Missile reduction meetings resume

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Negotiations on reducing long-range nuclear missiles and bombers resumed today, the first superpower arms talks since the Soviet Union walked out of parallel medium-range missile talks last week.

Viktor P. Karpov, Soviet ambassador to the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks, known as START, met with his American counterpart Edward L. Rowny at U.S. disarmament headquarters.

Although the Soviet Union suggested in a commentary Monday that new U.S. medium-range cruise and Pershing 2 missiles arriving in Western Europe may imperil the 17-month-old START talks, Western observers here did not foresee another break in negotiations.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl said Monday he had received a letter from Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov suggesting Moscow might reconsider its decision to halt the talks on medium-range missiles in Europe.

Kohl said the resumption of the strategic arms talks demonstrates Moscow's willingness to continue negotiations with the United States.

Last Wednesday, the Soviet negotiator to the medium-range missile talks, Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, met for 25 minutes with Paul H. Nitze, the American negotiator, then announced the talks were "discontinued," with no resumption date. The announcement came one day after formal approval by the West German Parliament of NATO's deployment plan.

Since then, Andropov has announced Soviet countermeasures to the U.S. missiles, including deploying new submarine-based nuclear weapons within striking distance of U.S. territory.

Five North Atlantic Treaty Organization countries — Britain, West Germany, Italy, Belgium and the Netherlands — are to deploy 572 cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to counter Soviet SS-20 missiles already in place. The weapons have started arriving in Britain, West Germany and Italy.

NATO had said it would begin the deployment if no agreement was reached in Geneva.

British Defense Secretary Michael Heseltine said Monday that NATO nations "now have to consider if we take any initiative to persuade them (the Soviets) to come back (to the medium-range missile talks)."

Italian Premier Bettino Craxi, after a meeting with Nitze, said "The Atlantic alliance ... must confirm its full availability to negotiate and to proceed with dismantling arms systems that may eventually be installed."

Western sources said the Soviets had not formally threatened to leave the START talks.

Nevertheless, a commentary Monday by the Soviet news agency Novosti said the arrival of the first new U.S. missiles was "sharply changing the situation" in the START talks, "making success at them even more difficult."

Spacelab crew starts plant tests

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The scientists aboard Spacelab, not content with testing their own bodies to learn how humans adapt to space, turned today to a related question: How do plants know which way is up when there is no up?

Except for the usual minor hitches, the shuttle Columbia and the $1 billion European-built laboratory in its cargo hold were doing well after their Monday launch. And so were the six men aboard the orbiting spacecraft, with one fleeting exception.

Byron Lichtenberg, a biomedical engineer from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, was unable to complete a "hop and drop" test in which he jumped, then let elastic bands pull him to the Spacelab floor. Lichtenberg complained of "a little dizziness and disorientation" and Mission Control assured him that "you did the right thing to stop when you did."

The astronauts split into two teams for their round-the-clock, round-the-world experiments and about midnight EST — dawn in Europe — the red shift took over with West German scientist Ulf Merbold in the laboratory along with Robert Parker.

One of Merbold's first tasks was to photograph some dwarf sunflower seedlings, in various stages of growth, to observe the growth movements of the plants in weightlessness. On Earth, growing plant parts move in tiny spiral patterns, but scientists dont know why. The movement, called nutation, is affected by gravity and scientists want to see, through a series of time lapse pictures, what happens when there is none.

Merbold and Parker continued the Spacelab mission of subjecting orbiting humans to tests to see what causes space sickness, at one point placing their heads into a rotating dome painted inside with dots of various sizes and colors.

The slowly whirling dome was designed to induce a sensation of left to right rotation while a camera records the subject's eye movements. The pictures will be analyzed when the shuttle returns home.

This first use of Spacelab, with 73 experiments scheduled before Columbia lands in California on Dec. 7, monopolized air-to-ground conversations. Little was heard from spacecraft commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw, who had to guide the spacecraft through a series of changes in position to satisfy requirements in five major scientific disciplines.

Pilot may have tried go-around

From Staff and Wire Reports

Investigators say the pilot of a twin-engine plane that crashed, killing eight people, might have pulled up the plane's landing gear after aborting a landing, according to remarks made today at a news conference.

In a related matter, an Odessa pilot has been stripped of his credentials as a Federal Aviation Administration-certified flight examiner for speculating to the news media what might have happened.

Warren V. Wandel, an inspector with the National Transportation Safety Board during the news conference this morning at Texas Western Aviation, referred to the "several comments made in the media by people who have nothing to do with this investigation and action has been taken against this individual." He later aknowledged the individual was Tony James, an FAA flight examiner and accident prevention counselor of Odessa.

Wandel said the landing gear on the airplane was not in a "normal" position for landing when the crash occurred.

He said the landing gear was "fully up or in a transient position" before the 1:50 a.m. Saturday crash, indicate the pilot may have attempted a "go-around."

"According to witnesses we have interviewed, our reconstruction of a flight profile shows the landing gear was down and the landing lights were on as he (pilot Keith Elkin) approached Runway 1-6. After the go-around was initiated, the first action would have been to raise the landing gear."

Wandel said several other mechanical areas have been checked out OK. Other areas are being investigated.

All the video equipment was placed in the cargo area in the aft portion of the cabin, he said. "We're not sure how critical it was," because it moved the aerodynamic balance forward. "We'll have to do some flight simulating tests."

Wandel said they have found no failures in the aircraft so far and the maintenance was in order.

"We haven't ruled out pilot failure or some sort of mechanical failure," Wandel said. From his investigation, he said the plane landed at an 80-degree nose-down attitude at a speed of 100-150 mph with a slight left wing down attitude.

Ray Terry, general aviation district office manager in Lubbock for the FAA, said this morning that credentials have been taken away from James after he told the news media the accident might have been caused by the pilot's failure to lower the landing gear, and that if the landing gear had been in place when the plane crashed, the passengers might have survived.

New storm may dump snow on Midwest

By CYNTHIA GREEN
Associated Press Writer

While Midwesterners dug out from a record blizzard and a trickle of travel resumed, forecasters warned that a new sister storm threatened to dump more icy inches on the Great Plains today as the fierce weather's death toll rose to 68.

Snow from the new storm began falling in Utah early today and the National Weather Service said up to 4 more inches could top the 1 to 2 feet that paralyzed the nation's midsection Monday. Travelers' advisories were in effect today for much of Wyoming, northern Utah and eastern Colorado.

As the western Plains braced for another, though milder, onslaught, the storm that left 9-foot drifts in some areas and brought the Midwest to a halt was still packing a wallop further east.

Snow continued to fall today in Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan, with up to 6 new inches expected before it ended. Freezing rain and sleet left a slippery sheen over northern New England.

At least 15 more storm-related deaths were reported Monday, including four stranded motorists who were overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from their idling engines in Kansas and seven people who suffered heart attacks while shoveling snow in Minnesota and Nebraska.

At the same time, a doctor in Colorado hitched a ride on a snowplow to reach an blizzard-bound Colorado home and deliver a baby.

The Nebraska State Patrol advised the hundreds of stranded travelers — many of whom bunked on church pews and armory floors Sunday night — to stay off the roads another day. Although Interstate 80 was cleared of 8-foot drifts and reopened Monday afternoon, "we're telling everybody that it's still ice- and snow-packed, that there is still snow and blowing snow, and that travel is not recommended," said a patrol spokesman in Lincoln.

"I can see drifts from the office here, and it looks like they're six or seven feet deep," said Greeley County, Neb., Deputy Bill Callister. "There's nothing moving here in town."

"You're just asking for it by being out," said Bill Brennan of Grand Island, Neb. "There's cars strewn all over the place."

Blizzard brings on Minnesota babies

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — At the peak of the blizzard, one Minnesota baby was born in the back seat of a truck and another arrived in the bathroom, while a snowplow helped the mother of a third get to the hospital on time.

Adam Christopher Erickson was born Monday in the back seat of his grandfather's hunting truck as it careened along Interstate 35-W through the snow to Fairview Hospital near downtown Minneapolis.

Adam's mother, Laura Erickson of Minneapolis, tucked him into a blanket that his aunt had crocheted. She said it took five minutes before she knew the 7-pound, 11-ounce baby was a boy.

In Cottage Grove, Adlia Ahmed safely gave birth to a boy in the family bathroom Monday morning while her husband, Fayez, was shoveling the driveway so he could get the car out to drive her to the hospital.

The 7-pound, 15-ounce baby, Chad, was born two days ahead of schedule.

Washington County officials helped Claire Capistrant of Afton get to Lakeview Memorial Hospital in Stillwater in time to give birth to a boy Monday.

The ambulance, accompanied by a snowplow and rescue rig, arrived at the hospital with plenty of time to spare. Mrs. Capstrant gave birth at 8:45 p.m. Monday to a boy, Daniel James, her first baby.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Cold, but not snow, expected

Clear skies and colder temperatures will continue for the next few days as a cold front moves in but the snow is expected to remain in the Midwest.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, temperatures tonight will be slightly warmer with a low in the lower 30s. The high on Wednesday only will reach into the middle 50s.

Tonight's southerly winds at 5-15 mph are expected to shift northerly at 10-20 mph by early Wednesday and continue northeasterly at 5-15 mph Wednesday.

