cost of $150,000. The remaining $50,000 would be used in furnishing the various departments.

The building could be erected and furnished without raising either the tax rate or the valuations, according to information given by city officials at the mass meeting.

Local labor, with a minimum wage scale of forty cents an hour for unskilled and $1 an hour for skilled labor, would be used.

Smitham Declares False Reports On City Affairs Exist

"Willful misrepresentations of facts" concerning affairs of the city government are afloat here, declared City Manager V. R. Smitham in a statement issued Monday morning.

He declared that "I do not intend to engage in any petty arguments relating to affairs of the city but I am appealing to citizens who hear the malicious reports to come to my office and let me give them the facts concerning their city government."

"I want every citizen to feel free to come to this office at any time for information concerning the city," he added.

Tourist Camp Industry Shows Rapid Growth

Big Spring Listed Among Dozen Leading Cities of Country

Big Spring is listed as one of the ten leading cities of the country in number and capacity of tourist camps in an article by T. A. Keene, secretary-manager of the Southwest Camp Owners Association, published in the Dallas Morning News.

Among the cities leading in number of camps, as listed by Mr. Keene, are Phoenix, Arizona, 109; Corpus Christi, 40; Big Spring, 23; Tucson, Arizona, 36; San Diego, California, 30; Los Angeles, 100; San Antonio, Dallas and Fort Worth, 16 each; the Rio Grande Valley 46.

The largest camp in the state has 112 cottages, while several have 60 to 80 cottages or apartments.

The tourist camp industry has grown to be one of the largest in the state, declares the writer.

The old free camp of 1918 is supplanted by up-to-the-minute camps as one of the biggest money-makers in the state.

The first camp it is declared, was started by Charles E. Tooley of Van Horn, who today has one of the finest in the state. Later one opened in Deming, N. M. For some time these were the only two in that section.

Later the tin can tourists of the world had free camps opened in towns of the state by chambers of commerce and public spirited citizens. In 1921 they had, to a great extent, become what was termed as squatter's rests and in 1923 they began to be abolished. The free camp has gone forever. In its place has risen the cottage camp. Modern in every detail.

California began building camps as early as 1923. Today it ranks second in number, Texas leading by several hundred. A survey of the state made recently by the Texas and Southwest Camp Owners' Associations show that Texas has 1,100 camps while California has 900, with Arizona and Oregon running close behind California.

Of the Texas places approximately 300 are of the better type, real A1 camps. All newer camps are of the modern kind. Many built during the last two to three years being remodeling to the present standard in construction and equipment. Many of the newer camps are like the better class of homes with the exception that they are smaller, they are efficiency apartments.

The Texas Camp Owners Association, San Antonio, has kept pace with the growth of the camp

Utter Chaos in Transportation Industry is Predicted if Plan of Railroad Heads Proves Failure

CHICAGO, May 11. (UP)—America's railroads started today on a concrete attempt to do their part in bringing prosperity back to the nation.

If the attempt fails, the country's most important railway executives predicted utter chaos in the transportation industry, with widespread wage cuts and other drastic operating economies affecting millions of workers.

The plan is contained in a resolution adopted by the Association of Railway Executives' advisory committee, cmoposed of almost every important rail head in the United States. After deliberating for hours in a closed meeting here the transportation chieftains recommended:

That the various railroad rate agencies examine the existing freight tariff structures with a view to leveling "the inequalities" now prevalent.

As In 1921.

The United Press learned that the railroads hope thereby to regain some of their lost revenue, and, as the did in 1921, when the country also was in a seige of depression, led the way to general finshcial well being. The rate increases granted the railroads at that time aided in the start of a wave of buying which culminated in perhaps the greatest period of prosperity the world has ever known.

In the height of the 1920 depression the railroads were granted a 40 per cent blanket freight rate increase. Although the rates were stepped up actually only about 25 per cent, the resultant spending of millions of dollars for higher wages, more employes and better equipment was credited in many quarters with bringing the nation out of its war-end doldrums.

Then, as it was discussed by the 24 railroad heads attending the Chicago meeting, a "whittling" process set in, whereby one freight rate and then another was reduced until some 5,000 tariffs were lowered and today's rates approximate those in force in 1920.