Monday's high of 49 missed the record high of 85, set in 1949, by 36 degrees. The overnight low of 31 was 16 degrees warmer than 1976's frosty 15 degrees.

Shuttle crew to be treated to tests

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — When the four Spacelab shuttle specialists return to Earth next week, the cheers will have to wait until they've been strung up in straps, shocked, spun, blindfolded and have their heads poked into electronic boxes.

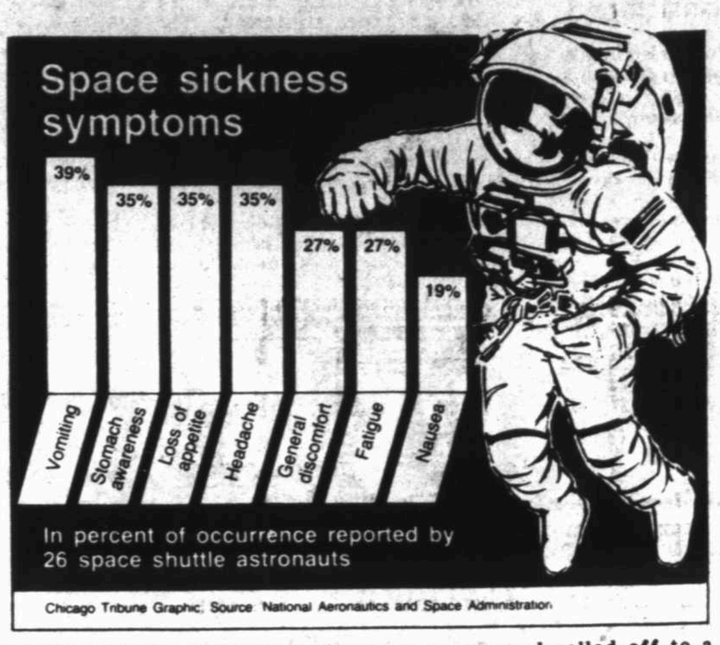

The unusual treatment is geared to gather data on the residual effects of weightlessness and readaptation to gravity, and to look into the causes of space sickness.

Of the six-man Columbia crew that blasted into orbit Monday, only Commander John Young and pilot Brewster Shaw will be able to attend welcoming ceremonies before the throngs expected at the planned the Dec. 7 landing.

For mission specialists Owen K. Garriott and Robert Parker, and payload specialists Byron K. Lichtenberg and Ulf Merbold, the nine-day mission in space and some of the experiments they conduct in orbit will continue for seven more days on the ground.

The crew will leave the shuttle about 30 minutes after landing, but unlike other crews that had time to walk around the shuttle and get their land legs back, the Spacelab specialists will be allowed only a few minutes to pose for pictures.

"Then they'll get on the vans, come back to the dispensary. While they're in the dispensary they'll have a physical and a visit from the families and then they'll start the testing right away," said Nancy Lovato, a spokeswoman at NASA's Ames-Dryden Flight Research Facility on the edge of the dry lake landing strip at this military base in California's high desert.

Chicago Tribune Graphic; Source: National Aeronautics and Space Administration

First, blood samples will be drawn and then the astronauts will be put on gurneys and rolled off to a sequence of tests with such names as the "Hop and Drop," "Drop and Shock" and "Dark Lab and Tilt Table."

Some of the experiments test reflexes, motion and weight perception, and awareness of position. Others investigate the function of the vestibular organ of the inner ear, known as the balance organ, and the eyes.

In all, 21 tests will find the astronauts hanging by straps, getting shocked on the knee, made dizzy, and being accelerated in laboratory sleds.

The four will run through all the tests for seven days after the flight, except for the third day, when they will be taken aloft in a KC-135 jet that flies in an arc to induce a brief period of weightlessness for tests related to space sickness, said Ms. Lovato.

The post-landing tests are set up to give scientists a before, during and after picture of how the astronauts perform.

The mission specialists and two backups, Wubbo Ockels and Michael Lampton, ran through the tests at intervals before Monday's launch, and some of the tests are scheduled during the shuttle flight.

After seven days it will almost be over. Ms. Lovato said plans tentatively call for yet another run-through 14 days after the landing.

Despite the somewhat ominous descriptions of the tests, the spokeswoman said they made for a full day's work but were less than rigorous. She noted that one subject had even dozed off in the test in which the subject is raised about eight inches in a sling, dropped to the floor and given a shock in the leg.

Europe fears Spacelab 'mistake'

Facility 'too expensive, too dependent' on U.S. shuttle

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

PARIS — After 10 years and almost $1 billion, disappointed European officials say their high-tech Spacelab built for the shuttle Columbia may have been a prestigious but costly mistake.

From Europe's American partners, there has been only praise for the 24½-foot-long aluminum-skinned drum bolted into Columbia's cargo bay. The shuttle was blasted into space from Cape Canaveral Monday.

Vice President George Bush lauded Spacelab as a symbol of European "unity and determination" and National Aeronautics and Space Administration officials touted the joint mission as "history's largest and most comprehensive international space project."

But European space officials here now say that the orbiting laboratory — built piecemeal by 46 contractors and assembled in Bremen, West Germany — is too expensive and too dependent on the U.S. shuttle to give them all they had desired from the multinational space project.

To use the laboratory they built in any of its projected 50 missions, the Europeans will have to stand in line with other users and pay the $50 million launch fee.

"With Spacelab, we made a mistake. Then again, perhaps we didn't make one, but we just don't have the kind of money to play this game," said George Van Reeth, administrative director of the European Space Agency, the 11-nation consortium that conceived and built Spacelab.

ESA's decision to built Spacelab as a component of the U.S. space shuttle program "was originally not a commercial, or a technological or a scientific one," Van Reeth said. "It was political."

"I would say Spacelab is a 95 percent success, an impressive success," he added. "But next time around ESA builds something, we'll look closer at exactly what use we can make of it."

"Without the shuttle, it can't do anything," said Hubert Curien, chairman of the ESA's policy-making council. "Yes, there's a certain amount of disappointment on the European side with the way things turned out."

It took more than 2,000 European scientists and workers a decade to plan and construct the 13-foot-wide tube packed with experiments and computer hardware now in space aboard Columbia for a 214½-hour mission.

Inside Spacelab, four scientists will grow crystals, measure the million-mile-an-hour solar wind and watch how sunflowers sprout in weightlessness.

In tandem with Columbia's cost, Spacelab's pricetag rocketed to 140 percent of budget estimates, and NASA officials admit changes they made to the shuttle prototype were chiefly to blame. "Yes, there was table-pounding sometimes," remembers one American space expert who sat in on ESA-NASA negotiations.

As soon as the Europeans completed Spacelab, they handed it over to NASA under the terms of a 1973 agreement.

In exchange for its 10-year, $1 billion investment, ESA obtained this month's free Spacelab flight, the right to one European crew member and the right to select half of the 70-odd experiments crammed on board.

"That's not much use, frankly," says Van Reeth. "I don't think anyone knew what use we were going to make out of Spacelab when it was first proposed, either us or NASA. Certainly we didn't."

Aboard Spacelab's maiden flight is West German physicist Ulf Merbold, the first non-American aboard a U.S. spacecraft since two Soviet cosmonauts clambered through the hatch of an Apollo capsule during a 1975 linkup with Soyuz.

More important on this side of the Atlantic, Merbold is the first European to circle Earth in a spacecraft made in Western Europe.

Because Bonn paid 53 percent of the cost, German firms led by Messerschmitt-Bolkow-Blohm and ERNO garnered 52 percent of the work contracts. Italian companies, whose government's 18 percent contribution made it the No. 2 investor, built Spacelab's module, experiment racks and heating and cooling system.

Judge dismisses lawsuit charging discrimination

Bobby Jackson's suit in which he alleged racial discrimination against Midland Memorial Hospital has been dismissed by U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton following an out-of-court settlement.

Jackson, former collector of delinquent accounts for the hospital, claimed he was fired in 1981 for being "rude" but said in his original court petition that he lost his job "because of his race — black."

"I was fired for being rude," he said. "It came down through the chain of command."

The hospital awarded him "several thousand dollars" in the settlement, Jackson said, but he declined to say how much.

"They were wrong, so they went ahead and settled it out of court," Jackson said Monday. "I made a settlement with them, and it wasn't very much. I wanted them to admit their guilt...I wanted to go to court."

However, Jackson's attorney, Michael McLeaish of Odessa, said the settlement was no admission of fault on either side.

"No," McLeaish said, "I thought that it was a meeting of the minds." He said "both sides" had points of contention.

"I don't think they (the hospital) admitted racial discrimination," he said. "They didn't admit it to me. By the same token, they didn't want to take the case to trial and take a chance that the judge might find discrimination."

Ted Kerr, the hospital's attorney, said at the time the suit was filed last February the hospital would deny Jackson's allegations of racial discrimination. Kerr is out of town this week.

Jackson said his attorney suggested that "we settle out of court."

The 35-year-old Jackson, who was a collector for the hospital for less than a year, said today he is the "sole owner" of a business called the Record Plant and that he is into real estate and rental properties.

The judge dismissed the suit "with prejudice," which means Jackson has the right to refile his complaint.

Jackson said he wouldn't.

"I'm going to leave it alone."

Pilot may have aborted landing

Terry said James' comments to the news media were only part of the reason his certification had been taken away, but didn't give additional reasons.

James no longer can give flight checks for pilot certification, written exams or charge a fee for the service, according to Terry.

The news conference had been scheduled for Monday but was delayed after investigators said they needed more time to complete their probe of the accident.

Witnesses said the Beechcraft 100 rose into the air, pivoted on one wing and plunged into the ground, bursting into flames on a ranch adjacent to the Midland-Odessa Regional Air Terminal.

"On a normal landing, the gear would be down," Wandel said prior to today's news conference, adding that the position of the gear indicates the pilot attempted to abort the aircraft's landing by executing a go-around.

A go-around is not an unusual procedure and might be executed for "a couple of dozen reasons," such as excessive runway traffic, Wandel said.

However, "the first thing you would do on a go-around is raise the landing gear" after achieving full power, he said, explaining that the position of the landing gear has led NTSB investigators to "think it (the re-positioning of the gear) was done" by the pilot rather than through mechanical failure.

Killed in the accident were KOSA Assistant News Director Gary Hopper, 32, of Midland; Sports Director Jeff Shull, 25, of Odessa; Chief Engineer Bob Stephens, 47, and Assistant Engineer Ed Monette, 26, both of Odessa; production assistants Bruce Dyer, 26, of Midland and Brent Roach, 24, of Odessa; pilot Keith Elkin of Midland; and Hopper's brother-in-law, 37-year-old Jay Alvin Price, also of Midland.

Several burglary complaints filed

In burglary complaints filed with city police during the past 24 hours, Sue Parker of 2411 Emerson said watches, jewelry and assorted change worth a total of $2,830 were taken in a break-in at her residence Monday. Entry was gained by breaking a bedroom window.

Two bolt action rifles, three TV sets and a jar of pennies were among the items reported taken in a burglary of the E.M. Bauer residence at 2401 Neil Ave. The break-in occurred sometime in the past week. Total loss was placed at $1,376.

An employee of the Community Day Care Center, 815. S. Carver, reported the disappearance of $664 in cash from an office desk drawer.

And Patrick Repman of 607 W. Nobles said a 30-30 caliber rifle and a pump action shotgun were taken from his vehicle while it was parked at his home Sunday night. Total loss was placed at $590.

Gunmen kidnap airline employees

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem gunmen kidnapped about 60 Lebanese Christian employees of Lebanon's Middle East Airlines on the airport highway today, airport sources reported.

The employees were heading to the Christian sector of Beirut aboard two buses when hooded gunmen blocked the way, jumped into both vehicles and forced them into southern Beirut's Shiite-inhabited slums, the sources said.

The sources, who declined to be named, said it could not be determined to which Shiite group the kidnappers belonged to.

A spokesman at the office of Nabih Berri, head of the Shiite Amal militia, told The Associated Press by telephone that Berri had issued orders for the immediate release of all the abducted employees.

The spokesman, who declined to be named, said the abduction was a reaction to kidnappings of Shiite travelers by rightist Christian militiamen of the Phalange Party in southern Lebanon earlier in the day.

Israeli troops today freed seven Palestinians from Lebanese Christian militiamen who kidnapped them after their release from Ansar detention camp in south Lebanon last week, Israeli military sources said.

The Christians were quoted as saying the Palestinians were terrorists who could not be allowed to go free, but Israeli troops forced them to release the men, who were among some 4,600 Arab prisoners exchanged last week for six Israeli prisoners of war.

The sources said the Palestinians were seized by the Christian troops while traveling north near the town of Jezzine, intending to leave Israeli-controlled territory for their homes in the central Lebanese mountains.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Marine base was shelled twice during the night and one U.S. peacekeeper suffered a concussion when he fell off a bunker, a Marine spokesman said.

The injured Marine was evacuated by helicopter from the base at Beirut's international airport to the amphibious assault ship Guam off the coast for medical observation, said Maj. Dennis Brooks.

Brooks said the Marine was injured Monday evening when five rounds of artillery crashed just east of the airport, sending the leathernecks ducking into foxholes and bunkers.

The second attack came early today when six artillery rounds hit close to the southern edge of the airport, Brooks said. In both cases, he said, there was no damage and the Marines did not return fire.

It was the fourth attack on the Marine base in two days of sporadic clashes between Lebanese army troops and anti-government Druse and Shiite Moslem militiamen in Beirut's southern suburbs and surrounding hills.

On Monday, a bombardment of the port wounded four construction workers. Police were unable to determine who was responsible for the first shelling of the harbor area since Israel's 1982 summer invasion of Lebanon.

The rightist Christian Phalange Party and the Progressive Socialist Party of leftist Druse leader Walid Jumblatt blamed each other for the widening breaches of Lebanon's Sept. 26 civil war ceasefire.

Jumblatt's weekly newspaper, Al-Anbaa, accused the Phalangist-dominated Lebanese Forces militia of waging a war of attrition in central Lebanon's Chouf mountains, the Druse' main base. The newspaper said a "conclusive" response will come after President Amin Gemayel returns from a visit to Washington this week.

"Either Lebanon's national reconciliation talks will be resumed in Geneva, or a military blow will be dealt to check this war of attrition," Al-Anbaa said.

A conference of Lebanon's top Moslem and Christian leaders was held in Geneva, Switzerland, last month in an attempt to work out a new balance of power to end eight years of civil warfare.

Gemayel, now in Italy, had a private audience Monday with Pope John Paul II in the Vatican and met with Italy's premier, Bettino Craxi.

Gemayel's Washington visit will follow a visit by Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, who meets President Reagan today for a second time. U.S. and Israeli officials say the talks will mark a new era of cooperation aimed at resolving the impasse in Lebanon and stopping Syrian advances in the Middle East.

'Era of cooperation' expected as U.S., Israel stage talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior U.S. and Israeli officials, while saying little about their discussions here, are predicting they will mark a new era of cooperation aimed at resolving the impasse in Lebanon and at stopping Syrian-inspired turmoil in the Middle East.

President Reagan was to meet today for a second time with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir to continue Monday's talks, which both sides described as warm and friendly. Shamir also met separately for four hours with Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The two sides agreed to establish two joint working groups that would meet overnight and report back in time for today's meetings. One group was instructed to focus on Lebanon with special emphasis on developing ideas on how to get Syria to withdraw its troops.

The second was told to concentrate on proposals for advancing American and Israeli military cooperation, which is a major subject of Shamir's visit here.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Arens planned a separate follow-up meeting on the military relationship today.

Meanwhile, the New York Times reported in today's editions that Reagan has approved steps to increase American military cooperation with Israel, including resumption of delivery of American-made cluster-bomb artillery shells.

Delivery of cluster bombs, which scatter grenade-like explosive charges over a wide area, was suspended in July 1982 after Israel invaded Lebanon.

In Monday's meetings, Israeli officials said Shamir stressed that Syria's aim is to dominate the Arab world, using Lebanon as a "test case." An Israeli official who insisted on anonymity said the United States and Israel "see the situation eye-to-eye."

A senior U.S. official said Syria "is going to have to take into account" closer U.S.-Israeli cooperation. The United States reportedly is asking Israel to show iself as a viable deterrent to what the official, who also insisted on anonymity, called the growing "Syrian strength and assertiveness."

There was considerable emphasis that the discussions were proceeding smoothly and would lead to a strengthening of the already close ties between the two countries. Past differences over Israel's invasion of Lebanon last year were all but forgotten.

Court to consider city's right to hold jobs for residents

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court is studying whether cities may legitimately set aside a percentage of public works jobs for city residents, even if it means denying job opportunities to citizens of a neighboring state.

The court heard arguments Monday on the constitutionality of a Camden, N.J., ordinance aimed at fighting local unemployment. The local law forces private contractors to hire Camden residents for at least 40 percent of the work force on each publicly financed project costing at least $50,000.

The court's decision, expected by July, also will decide the fate of similar local policies elsewhere. The New Jersey Supreme Court upheld the Camden plan last year.

N. Thomas Foster, city attorney for Camden, said the job quota policy is intended to solve a "severe labor and social problem." He noted that approximately one of every three Camden residents receives welfare.

"City residents have a right to benefit from the improvement of the city" by getting a share of the jobs in rebuilding the community, Foster said.

For non-residents, "there is no fundamental right to work for the city of Camden," he added.

Foster said it is ironic for organized labor to take the position that "Buy American" is patriotic but to "hire local" is unconstitutional.

The hiring quota policy is being challenged by the United Building and Construction Trades Council.

Steven Kudatzky, a Haddonfield, N.J., lawyer representing the union, said such hiring restrictions might lead to "a day ... when people will only be able to work where they live" and when "internal passports" are required to ensure workers are not employed illegally.

The union contends that the ordinance is unconstitutional because it discriminates against residents of another state — Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia sits just across the Delaware River from Camden, a decaying South Jersey city of some 85,000 people with 20 percent unemployment.

The Supreme Court last February upheld a similar job-preference plan in Boston, which reserved 50 percent of the construction jobs on city projects for Boston residents.

But that plan had been challenged on grounds it violated a constitutional provision that bars states from interfering with interstate commerce.

The Boston case left unanswered the question posed in the Camden case: whether local job preference plans violate a constitutional provision requiring states to give the same "privileges and immunities" to out-of-state residents that they provide their own citizens.