The present lowered rates and the general depression thus are affecting seriously the railroads' credit, said the executives, who agreed that their problem, put simply, consists of increasing their income and decreasing their outgo.

The roads already have laid off all possible men, reduced dividends, and curtailed purchases of equipment. If the outgo is to be reduced further the conferees decided they must cut wages drastically. With approximately 20 per cent of all the workers in the country dependent directly or indirectly on the railroads, a general salary cut would mean another segment added to the vicious depression circle.

Raise Income

The only other solution, continued the transportation chieftains, is the raising of income in the hope that railroad earnings may increase from the 3 1-2 per cent in valuation reported in 1930 to something approximating the 5 3-4 per cent termed fair by law.

The executives consequently adopted their resolution appealing for an equalization of the "hills and valleys" of freight rates in various parts of the nation. The more optimistic of the committee members hoped such an equalization would result in an average increase of about 10 per cent.

Such a rate advance would boost railroad income by about $400,000,000 a year, of which some $120,000,000 would go to the wage earners.

The railroad rate bodies, acting upon the resolution, are expected to complete their report in from three weeks to a month. The executives' association then will meet again to receive the report and the recommendations will be turned over to the interstate commerce committee for action.

PLANE IN WHICH ROCKNE DIED MAY HAVE HIT SHAFT

KANSAS CITY, May 11 (AP)—A possibility that the airplane which carried eight persons to death in an accident near Bazaar, Kas., March 31 struck a grain elevator shortly after the take-off here, was under discussion today.

The Kansas City Star quoted Robert L. Boatright, foreman of a switch engine crew, as saying he believed he saw the right wing of the tri-motored ship strike the elevator about two hours before the crash in which Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, was killed.

Other members of the crew said the ship flew close to the structure but were not positive that the wing struck.

The crew foreman asserted he noticed a dent in the fire escape cover of the elevator three days later. He said he and other crewmen hesitated to report the incident because of controversy over the cause of the crash.

Leonard Jurden, supervising inspector for the department of commerce, said "such a thing might be possible but it doesn't tie up with results of the investigation."

R. S. Barnes, an official of the air line, said he was certain if the pilot had noticed anything in the air he would have returned to the airport to see whether damage had been done.

EYE GLASSES

The history of spectacles reaches back into and is lost in antiquity.

According to some, eye glasses were the invention of the Chinese, according to others they were the discovery of the Romans, while still others believe that they are the creation of the medieval monk and scientist Roger Bacon.

In Florence there is a tablet bearing the inscription "Here lies Salvino d'Armato degli Armati, Author of Florence the inventor of spectacles. May God forgive his sins. He died A. D. 1317."

Were the exact date of the invention or discovery of spectacles remains unknown and disputed it is a fact that they were certainly in use by the 13th century.

The early Florentine as seen in numerous paintings were clumsy affairs consisting of glass in rigid frames based in a clumsy fashion among frames.

There was scarcely confined to the intelligent in the eighteenth century, usually the rich and the more costly and almost a luxury. In the nineteenth century they have become more refined in structure and more adapted to the needs of the imperfect human eye.

The greatest progress in spectacle making during the 19th century was in ophthalmology and is said to have been established.

Several developments in the principles and manufacture of spectacles have been made during the present century, including lenses having prismatic properties and producing fortification of the eye muscles, and the use of the finest grade of glass possible for the purpose of correcting defects.

Hollywood Sights & Sounds

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Ingenue grows up. Being stereotyped as "sweet young things" and comedians long for a chance to do heavy emoting, while dramatic actors sometimes have a secret passion to do slapstick comedy.

Each in turn will confide to the inquiring reporter his own particular disappointments and [illegible]

Irvin Pierce is different that way. He knows what he can do and what he can't do. He's modest enough to admit that he's not the greatest actor in the world, but he's not ashamed of his profession, either.

Irvin is a young man who has been in pictures for a number of years, but who has never had the opportunity to show what he could do with a good part. Now he has one in "Seed," the John Dos Passos novel which Universal has purchased for production.

Irvin is a tall, lanky youth with a pleasant face and a ready smile. He has been playing bits and small parts in pictures for the last few years, and has been waiting for a chance to show what he could do.