Sale of copter parts considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alarmed at increased human rights abuses in Guatemala, the Reagan administration is taking a second look at letting that country's rightist military government buy U.S. helicopter parts.

State Department officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said a $2 million sale is already being delayed and some senior officials want permission for Guatemala to buy the parts rescinded as a sign of U.S. displeasure over an upsurge in political violence.

That renewed violence has included attacks on employees of U.S.-funded educational programs, one of whom died under mysterious circumstances and another was kidnapped.

Boy seeks royal pardon for dog

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A 13-year-old boy has appealed to the Queen of England for a royal pardon to save his dog, which has been ordered destroyed for attacking people.

Peter Kohncke went to Government House late Monday to present a petition asking for a pardon for his dog Tammy after a judge denied an appeal to save the animal.

"I just asked him to let Tammy live," said the boy after seeing an aide of Sir James Ramsay, governor of the state of Queensland and the state representative of Queen Elizabeth II.

Magistrate Frederick McGuire on Monday turned down an appeal to spare Tammy's life.

Bangladesh placed on curfew

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Soldiers and police enforced a curfew today after six people were reported killed in rioting against the martial law regime. The airport was closed, political meetings were banned and opposition leaders went into hiding.

Government officials said four people were killed by police gunfire Monday and opposition soures reported two additional deaths after tens of thousands of demonstrators massed outside the Dhaka government headquarters.

Russia's 'second city' reflects grandeur of glorious past

EDITOR'S NOTE: Peter the Great built St. Petersburg 250 years ago as Russia's "window to the West." Now, as Soviet Leningrad, its windows face East, overshadowed by Moscow. But much of its grandeur and glory remains.

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

LENINGRAD, U.S.S.R. — When light falls on this elegant port, the world's northernmost metropolis, it doesn't seem to matter whether it is named for Lenin or St. Peter.

Dostoyevsky and Turgenev penned its history. Tchaikovsky composed its melodies. Anna Pavlova and Rudolf Nureyev danced them to life. Mendeleev charted the elements. Pavlov's dogs dutifully salivated here, carrying psychology forward.

Today, it is not even the capital of a Soviet republic. In the shadow of a jealous Moscow, it is a second city in a Russia that scorns its former aristocratic grace and glitter.

Peter the Great built his czarist capital in 1703 in his ruthless drive to Westernize Russia. Voltaire noted later: "The united magnificence of all the cities of Europe could but equal St. Petersburg."

To this day Leningrad, formerly St. Petersburg and Petrograd, exudes an essence of its own, transcending any prevailing politics or ideology. By any measure, it remains among the world's great cities.

But large changes also came. There's no question the czarist days are long gone.

In the state Hermitage Museum recently, a guide swept her charges past a roomful of Rembrandts, along corridors hung frame to frame with Europe's finest art, to a drab back staircase.

"Here," she said, reflecting proper awe of Soviet history, "is where the Bolsheviks stormed the Winter Palace in October 1917."

But from a distance, the boxy gray prefabricated apartments, the Soviet heroes' monuments, the thin-lipped police and the bright red slogans dissolve into a beauty of eternal quality.

At dawn, the columns and balconies along the waterfront fade slowly into distinct pastel shapes.

In the sunlight, silver sparkles on the broad Neva River and the 50 Venetian-style canals and waterways laced under the city's 600 bridges.

At dusk, the last rays flash off the golden spires of the Admiralty and the Peter and Paul Fortress, outlining a stately skyline.

Most nights, yellows and reds play off the water and sparkle with a muted garishness. For two weeks in summer, the "white nights," dark never comes, and the city's midnight is a translucent haze.

Alexander Pushkin, poet laureate of czars, wrote in the 19th century:

"I love thee, Peter's proud creation,
"Thy princely stateliness of line,
"The regal Neva coursing, patient,
"'Twixt sober walls of massive stone."

Today's 4.7 million Leningraders, who duck under umbrellas for one-third of the year and suffer subfreezing weather during another third, those sentiments appear to hold.

Things are different inside Soviet Union

By MICHAEL GRANT
Copley News Service

It is commonly known in the West that in Russia illness does not exist. The last illness in that nation was reported early in 1917. Since then, no Russian has had a sick day in his life.

Ignoramuses in the capitalist press will publish the occasional rumor to the contrary. Well-placed sources will be quoted, saying Andropov has been ill. Fiddlesticks. If Andropov does not show up on the Kremlin balcony for awhile, it is only because he is on holiday in the Crimea.

But there is no satisfying the rumormongers. See what they did to Brezhnev. Years were spent in rude allegations that Brezhnev was ill. Finally, out of frustration, they made up the Big Lie. They said that Brezhnev had died.

Russian premiers do not die. Brezhnev did not die. A stoppage of life merely occurred in his body, with the unfortunate side effect of severe stiffness that to this day makes it unreasonably difficult for him to come out on the balcony.

Still, the propaganda had its effect. Talk to a random Westerner, and chances are he will tell you that, yes, he believes that Brezhnev died.

Anyone who believes that Brezhnev died would believe that there are plane crashes in Russia.

Planes never crash in Russia. The most that anyone has heard of happening in the last 65 years is the infrequent sudden landing, brought on by a stoppage of flight. No people have ever been aboard.

The plane crash rumors that surface in the West usually start with citizens at the airport who, after 18 hours of waiting for the flight to arrive, start to put two and two together. Such mathematics is reckless and indicates a need to enroll the calculators for a few years, say five to 10, of allegiance training review.

There is no heartbreak in Russia. Psoriasis is unknown. No fraud, no embezzlers, no corruption in government, no defective brake recalls.

In Moscow, it is a comfortable 72 degrees 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. What shows up as snow in photos smuggled to the West is in fact snow and illustrative of the Russian technology that can provide beautiful snowfall in 72-degree temperatures.

On city streets, a Russian citizen has not been robbed, arrested, gotten drunk, shot, or run over by an automobile in over 65 years.

Bridges do not collapse in Russia. If a span's wreckage is seen poking up from the water, it is only the first stage of a regularly scheduled state renovation project.

On to victory!

Midland Lee High School's Rebels have treated both fans and opponents to an exciting brand of football this season, rolling up an impressive record of 11 wins and only two losses.

That record is unsurpassed in the school's 24-year history. Every team around is well aware that the Rebs are a team to be reckoned with. They have played like winners and, to a large extent, have captured the hearts and the imaginations of a vast number of Midlanders.

Most communities around the nation strongly support their high school football teams. The fall sport has become increasingly popular in recent years. It's a powerful force for drawing the residents of a community together, giving them a oneness of spirit.

Even in a city like Midland which boasts two exceptional high school football teams, fans, while being loyal to one, tend to swing their support behind the team that advances beyond district play. That's understandable; communities like to have winning football teams because they're a source of pride.

Now, with Midland Lee facing a quarterfinal playoff Saturday afternoon with none other than perennial state contender Odessa Permian, football fever is running hot in the Tall City.

Competition is natural between Midland and Odessa; the cities are only 20 miles apart. The Rebs and the Panthers already have squared off once this season, Lee winning that contest 20-7. But the Panthers went on to win District 4-5A. Lee became runnerup.

This marks the first time that teams from both cities have advanced to the state playoffs in the same year. Needless to say, the competitive spirit is at an all-time high and thousands of residents are anxiously awaiting the outcome of the game Saturday in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

The winner of Saturday's game will advance to the semi-finals. The loser will return home with hopes of another year, another season.

Come on, Rebs! Make this a perfect season by beating Permian and then going on to bring back the state championship!

Missile madness

The West German Parliament's approval of U.S. intermediate-range missile deployment has resulted in a countermove by the Russians.

Soviet delegates showed their displeasure by walking out of missile reduction talks in Geneva last Wednesday. This was a move that was expected, because of Russian threats.

The action by the Bundestag removes the last obstacle to locating the first Pershing II missiles in Western Europe. It came despite the fact that German people took to the streets in recent weeks to protest missile deployment.

Our role now will be to work with the Germans and build their confidence. We must use restraint in our foreign policy and our military initiatives, in order to earn their trust in us as allies.

And we must push ahead with serious bargaining with the Russians for the reduction of the nuclear arsenals of both countries — when the Soviet representatives finish their sulk.

Another View:

What's old is new!

It's said that if you live long enough you'll see the styles of your youth return. Even so, many old-timers are surprised at some current revivals.

Take knickers. They are back, those loose-fitting knee-length trousers boys wore between short pants and long trousers.

Every kid on the block was desperate to get out of short pants and into knickers. It was part of growing up. Then they were anxious to get out of the knickers and into long trousers, the symbol of manhood.

In the 1920s, some grown men, mostly golfers, wore knickers, but no one knows exactly why. Maybe because Bobby Jones, top golfer of his day, wore them. So did English country squires.

On a recent buying trip to Europe, Marco Zoilo, a Brooks Brothers clothier, saw some men in knickers and decided, "It could be fun to resurrect them."

Whether from nostalgia or something else, the newly arrived knickers are selling. The store's ads show a sporty looking type wearing a cap, cardigan, knickers and argyle socks. That's vintage F. Scott Fitzgerald.

Then there are love ballads. They're back too. The record industry is in a state of shock. Linda Ronstadt, the popular rock and roller, defied musical trends and cut a record album as different from Top 40 fare as caviar is from corn dogs. Ronstadt recorded "What's New?" "I've Got a Crush on You" and other old love songs. Her album is among the top 10 sellers.

"It's already a gold record and we expect it to go platinum before Christmas; it's our best selling record of the year," says the happy producer.

So, what's new? What's old is what's new.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Reagan, Shamir talk cooperation

WASHINGTON — President Reagan and his top advisers are meeting behind closed doors with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and Defense Minister Moshe Arens. Here's what they're talking about:

Jack Anderson

The most important topic — the principal reason for Shamir's visit — is how to implement the Reagan administration's decision to cooperate more closely with Israel in Lebanon. As I reported earlier, on Oct. 29 the president signed a secret National Security Decision Directive calling for closer strategic coordination with Israel in the Middle East.

The decision was intended to strengthen Reagan's hand at the diplomatic poker table. By the implicit threat to unleash the Israeli army with support from U.S. naval and air forces off Lebanon, the president hopes to wring concessions out of Syrian President Hafez Assad without the use of U.S. ground troops.

For their part, sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado, the Israelis are suspicious of the Reagan administration's motives. They question Reagan's sincerity and fear that his support for Israel is just an election-year tactic aimed at the Jewish vote.

The second point under discussion is the Israeli-Lebanese agreement on the withdrawal of Israeli troops from Lebanon. Though it was largely the handiwork of Secretary of State George Shultz, there is some evidence that the administration now wants Israel to let the agreement lapse.

The reason is that Assad regards the troop withdrawal agreement as the equivalent — or at least the first step — in Lebanon's recognition of Israel. To the Syrian president, any move by an Arab state that legitimizes Israel's existence is bad news. Dissolution of the agreement would be a sop to Assad, in hopes of moderating his opposition to Reagan's overall Middle East peace plan.

The trouble, of course, is that the agreement is also considered important by Israel, and for the same reason. Lebanon would be the first Arab state after Egypt to recognize Israel. So Shamir will refuse to abrogate the agreement and, for the time being, the administration will continue to support it.

A third, almost as sticky, point at issue is the U.S. plan to create a Jordanian rapid deployment force with close American military support. Here, my sources suggest that Shamir and Arens will be more likely to go along with Reagan. The principal reason, again, is Assad.

U.S. intelligence agencies — and presumably the Israelis as well — are increasingly concerned about evidence of a Syrian "master plan" for expansion. Assad, who has never been faulted for lack of ambition, is suspected of trying to implement the following timetable of conquest: first, the Palestine Liberation Organization, then Lebanon, then Jordan and ultimately Israel.

Assad has pretty well succeeded in destroying Yassir Arafat's power and bringing the PLO under Syrian authority. He has already made a start on phase one by undermining the Lebanese Christian regime of Amin Gemayel.

And there are reports that he has even begun phase three by arranging car bombs in Amman and assassination of Jordanian diplomats abroad. King Hussein has issued bold denunciations of Syria, but privately the Jordanians are worried sick.

Under the circumstances, Israeli leaders have far less to fear from a strengthened Hussein, so they will probably concede on the Jordanian rapid deployment force the Reagan administration has its heart set on.

Ironically, the Kremlin is as concerned about Assad's ambitions as the Americans and Israelis are. Intelligence sources have reported evidence that the Soviets have been trying to rein in the Syrians — but so far without success.

COPPER CONUNDRUM: For reasons that baffle government economists and infuriate the U.S. copper industry, the Reagan administration is expected to support a $268 million loan from the Inter-American Development Bank to Chile's state-owned copper monopoly. Critics argue that the low-interest loan subsidy would encourage overproduction by Chile despite a world copper glut, and spell disaster for U.S. copper producers.

Only intense lobbying by the U.S. industry kept the administration from approving the loan earlier this month, and the best that could be achieved was a postponement of the IADB's decision till December.

Sources explained the administration's probable support is based on political-diplomatic reasons, not economic ones. A negative U.S. vote would be considered an affront by the Chileans — and wouldn't stop approval of the loan anyway. Even though the United States contributes the lion's share of the bank's loan funds, it can be outvoted by the Latin American bank members, who are unconcerned about the ailing U.S. copper industry.

Jack Anderson writes for United Feature Syndicate.

INSIDE REPORT:

'Credibility' killing Marines

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Against the prospect of more American blood spilling here on an ill-defined mission, a workable plan to shift the U.S. Marines out of harm's way exists but has run into resistance from Secretary of State George Shultz.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

In place of the current, ambiguous task of serving as a pro-government "presence," knowledgeable officials present a strong case for shifting the Marines away from their dangerously exposed positions at the airport. Instead, they would patrol defendable parts of the coastal road leading south from Beirut. That would give them both security and a proper role — military, not political.

At this point, the lack of a workable, long-range U.S. strategy for Lebanon emerges. Shultz objects to repositioning the Marines, contending it might reveal weakness and cost American credibility. His critics insist that moving them would demonstrate the self-confidence of a superpower; keeping the Marines at the airport like sitting ducks in a shooting gallery suggests weakness and the fear of facing up to reality.

The nature of this debate cannot be fully perceived without a personal visit to this embattled city. Beirut seethes with old scores to be settled, sectarian vengeance, car bombs and snipers. The 8 p.m. curfew suddenly shuts down the city cold. Citizens who venture out risk immediate arrest. The eerie silence of a metropolis made quiet by fear, night after night, is broken only by the rumble of half-tracks and personnel carriers patrolling over cobblestones and rubble.

In this setting, the Marines in their present static positions are bullseyes for target practice by sectarian militiamen. A tour of the Beirut airport, taking in the remnant of the BLT barracks (in which 239 Americans were blown up) and the surrounding terrain where the Marines patrol, shows how outrageously vulnerable they are.

The new terrain proposed for the Marines is a long portion of the coastal highway stretching south from Beirut to the new Israeli defense line on the Awali River. When we traveled that road, the claim of the plan's sponsors looked sensible: lengthy sections of the highway in virtually unpopulated areas, with plenty of natural cover for the patrolling Marines.

Shultz, not the White House or Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, is viewed by Lebanese officials and most foreign insiders here as the principal American decision-maker. Strategically, they think his clinging to the ill-fated May 17 Israeli troop withdrawal agreement digs the U.S. deeper into stalemate. Tactically, Shultz is blamed for using the Marines to try to bluff anti-American factions out of the game. But neither the Syrians nor their hard-bitten sectarian allies in this blood-soaked country will bluff easily after eight years of civil war.

The political decision to assign the Marines to the airport became untenable the moment the Israelis moved out of the surrounding Shouf mountains and civil war resumed. That converted the Marines in Lebanese eyes from a friendly "presence" to the protector of one small Lebanese faction: President Amin Gemayel's Phalangists.

The plan to shift the Marines would place security of the Beirut airport, which never actually was the defined Marine task, in the hands of one U.S.-trained Lebanese Army battalion. Both Lebanese and Western military officers say the army could indeed handle that job as well as the Marines.

The political point of such a shift is obvious: The Marines would get credit for making the trip from Beirut to the Israeli line safe for all Lebanese. The Marines next might assist the Israelis in peace-keeping along the highway all the way down to Sidon and Tyre, two cities under Israeli occupation south of the Awali.

Because the U.S. and Israel are trying hard these days to find common actions, this plan is strategically superior to a "presence" at the airport. Moreover, if a Marine patrol were attacked along the highway, heavy retaliatory fire from the U.S. Navy, including helicopter gunships, would present no hazard to the sparse civilian population. Naval fire in defense of Marines at the airport today might save Marine lives, but at high cost in terms of Lebanese lives and U.S. prestige.

The miscasting of the Marines by freezing them at Beirut seems well understood by many U.S. officials, but not well-meaning ex-Marine George Shultz. He continues to fuss over losing face and credibility, though spilling more American blood for that purpose seems unconscionable. The secretary of state thereby ignores a truth: When a super-power led by Ronald Reagan acts in its own best interest, credibility takes care of itself.

Defense deficits a 'big fib'

One of the big fibs that will be batted about with increasing frequency during the coming political campaigns is that big deficits are the result of defense spending.

Charley Reese

To put the true situation in perspective you should remember that in Fiscal Year 1984, we will spend more than three times as much money on food stamps as we will on aircraft for the Army. We will spend more on food stamps than on aircraft for the Navy. We will spend more on food stamps than on missiles for the Air Force, weapons for the Navy, or tracked vehicles for the Army.

In the early 1950's, we were spending 10.9 percent of the gross national product on defense and 2.6 percent on transfer payments (welfare, etc.). In 1984, defense spending amounts to 6.4 percent of the gross national product but transfer payments have increased to 10.1 percent of GNP.

Procurement for the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, National Guard, Air Force and Air National Guard totaled $88.2 billion in the FY 84 Defense Authorization Bill. Human services spending totals over $330 billion.

In the 1984 budget the Congress decided to spend $1.8 billion for 840 new tanks. Keep in mind that the number of tanks already in the Soviet inventory far exceeds that of the United States. Even so, the Congress spent $1.8 billion for tanks but over $5 billion on federal aid to education and over $63.6 billion for civilian health care.

There are two important points to keep in mind. One, defense spending declined drastically during the 1970s. Two, domestic social spending exploded during the same period. What the Congress was doing was cutting back on defense to make room for more and more social spending.