"Seed" is the story of a young man who goes to college, marries, and then finds himself unable to get a job. He and his wife have a child, and they are forced to live with his parents. Irvin has the part of the young husband and father.

"I've been playing bits and small parts for so long," he said, "that I'm afraid I've forgotten how to act. I'm afraid I'll be stiff and awkward in a big part. I've been waiting for a chance like this for a long time, and I'm afraid I'll make a mess of it."

I told him I thought he would do very well, and that I was sure he would be a success in the part. He seemed relieved, but still doubtful.

Irvin has been married for several years, and has a child of his own. He has been living with his parents, and has been waiting for a chance to get out on his own. He thinks that "Seed" will be the chance he has been waiting for.

Sweating But Conforming

ALTHOUGH women's styles these days are both pleasing to look at and comfortable to wear, men's clothing is still as heavy, stiffy and uncomfortable as the day when men wore a complete suit of clothing.

No complaint from Dr. Lamb is the current issue of Harper's Bazar, he relates that men's clothing, that his high collar is an atrocity, that his trousers are tight and ugly and that in short he should throw all of them away from the fashion and wear flowing, brightcolored smocks and sandals.

This is another case where the suggestion be a good one. Not one fears, while Mr. Lamb is any of the eyes of us [illegible] a conservative creature, and feathers of dress be seeing to be more conservative than in any other field. He will sweat and he will suffer, but he will conform, just as always has.

Services And Rewards

[illegible] on the flag, newspapers, in their news columns, remind us that the income a man receives is not often directly related to the services he performs for society.

The latest reminder of this truth is the news that the late Major General Clarence R. Edwards, wartime commander of the 26th division, left an estate of approximately $153,000.

This, of course, is a comfortable fortune—but it is small as [illegible] medium fortune go these days. For [illegible] General Edwards was one of our most valuable citizens. His [illegible] gave an excellent account of [illegible] in Europe. In war and peace he exercised a [illegible] for good on the men [illegible] contact with him. If we remember right, [illegible] according to the services rendered or he would have been much richer man when he died.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Spindle Versus The Plow

Atlanta Constitution:

There has been much waste of space and words in newspaper publications lately over whether the south should welcome industrialization or stick closely to the present agrarian system.

The debaters are mostly [illegible] industrialists not fathers they are eulogized. For the most part we have mostly machine workers and college directors, the [illegible] professors who would not know a cotton [illegible] in the mold board from a Magnolia. Their arguments are good [illegible] theorists but [illegible] honorable judges of what is needed to forward a modern economic [illegible] and political civilization.

The commonsense of [illegible] far more than a century has been evident for the continuance of industrial operations with an agricultural and our wealth of [illegible] natural resources. The [illegible] complaint was common [illegible] 1800 that we were sending all our materials to eastern factories, to be changed to finished goods and sent back to us at most profitable prices to the finishers.

It has been a hard task to teach our people that the age of early agriculture with [illegible] conveniences, and [illegible] to where our comforts come from and what they cost, is over. Slowly the industrial [illegible] have taken hold. The factories are planted among us and have every [illegible] to make them profitable. The south is either becoming an industrial-minded and industrialized will eventually become a paramount possession of the Southern states.

Will then, carry on a most destructive war against the merits of a dying [illegible] agricultural policy and the new and [illegible] spindle and hammer, already [illegible] the front trenches of our [illegible] of economic battle?

SPORT SIANTS

By Alan Gould

The farewells for Maj. Philip Dracken Fleming, while none the less sincere so far as the expressions were concerned, now seem to have been a trifle premature.

Major Fleming, instead of being transferred to some such post as Belgium, has been permitted to remain for a fifth straight year as graduate manager of athletics at the United States Military academy.

This is good news to the good major's friends in the athletic, military and social world, but it leaves him holding, in some embarrassment, a number of tokens in fond farewell.

For the coming year, Major Fleming will have as his assistant Cary Lawrence McCeney Jones, former head coach at West Point. "Biff" returns after a year's tour of duty with the artillery and is slated to succeed Major Fleming as the graduate manager in 1932.

There is some feeling that the major, who has steered the Army athletic ship through the past four eventful years, will see it through to a settlement of the breach with Navy before another year elapses. Having broken the spell for the sake of charity last December, the service rivals are both in the mood to patch up their difficulties.