The present situation is that we need to do a lot of additional spending on defense to make up for past deficiencies, but the Congress and the President are unwilling to cut domestic spending in order to do the job within existing revenues. Hence, huge deficits.

To give you just a couple of examples of the true situation of our defense forces, the Navy is short by one half the amount of ammunition it needs for shore targets and short by a third on other types. There have been cases recently where when one ship relieved another on station, the ammunition had to be transferred. The Air Force is short by nearly 10 percent the personnel it needs in its logistics branch. It also suffers from shortages of spare parts.

This is not a safe situation nor is it fair to those we ask to serve in the armed forces. We are not merely inconveniencing our military personnel; we are endangering their lives unnecessarily. We are also dangerously diminishing the deterrent value of our defense forces.

Deterring war is the only game in town. Sure, we may all think it would be much nicer to spend money on food stamps than on nasty old missiles. but if deterrence fails, everything else becomes irrelevant.

With war, Social Security won't be a problem; neither will Medicare, taxes, deficits, immigration, food stamps, dairy subsidies and all of the other things on which we lavish money. With war, all of those problems vanish into smoke to be replaced by one single problem — survival, in the rawest sense of the word and without a nanny goat government to make things comfortable for us.

Those who want to beat missiles into food stamps are guilty of either stupidity or worse. The world at the moment is an extremely dangerous place and our first priority must be a defense force strong enough to deter our enemies from launching an attack.

We can easily afford such a strong defense. We must insist that the Congress and the executive branch provide it. It would be bad enough to see America die because the enemy was stronger; it would be unforgiveable to see America die because we lacked the self-discipline to survive.

White government threatens to evict South African blacks

MAGOPA, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government is threatening to force 300 black families from their homes in a remote northwestern village unless they move voluntarily to an area reserved for blacks 60 miles away.

The Bakwena tribe has lived in Magopa since 1911.

Anglican Bishop Desmond Tutu, head of the South African Council of Churches, led a delegation from the council Monday to Magopa for an all-night vigil protesting the evictions. Members of the Black Sash, an anti-apartheid women's organization, also took part in the demonstration, which continued today.

Police reportedly set up roadblocks near the village, located in an area designated for whites about 12 miles north of Ventersdorp and 80 miles west of Johannesburg in rural Transvaal province.

The eviction had been scheduled to take place today, but the state radio reported this morning that the villagers had at least one more day to leave before being forcibly evicted. It did not say what would happen Wednesday.

State President Marais Viljoen signed an order 10 days ago giving the remaining residents of Magopa until today to move to Pachsdraai, an area scheduled to become part of the Bophuthatswana homeland in the far northwest of the country.

Death toll lowered in Madrid jetliner crash

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Colombia's Avianca airlines has lowered the death toll from 183 to 181 in the crash of a jumbo jet as it approached Madrid's airport, Spain's Aviation Ministry said today.

Officials also said a judge investigating Sunday's air disaster has listened to tapes from the jetliner's cockpit and flight data recorders but that the inquiry may not be completed for months.

Avianca's European manager told Spanish aviation authorities that 181 people — two less than originally reported — died in the crash of the Boeing 747 just 5 miles from Madrid's Barajas airport. It said 192 people, not 194, were aboard the ill-fated plane.

Hospital sources said 10 of the 11 survivors were reported improving, but the other survivor, identified as Peter Steygmann of West Germany, remained in serious condition.

Avianca and Spanish aviation officials initially reported that 170 passengers, 20 crewmen and another four off-duty crewmen were aboard the plane. But today Avianca's European manager, whose name was given, told Spanish authorities that two, not four, off-duty crewmen were aboard the plane.

Modesto Augusto Gomez Rico, a special judge named by the Spanish aviation authority to investigate the crash, listened to the tapes of communication between the airliner and the control tower at Barajas airport. There was no information on what was said on the tapes.

The airliner's flight data recorder, known as the black box, may be the key to determining what caused the crash.

The plane was en route from Paris to Bogota, Colombia, with stops in Madrid and Caracas, Venezuela. Avianca officials in Bogota said the jetliner carried people from 21 nations, including one American and a number of Latin American artists.

Avianca and Boeing Co. technicians along with observers from the majority of countries of the victims are helping in the investigation.

Survivors have provided conflicting accounts about the moments prior to the crash. Some say they saw an engine aflame shortly before the plane crashed. Others say that when the plane was approaching the airport they heard a strange noise, the plane regained altitude and then crashed.

Spanish Transportation Minister Enrique Baron said the plane crashed only 45 seconds from the runway when it hit three small hills, caught fire and exploded.

Relatives and friends, meanwhile, continued to try to identify the crash victims, many badly charred, at an airport hangar. Officials said that as of noon today only 45 bodies had been identified.

Dear Terri,

Our newspaper advertising has been such a vital part in the growth of both Bottle Stop locations. We thought it would be appropriate to let you know just how effective the Reporter-Telegram has been for us.

Without getting into specific numbers, each time we use the Reporter-Telegram to promote our sales efforts, the net effect has more than exceeded our goals. With the ads pulling a minimum of three days, not only does it make advertising more cost effective, but it also allows us to build a greater clientelle, which is certainly the most important objective when using the newspaper or any other medium of advertising.

We would also like to take this opportunity to say that we have found a very professional attitude in dealing with you, other members of the retail staff, and your production department.

In the ten or so advertisements that we have run we have experienced only good, clean and attractive ads that evidently appeal to your readers. It is a sure sign that there is a "New Reporter-Telegram" at work in Midland.

We look forward to a close relationship with you and the Reporter-Telegram in the years ahead. It is our intentions to continue using the Reporter-Telegram to reach our valued customers.

Sincerely,

Gary & Carla Grant

Gainesville Citizens Against the Death Penalty participate in a candlelight prayer vigil in Starke, Fla., Monday night. The group, which held its vigil at St. Edwards Catholic Church, was protesting the scheduled execution of Robert A. Sullivan.

Groups agree on rules to be followed when treating infants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nine groups, which differed sharply over the federal government's role in protecting the lives of severely handicapped newborns, are signing a statement of principles to be followed when treating disabled infants.

The American Academy of Pediatrics and the National Association of Children's Hospitals and Related Institutions, which successfully challenged in court the federal government's "Baby Doe" regulations on procedural grounds, are among the signers.

They were to be joined by the Association for Retarded Citizens and six other groups representing the disabled. Some of those groups had sided with the government in court when it defended a set of regulations which the medical groups opposed as being intrusive.

"When medical care is clearly beneficial, it should always be provided," the statement of principles says. "In cases where it is uncertain whether medical treatment will be beneficial, a person's disability must not be the basis for a decision to withhold treatment."

The principles also said that "a presumption always should be in favor of treatment" where there is doubt about whether to treat.

The groups began consultations after a federal district judge ruled in March that the Department of Health and Human Services failed to follow proper procedures when it first required posted warning notices in hospitals against denying food and care to severely handicapped infants.

The department also established "Baby Doe" squads to investigate tips about suspected cases which could be reported on a toll-free, 24-hour hotline. The judge questioned the wisdom of the regulations as well.

The department resubmitted the regulations and has sought public comment on them in order to meet the judge's procedural stipulation. A final version of the regulations has not been published.

The groups agree that it is ethical and legal to withhold medical or surgical procedures which are futile and will prolong dying. Steps should be taken to making a dying infant comfortable and the baby should be fed "as medically indicated."

Baby Jane Doe in critical condition

STONY BROOK, N.Y (AP) — Baby Jane Doe, an infant born with multiple birth defects whose treatment has become the subject of a court battle between her parents and the Reagan administration, was in critical condition today, a hospital spokeswoman said.

A spokeswoman for the University Hospital at Stony Brook, where the infant is being cared for, said the baby was put on the critical list over the weekend.

The spokeswoman, who declined to be named, said she had no further information.

The Reagan administration has been attempting to look at the baby's medical records, saying it wants to ensure she is not being denied treatment because of her handicaps.

Convicted killer wins stay of execution

STARKE, Fla. (AP) — Convicted killer Robert Sullivan, who has been on Death Row longer than any other American, drew a rare mercy plea from Pope John Paul II and a temporary stay of today's scheduled execution from a federal judge.

Sullivan, 36, was scheduled to die in Florida's electric chair for the April 9, 1973, murder of a south Florida restaurant manager. Sullivan, who has been on Death Row a record 10 years, says he is innocent.

Florida Gov. Bob Graham rejected the papal appeal and an aide said the governor would not stay the electrocution.

But the chief judge of the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, acting on a motion by Sullivan's lawyers, delayed the electrocution until the 12-judge panel could be polled on whether to consider a last-minute appeal. On Monday, a three-judge panel of the same court voted 2-1 to reject his appeal.

State officials expected the full court to act on Sullivan's request for a hearing by noon today. If they deny a new hearing and a last-gasp appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court failed, Sullivan could be executed anytime before noon Wednesday, according to the terms of a death warrant signed by the governor.

Roman Catholic Church officials said Archbishop Edward McCarthy of Miami, with authorization from the pope, telephoned a mercy plea to Graham on Monday.

A Roman Catholic bishop in Florida has said a Boston man confessed to a priest that he was with Sullivan at a homosexual bar at the time of the killing. The unidentified priest is barred from revealing details of the conversation but he and several of his colleagues asked for clemency because they believed Sullivan was innocent.

In Washington a spokesman for Archbishop Pio Laghi, the pope's personal representative in the United States, said the pope had not formally asked for mercy, but had "joined his voice in a pastoral way to those of his brother pastors."

"I appreciate the thoughts and concern of the holy father," Graham said, according to Steve Hull, the governor's press secretary.

"We're not going to commute Mr. Sullivan's sentence," Hull said today. "We're not going to stay the execution."

If Sullivan's exeucution is carried out, he would be the first person executed in Florida since John Spenkelink died on May 25, 1979, and the ninth in the United States since the Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1972.

Tiny college takes on court

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a David and Goliath confrontation over sexual equality and freedom from bureaucracy, tiny Grove City College is taking on the U.S. government in the Supreme Court.

After hearing arguments by both sides today, the high court must decide whether the Pennsylvania school's students may receive direct federal grants and loans, even though school officials refuse to pledge in writing that they do not, and will not, practice sex discrimination.

The case took on enhanced significance — both legally and politically — after the Reagan administration focused on whether the federal law banning sex bias in federally subsidized education is limited to specific programs.

The administration contends that the law, commonly called Title IX, covers only those programs within a college or university that are direct recipients of federal aid. That view mutes the impact of the law, not only as it affects education but in efforts to stamp out sexual bias in other endeavors that receive federal money.

The administration's middle-of-the-road approach has infuriated some women's groups.

One women's rights activist group, the National Coalition for Women and Girls in Education, said Monday that if the Supreme Court agrees with the Reagan administration, women on campus will be left with "a scattershot of rights, a piece of Swiss cheese."

No one is accusing the private, coed, liberal arts college, founded in 1876, of discrimination. In fact, the school is on record for opposing discrimination based on race or sex long before federal laws banned such bias in education.

But a federal appeals court has ruled that Title IX requires any educational institution to sign an "assurance of compliance" form if its students are to receive federal aid.

White House security tightened because of intelligence reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Intelligence indicating that pro-Iranian terrorists planned to attack a major U.S. installation prompted the recent tightening of security at the White House, including parking sand-filled dump trucks at gates, The New York Times said today.

The seven dump trucks filled with sand were stationed at White House gates Thursday and cars and trucks were used to block State Department entrances. Three dump trucks remained at the White House Monday.

Reagan administration officials told the Times that the measures were put in place because intelligence information from the Middle East suggested that a pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem group in Lebanon was planning to attack a major U.S. installation either in the United States or abroad.

Neighbors rebuild man's house

GORHAM, Maine (AP) — Two months ago, Paul Boivin watched helplessly while a landslide swallowed up his new house on the bank of the Stroudwater River.

Now Boivin and his family have moved back into their home — thanks to money and labor contributed by friends and neighbors.

"It's great, all the people who have helped out. Just great. A lot of them I didn't even know," said Boivin, who was able to enjoy Thanksgiving dinner in his house.

Beverly Gushee, an organizer of the neighborhood committee overseeing the effort, said the first step was retrieving the house and garage from the deep crevice. The buildings were then placed on new foundations and repaired.

State lottery winner lucks out

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A winner of $1.6 million in the New Jersey Lottery had ripped up his winning ticket by mistake and later "almost cried" when he read on it, "Void if torn or altered."

But state officials said Monday they were ignoring the damage because the ticket was in good enough shape to pass the lottery's validation process.

Joseph R. Wyatt of Union Township will receive the bonanza over 20 years. He told a news conference he tore up the ticket after hearing a number on the radio that didn't match his. That number was from the previous week, and he later saw his winning number in the newspaper.

Bank robber gets her wish

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A bank robber afraid of her neighborhood and eager to live in an institutional setting has been given a sentence that will fulfil her wish.

Florence Pizi, 55, was sentenced Monday by Judge Victor Campilongo to a two-year suspended prison term, three years' probation and a year in county jail that can be served instead in a board-and-care home.

Can Rebs repeat Mojo victory?

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The burning question prior to Saturday's Shootout II at Lubbock's Jones Stadium between Odessa Permian and Midland Lee has been, "Is it possible for Mojo to lose to the same team in the same year?"

The question deserves to be looked at. After all, Permian hasn't lost many games in the last 10 years, much less to the same team in the same year.

History records that Lee defeated Permian by a 20-7 margin on the seventh weekend of the football season. Now, seven weeks later, these same two teams go at it again in a state quarterfinal playoff battle. Permian has lost only one game all year — the "King is Dead" loss to Lee. Lee has a 11-2 season mark, the best in the school's 24-year history.

Shootout II is here.

The Midland Lee players feel that the task at hand can be accomplished. In fact, they expect to turn the "King is Dead" trick one more time.

"I know that I didn't play very well the first time we played Permian and this will be sort of a revenge game for me since I got hurt and couldn't play in the second half in that first game," said Lee linebacker Michael Johnson. "I think they are going to have to write some more about the King being dead again."

Johnson has been the heart and soul of a proud Lee defensive unit this year and expects to play a full 48 minutes this time around.

But there are still people who feel it is asking Lee too much to defeat Permian twice in the same year since Lee has beaten Permian only four times in 24 years. Lee players had an answer for that too.

"Miracles happen," said Lee defensive end Nicky Tomlin. "You just gotta believe. It's going to happen again."

Offensive center Allen Bell felt much the same way. "I know not many teams have beaten Permian once, much less twice. But how many teams have had the chance we have? Not many. We can do it."

"Nobody has played them again after beating them," said Lee linebacker Billy Cornelius. "So, this is a first also. Nothing that has happened before matters now. It's us against them."

There were other reasons from the Lee players in a varied reaction.

"There's no doubt in my mind that we can beat Permian again," said defensive back Ricky Jackson. "We're all looking forward to this game."

Defensive tackle Carlos Ortega has a personal reason. "I wasn't eligible to play in the first four games, so this game with Permian will be my tenth game to play in this year. We have to win this one so it will feel like I made it to the playoffs."

Ortega came into the year listed as a transfer from Big Spring and the District 4-5A Executive Committee ruled that he had to sit out the first four games.

Offensive tackle John Bick said, "I don't have any special reason of why we can beat Permian again, but I just think we can."

For whatever reason, the Lee players feel like they can win Shootout II. And despite the interest this game has sparked across the West Texas plains, this isn't a first in playoff history.

L.D. Bell and Euless Trinity are both in the same district and they met last year in the quarterfinals with Bell advancing on penetrations after a tie game the second time around. Trinity had beaten Bell the first time around.

Even in this year's Class 5A championship run, the Permian-Lee matchup is not unique. Converse Judson and San Antonio Churchill are meeting in another quarterfinal matchup. Judson defeated Churchill the first time.

Ballinger and Crane just missed another Shootout II this year. Ballinger of District 6-3A has advanced to the quarterfinals against Post. Had Crane defeated Post, which they didn't, Ballinger and Crane would have had to replay a game that ended in a 14-14 tie the first time those two teams met.

So a Lee-Permian Shootout II may not be unique in the overall scheme of things, but try telling that to a football crazy Permian Basin this week.

Chaparrals smother Western Texas, 82-62

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Midland College opened the defense of its Western Junior College Conference title by hanging an 82-62 defeat on Western Texas College at the Langford Chaparral Center Monday night.

The way it started out, it didn't look like it would be that easy. The score was tied seven times and the lead changed hands 16 times in the game's first 13 minutes as the quick-handed Westerners forced MC into an unseemly number of floor errors.

But then, with WTC leading 26-25, the Chaps played defense. WTC managed just one field goal the final seven minutes of the first half and the first minute of the second half and only three free throws during the same stretch. The result was that Midland broke out of a 31-31 tie 3:28 before intermission to take a 39-31 halftime lead.

Remembering my house

Everybody remembers the house they grew up in.

Of course, the more nomadic families of America can have many homes. But on the average, people recall the places that formed their earliest memories. It can be an apartment in Manhattan or a farm in Missouri. It can be literally anything and anyplace.

For me, memories of the home I grew up in are always fond, even though I was barely eight years of age at the time our family moved.

For anyone not knowing or caring either way, but for the sake of the story, let it be known that I was born right here in Midland. Mother's Day, Midland Memorial Hospital, 1959.

I remember so much about my house. In fact, the very farthest memory I can conjure up concerns my old house. I was almost three years old, but I still can't remember anything before the first days of April, 1962. I remember my grandmother and an aunt visiting us in Midland all the way from Arkansas. And I remember my mother and father, coming home with a nifty little bundle in her hands.

THAT WAS the first time I met my little brother. I remember my mother beaming, coming through the garage door at the side of the house and coming through the kitchen. I remember putting Curtis to sleep in the extra room in the middle of the house. 21 years later, the pictures from my mind are still vivid.

I remember when my parents tried to plant trees in the front of the house. They were willow trees, and to this day that seems an odd choice for West Texas soil. My brother and I claimed a tree each as ours. His was to the right of the driveway, mine in the middle of the front yard. Curtis' tree never made it. Mine isn't there anymore.

I remember the first time I saw snow. It came one wintry night and dumped what seemed like several feet of the powder on the neighborhood. What great fun we had running with our dog in the backyard.