HELPED COBB'S AVERAGE

"Battling Ban," as Byron Bancroft Johnson was known most of his life, will remain best remembered for the many engagements he fought, whether it was win, lose or draw.

He battled the National league for years until the American was firmly established, waged a relentless war on the gamblers and crooked elements seeking to operate in the ball, fought bitterly the regime of Commissioner Landis and passed out of the picture fighting his own club owners, among whom were some he had established in the baseball business.

I recall distinctly the wrath of the New York baseball fraternity in 1922 when Johnson discarded the official score of a game here that season, accepting instead the unofficial record so that Ty Cobb would be credited with an extra base hit and thereby gain, for the third time, a percentage of .400 or better.

Johnson's action fixed Cobb's figure for 1922 at .401. The Georgian had batted .420 in 1911 and .410 in 1912.

Johnson contended the official scorer was inaccurate in this and other features of his report on the particular game involved, but there was a terrific hullabaloo at the time. The baseball writers, in solemn session, denounced Johnson and adopted resolutions demanding Cobb's mark not be recognized. It wasn't that they begrudged Ty any of the glory, but they resented Johnson's arbitrary decision in the player's favor. Cobb is down in the record books at .401, nevertheless.

OPEN HEADS WEST

The 1932 National Open Golf championship, it appears, may go to the Pacific coast for the first time—Los Angeles, to be exact.

It would be due to be held in the east in the usual course of events, having gone to Minneapolis in 1930 and Toledo this year, but the siren call of the far west may be too strong to resist.

In the last two seasons, all of the other major national championships—amateur, women's and P. G. A.—have been held in California.

Reduced Armaments, Lower Tariffs Favored by International Chamber

WASHINGTON May 11 (UP)—The International Chamber of Commerce brought its week's meeting to a climax with a broad pronouncement for lowered tariffs, a re-examination of world war debt structures and reduced armaments.

Chamber policies on these and other matters were stated in a series of resolutions. The assembled industrialists and bankers urged re-examination of the war debt problem in light of currently depressed business throughout the world. Reduced armaments were urged as a direct avenue toward decreased taxation.

President Hoover stressed armaments reduction to that end in a speech delivered last Monday when he welcomed the international chamber to Washington. The program for alleviating world economic depression called for reduction in national budgets and re-affirmed faith of the chamber in private initiative and business as the most effective instruments of economic rehabilitation.

The general economic resolution was supplemented today by a series of expressions on other problems. In stating its five point program for improving conditions, the chamber recalled its statement of policy in the 1927 Rome meeting from which, it is asserted, the idea for the Dawes plan revision of reparations payments arose.

Regarding debts and other international obligations, the resolution said that the integrity of such obligations is fundamental to maintenance of international credit and the extension of commerce and industry, but said this principle is not inconsistent with an impartial examination of the effects of these obligations of international trade if warranted by changed economic conditions."

It urged that trade should be encouraged by the removal of every possible obstacle, that tariffs should not "discriminate unfairly between nations" and urged utilization of the machinery of all countries to reduce tariff inequality.

The convention also adopted a resolution recommending an international conference to consider means of stabilizing the price of silver. Another resolution approved the futures trading and opposed any government interference with the practice.

The business men also went on record for international conferences to take up the problem confronting agriculture throughout the world. This resolution suggested that such a conference must consider the amount and distribution of agricultural production, credit for agricultural purposes and "amendment of the rigorous agriculture protective measures, reduction of difficulties in importing agricultural products and suppression of export premiums." This last was a veiled reference to high agricultural tariffs.

Bankers Beat Coahoma 12-4

Cramer Unable To Ambush Hitters

Bankers Retain Hold On League Leadership By Winning

Invading Coahoma Sunday afternoon the Bankers dedicated to a certain extent the new base ball park of that city by slapping a 12 to 4 defeat on the boys to the east.

The slash and dash affair was safely tucked in the Bankers' bib early in the game, and they were never in danger of having their margin cut away.

J. Lawrence Crouch twirled for the Banking department to aid them in retaining the leadership of the City League. He allowed only six hits during the contest.

Cramer started for Coahoma but was jerked at the beginning of the eighth, with Bud Mahoney taking over the assignment.

Score Early

The Bankers chased across three runs in the first inning to take the lead that they never relinquished. Sain singled after C. Madison had gone away at first. Lois Madison advanced Sain and placed on Bishop's error at the third sack, and Nesbitt singled, scoring Sain. Hicks' hot bingle drove Nesbitt and Madison across. Cramer struck out the final two men.

Coahoma gleaned their first in the last of the third after Crouch had walked J. Walker and L. Walker had singled. J. Walker tallied when Roten went out at first.

Two more were ropped out by the Bankers in the fourth. Hicks was hit by a pitched ball and Mahoney dropped Base fly to Rt. Cramer struck out Williamson and Harris, but Crouch's triple scored Hicks and Base before C. Madison ended the inning, going out at first, Reid unassisted.

Score On Walk

A walk handed J. Walker in the fifth accounted for another Coahoma tally, although Crouch did not give up a hit. After Walker had been passed, and L. Walker had filed out to L. Madison in center, E. Reid lifted a long one to midway between center and left. Lois Madison had it but it got away and Walker tallied.

In the first of the seventh, Cramer gave up three hits, issued two walks, and the Bankers capitalized with five runs. Crouch opened the inning with a single, and Carl Madison followed with a bingle. Sain sacrificed and L. Madison walked to fill the bases. Cook at first, chose to try to cut off Crouch at the plate instead of stepping Nesbitt at the initial, and would have had my Roten dropped the orbit. A triple by Hicks drove C. Madison, E. Madison and Nesbitt across the slab. J. Walker's error at second on Base' offering allowed Hicks to tally.

In the same inning Coahoma got across two. After Crouch had shifted J. Walker, L. Walker singled and stole second. Base assisted in handling Reid's ground bugger at third, and Cramer's double accounted for the tallies.

Two More

Just to round out an afternoon the Bankers got to Mahoney for three hits and two runs in the first of the ninth. Hicks and Base singled, Williamson sacrificed, and Harris doubled to score Hicks and Base. It was all over except counting the lost balls.

-The- Water Bucket

BY BOBBY CAMPBELL

"Dazzling Dizzy" Dean is twirling his way into the hearts of Houston baseball fans. The big right hander Saturday night took over the pitching duties in the eighth inning against Dallas with the tally knotted two all. He twirled hitless and runless ball for four innings and delivered the winning rap in the eleventh. It doesn't take many like that. Not many.

High school officials have rejected, we understand, the one-year eligibility ruling for high school athletes. Such a statement should prove an aria ringing in the ears of J. Gordon Bristow, the newly named Steer mentor. Mentioning the one-year ruling to Bristow was just like mistaking quinine for sugar and devouring same. Bristow would wrinkle up his spreading countenance and snort. If you've never heard a Bristow snort you've missed one of the sideshows of life. M. H. Duncan's crusade to "better" high school athletics seems to have failed in the first fight. However, we rather imagine the Lubbock school official will continue to continue. At the meeting of the members of the Interscholastic League, it seems the one-year ruling was the chief, if not the only, topic of conversation. But the school officials couldn't see their way clear to lambast the clean cut high school athlete below the belt. So they rejected the proposal, and things will continue as they have in the past. They were very smart. There was no need for another ruling. If only the present ones were enforced it would not be necessary to add additional red tape to a machine that is already cluttered up with it. The fight is ended, for a time, but the melody lingers on.

The annual state meet has come and gone. True to prediction, Smokey Brothers' "injuries" were more of the imaginative type than of reality. We would like to believe that the San Angelo flash, with an ankle that groaned under the strain, steeled his nerves and set a new record in the half mile. We would like to, but we can't. Half mile records are not set with sprained ankles, especially in this league. The San Angelo relay team, however, came in behind, which is something the average track fan would not have predicted. Big Spring's two contributions to the state meet, failed to cop any first places, but Reid did gallop in third in the mile. Ruby Smith, tennis representative fell by the wayside before the semi-finals.

We always thought Dusty Diamond was dusty, but you ought to visit Coahoma's new ball park. It makes Dusty Diamond look like a piker at times. The City League game for Sunday was transferred to Coahoma for various reasons. Before the doubleheader the Coahomaites went down, down, and down, and down. The game would have been over much earlier than it was had not Crouch, Bankers' twirler, spent half the time kicking the pitchers' mound to various parts of the diamond. Every time one of Crouchs' offerings went wide, inside, high or low, it meant a bit of excavation on the part of the cleats on his right foot.

L. C. Tinsley refused to hit for Harris in the ninth inning of Sunday's game and the youth slapped out a double that drove across a couple of runs. Which isn't a bad way of ending a ball game.

Incidentally, City League solons will congregate tonight in the suite of Dr. Wofford B. Hardy, president, to munch on the rug, as it were. Some things that seem very important to the league are to be brought up, and it behooves the managers to be present. The Board of Governors also is asked to attend. They can get through with their business in fifteen minutes and be on their way, leaving the brunt of the work for the managers and the club presidents while this department sits off in a corner and reads a magazine.

Theron Hicks, Banker first sacker snapped out of his slugging slump Sunday, gathering in three hits in four trips, driving across five runs.

industry for the last several years.

During 1929 and 1921 cities were urged to open camp sites for the benefit of the touring public. At one time there were over 500 free camps. Today there are not over ten.

The modern camp consists of from two to four rooms, equipped with baths, cooking equipment and furnished in excellent style. There is a rivalry among camp owners. Many have reduced their rates. They fear it will be impossible to raise their rates again. That is a matter for the individual owner to solve.

Little Hughie Is No Longer Hitless

For years little Hughie Critz has been rated the best fielding second baseman in the National league.

HUGHIE CRITZ

"But he can't hit," the experts added.

After batting for .322 in 1928, his first year with the Cincinnati Reds, he dropped away with the stick and has never been over .300 since. He only batted .260 last year, his first with the New York Giants.

He and Horace Ford, the Reds' shortstop, were the hitless wonders of the big leagues, first in fielding and double plays and last in the slugging percentages.

Little Hughie this year has blossomed forth as considerable of a sticker, and what is even more interesting he has been banging the ball for extra bases.

The averages for the first 12 games this year give Critz a mark of .333. He has been pounding along at an even faster clip since then, so it is likely he has boosted his mark up around .350.

"Just a good fielder, eh?" says Hughie.

WINS PULITZER FICTION PRIZE

Her "Years Of Grace" Selected As Best American Novel Of The Year

For her first novel, "Years of Grace," reviewed in the Herald last year, Margaret Ayer Barnes, Chicago novelist and dramatist has been awarded the Pulitzer fiction prize for 1930.

Recognized first as a short story writer, then as a playwright, and now as a novelist, Mrs. Barnes has a threefold claim to distinction. As "Years of Grace" came from the press of Houghton Mifflin Company, New York, was still talking about her play, "Dishonored Lady," which had run all winter on Broadway in a spectacular production with Katherine Cornell in the lead.

A year before, she was receiving congratulations on "Jenny," which starred Jane Cowl, and shortly before that on "The Age of Innocence," which she dramatized from Edith Wharton's novel of that name.

Such was the caliber of her short stories that Houghton Mifflin Company issued a volume of them, under the title of "Prevailing Winds," when their author was comparatively unknown save to a scattering of magazine readers.

Just A Beginner

Until three and a half years ago Mrs. Barnes had never written anything but a letter in her life. Until then, a "Who's Who" would have chronicled her formerly Margaret Ayer, Chicago graduated from Bryn Mawr, 1907, married Cecil Barnes, attorney three years later, has three sons, aged 9, 15 and 18. And there might be a few lines mentioning at her social activities. Or mentioning that for three years she was a director of Bryn Mawr College. Or stating in less frivolous words than he'll owe that she's "that hybrid creature," an amateur actress, having done quite a bit of acting down the years with the Ahlis Players in Lake Forest and the North Shore Theatre in Winnetka.

But in the midst of this busy life did Mrs. Barnes suddenly start to write? The explanation lies in a trip abroad four summers ago, on the road from Rouen to Paris. "My husband and I were motoring with some friends through the French Cathedral towns," she states. "With our hands full of souvenirs we had brought home a little curio shop in Rouen, we went out in the evenings of France and were instantly arrested. Our French chauffeur is explaining for how that large bowling car ran into us.

"Anyhow, we were all broken up in jail for the afternoon. I counted my sixth three rite and my book. It took six months of plaster casts to make me white again and since then I've never been the same. For to beguile the inactive hours I wrote four short stories, and the fact that they sold confirmed me in the belief. Now at home in Chicago or in Matapoisett, Mass., where we spend our summers, the typewriter substitutes to the noise of the automobile symphony.

"You ask how and when I write. I write how and when I can, just as some person play golf, quite casually, eighteen holes when I have time for them, otherwise none.

"Some days pass I sit at my typewriter and beat the keys to the accompaniment of a crashing glorious symphony. The ring of the telephone, the tinkle of the children's scales on the piano, the song of the canary, and the snore of the cat per sweeper. Sometimes I write eight hours a day. There there are many days when I have to urge to write at all.

"Years of Grace" covers the better part of the life of Jane Ward from her girlhood in the Chicago of the 1890's through a stormy and unhappy 2 years her marriage with Stephen Carver, typical son of a typical Boerman, a passionate episode of two the World War and finally the full years of middle life and of inevitable adjustment with the new generation."

Records of 209 demonstration plantings of sweet potatoes in South Carolina show a net profit of $76.12 per acre for 1930.

Alabama farmers are using more beds for the production of sweet potato plants this year.

More than 2000 cars of Florida products were sold in Cleveland last year.

Crotalaria has been introduced in South Carolina as a soil-building crop.

Spring Brings Out Red Flannels For West Texas Hills

West Texas has a wild flower as colorful and as lovely as Central Texas bluebonnet. It is the gaillardia, colloquially dubbed the firewheel, the Indian blanket and the red daisy.

It covers the West Texas hills as red flannels used to cover youngsters in the wintertime. Its size amazes visitors from other sections because it grows as large out here in a wild state as it does in the domesticated varieties. There are large patches of it on the south side of the Edward Height hills and the east highway is aflame with it.

A flower peculiar to Howard County and not to be found either south or east of the county line is the blush-purple daisy that makes such a showing on all the vacant lots in town.

Big Spring residents who travel about return to say that not even the bluebonnets make a lovelier sight than the red purple and yellow flowers on our own hillsides this spring.

Mother's Day Program Given To Full House

Mr. and Mrs. Gomillion Present Interesting Numbers At Church

One of the best-attended and most successful of Mother's Day programs was put on at the First Baptist Church last night by Mrs. R. L. Gomillion.

During the evening bouquets of red and pink carnations were awarded the youngest and oldest mothers in the congregation. The youngest mother was Mrs. Jack Merritt, of Abilene, a visitor in the city; the oldest was Mrs. G. W. Willis, the only living charter member of the church.

Mrs. Gomillion was splendidly assisted by her husband who was the reader for the evening. The story was the outline of a man's life from babyhood to manhood, as he reviewed it in his thoughts. Mr. Gomillion's remarks connected the songs and speeches and pantomimes of the evening into a whole. His part was among the outstanding performances of the evening.

Mrs. Homer McNew was the soloist and beautifully rendered two songs.

The climax of the program was the last number when Mrs. W. C. Orenbaum appeared as the lovely white-haired mother and Charles Scroggins came to her one of his most and best-beloved songs, "Mother Machree" with the feeling and emotion which this singer so ably puts into his voice.

The songs and the acting were planned and directed by Mrs. Gomillion. She was assisted at the piano by Mmes. Larson Lloyd, Tom Mercer and Bruce Frazier.

The whole program was well rehearsed and well received. The little folks sang their songs well and received many compliments from the congregation.

Mrs. W. E. Anderson, and her son, Will Ross, are leaving for La Junta today, after a visit with relatives in the city.

"THE BEST PLACE TO SHOE AFTER ALL"

Mad Pursuit

by Jessie Douglas Fox

NORA LAKE yearns for a home, security, stability. From early childhood she has followed her improvident artist-father from city to city over all Europe, ever on toward elusive happiness. ¶ NORA marries Nicholas Thayer, also a painter, because he will take her to the peaceful, ancestral home on the Hudson, a house that promises fulfillment of NORA's eager hopes. But her house of dreams crumbles and NORA begins again her "Mad Pursuit" for the mirage-like promise of contentment. ¶ A charming story of romance, bitter disappointments, pathos and joy.