Our dog had a doghouse on the right side of the backyard. The doghouse was adjacent to the brick fence, and we built a ladder one summer that went over the fence to the top of the doghouse. Many wars were staged on that battlefield.

I remember our dusty backyard, and I remember stupidly parking my tricycle over an ant bed there one day. Boy, do I remember that and what happened.

I remember our neighbors but not their names. I remember my first day of grade school at Henderson Elementary, and my mother taking my picture as I stood in the front yard.

I remember staring at the sky on clear summer nights. Millions of stars shone back, and I remember dreams of a career as an astronaut.

I remember learning how to ride a bicycle at that house.

I remember everything, it seems, about that house at 4603 Erie Drive.

WHEN I returned to the Tall City last summer, I went by that house. It looked pretty much the same. There were cars in the driveway that indicated the current owner was involved in the news business, a coincidence that was intriguing, but against my mother's suggestion I did not go to the door, introduce myself and explain why I was interested in that house.

I regret that move, especially after learning Saturday that Gary Hopper lived there. The plane crash that tragically cut short the lives of eight humans, mostly fellow journalists, also took the life of Hopper, KOSA-TV's anchor and a man who seemed to love this place so much.

The coincidence that exists for me is that Hopper lived at my old house. I never met the man or anyone that perished in the tragedy, but I feel a kinship with the Hopper family, especially.

The house that represents so much life now has a pall cast over it, and if I could in any way ease the suffering of the families it would be a privilege. The life that marked my years in the house was certainly experienced by the Hopper family and the families of the other seven victims.

So the next time I drive by that house, my memories will be altered somewhat by this terrible, sad accident. But like my childhood recollections, the joy and happiness the eight crash victims accumulated in their short lives can never be tainted. If there is any consolation in the events of early Saturday morning, it is that the people that knew these men will revel in their fond memories.

And hopefully, as I hope I do, they will remember all the good things.

Basketball program arrives for Mustangs

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

Basketball at Midland Christian isn't a long established sport at the high school level. Nor is competition in a district the Mustangs can call their own. However, it is a sport they are enjoying and one they hope gains them a state championship for both boys and girls teams in the near future.

For the first time in their four-year high school basketball history (the younger classes have been playing for 15 years), the Mustangs will be competing in a district. Though it only consists of three teams, it's a district non-the-less. A tough one to boot.

"We have to go further to find schools to play," said Midland Christian boys head coach Dr. Harley Tefertiller, who also doubles as the school principal. "In fact, this is the first year we've been in a district."

The two schools with Midland Christian are Lubbock Christian and Abilene Christian.

"Lubbock Christian has been second five times in the state in the last eight years and Abilene Christian has won the TAPS (Texas Association of Private Schools) state championship three times in the last eight years. It's not a district made up of pansies. They've got established programs and they play that basketball."

This year the Mustangs look like they could give their two district foes some stiff competition, even stiffer once they return to full strength. A returning starter from last year's 10-16 team, Johnny Belcher, is out for six-to-eight weeks with an injury and he was the team's leading scorer with an 11.7 per game average.

"All our other starters averaged between seven and eight points," said Tefertiller. "Our scoring was balanced, there just wasn't enough of it. We only averaged 50 points a game."

Well, those other players are also back this year — Mark Carnes, Joe Gould, Byron Myers and Paul Thomason — and they have the addition of a Midland High transfer student to their roster, a player who can become a one-man scoring machine if the Mustangs don't watch out.

"Cary Wallace scored 43 points in our first game (against Garden City)," said Tefertiller. "I feel like the other kids played down because Cary was playing so well. Once we blend together I feel we'll be a very strong team. I feel we will adjust and a feel we have to."

Like all athletic programs, making the playoffs is a major goal of Midland Christian. And, those playoffs are slightly different than the form used by the UIL.

Eight teams are automatically in the Regional Tournament, held the second week in February. There are six district winners, two runnersup from the larger districts, and four at large teams chosen from best records.

The following week, the winners of the four regionals will meet at state in Abilene at Abilene Christian University's Moody Coliseum.

THE MIDLAND Christian girls are also aiming for the playoffs and are competing against the same two schools for a district title. However, though they have three returning starters from last year's 10-18 team, the Lady Mustangs are relying on youth to fill the remaining positions.

Seniors Lisa Crocker and Laura Wollard and junior Georgann Williams are the three experienced players. After that, the players get about as young as possible at the high school level: three sophomores and three freshmen.

"My two seniors, Laura Wollard at post and Lisa Crocker at point guard bringing the ball down court have been starters for three years," said coach Eddie Lee. Their experience plus a lot of heart is what he's counting on this year. "We don't have exceptional height or exceptional ability, but we play with everything we've got, good hard hustling basketball on offense and defense."

It paid off in their opening game. The Lady Mustangs posted a victory over Garden City and Lee said, "We had real good balanced scoring from the starters and that was the thing I was real pleased with."

Last year, despite the losing record, the Lady Mustangs were invited to compete in the Regional TAPS playoffs "because of the schools we play, mostly bigger public schools," said Lee. "We lost in the first round but just being invited was an honor. This year we're in a district so we're playing for a right to go."

Only three teams eliminated as NFL playoffs near

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

With three weekends remaining in the regular season, only three teams have been eliminated from the National Football League's playoff derby and only two have been guaranteed berths.

The Houston Oilers (1-12), Tampa Bay Buccaneers (2-11) and New York Giants (3-9-1) are assured of spending Christmas weekend at home, when the NFL holds its wild-card playoff round.

Philadelphia is the next-lowest team in the overall standings at 4-9. But that means the Eagles can — with victories over the Los Angeles Rams, New Orleans and St. Louis — finish at 7-9. And this year, the NFL says, with so many teams hovering around .500 this late in the season, 7-9 could mathematically (if not realistically) put a team in the playoffs.

On the other end of the scale are the Dallas Cowboys and Washington Redskins, each at 11-2 and the only teams assured of playoff berths.

The Cowboys rode in last week. The Redskins joined them Sunday with their 28-24 victory over Philadelphia. That broke a string of three seasons in which the defending Super Bowl champion (Pittsburgh, Oakland and San Francisco) failed to make the playoffs the following year.

Dallas and Washington occupy the National Conference East. They are a whopping 5½ games ahead of St. Louis. But the Cardinals, 5-7-1, still have a shot at the NFC's second wild card, as do the Eagles.

There was a time when the NFC Central was known as the Black-and-Blue Division. First, in the early 1970s, it was because of the bruising brand of cold-weather football in Minnesota, Detroit, Green Bay and Chicago. More recently, it's because non-division teams beat them so often that the NFC Central champ is routinely the best of a mediocre group.

This year, with parity taking hold so firmly, a few other divisions appear to have dropped down to the NFC Central standard. With three games to go, 14 teams — exactly half the league — are within one game of .500.

In fact, three entire divisions are hovering in that neighborhood.

One is the NFC Central, where Minnesota and Detroit (who face each other next Monday night) are each 7-6 and Green Bay and Chicago are each 6-7. It is likely nothing will be settled until the final weekend since each team has at least two games remaining against divisional rivals.

Three of the four teams in the NFC West are within a game of each other. The Rams' are 8-5 with San Francisco and New Orleans one game back at 7-6 apiece and Atlanta in the hunt at 6-7.

The AFC West is the only division with a clear-cut leader, the Los Angeles Raiders at 10-3, three games ahead of Denver and Seattle, each at 7-6.

But even the Raiders' record and lead aren't enough to absolutely guarantee them a playoff berth.

Here, compliments of Fran Connors, the AFC's director of information, is a scenario (albeit it a highly unlikely one) involving several levels of standings tie-breakers which could keep the Raiders out of the playoffs — just one scenario which suggests why it's best to wait another couple of weeks and let the standings sort themselves out:

— Miami wins two of its final four games and the Dolphins win the AFC East.

— Pittsburgh beats Cincinnati and Cleveland loses to Denver next Sunday, and the Steelers win the AFC Central.

— Cleveland wins its final two games, Denver wins its remaining three, Seattle also wins its remaining three and the Raiders lose their final three, thus leaving all four teams at 10-6. In that event, Seattle wins the AFC West because, in a round-robin tie-breaker:

(a) Seattle is 3-1, having beaten LA twice and split with Denver,

(b) the Raiders are 2-2, having swept Denver and lost two to Seattle, and

(c) Denver is 1-3, having split with Seattle and lost two to the Raiders.

With Seattle having clinched the division title, the scenario continues, that leaves Denver, Cleveland and the Raiders each at 10-6 and seeking the AFC's two wild-card playoff berths.

The first tie-breaking step, head-to-head records, doesn't apply since Cleveland didn't play the Raiders.

The next step is won-lost records within the conference. Denver, at 10-4, gets the first wild card, beating out Cleveland and LA, each at 8-4 within the conference.

That leaves the Browns and Raiders vying for the final wild card — and it goes to Cleveland because, on the next step, records against common opponents, Cleveland is 4-3 compared to LA's 4-4. Here's the breakdown of that step:

— against Cincinnati, Cleveland is 1-1, LA 1-0.

— against Houston, Cleveland is 2-0, LA 1-0.

— against San Diego, Cleveland is 1-0, LA 0-2.

— against Seattle, Cleveland is 0-1, LA 0-2.

— against Denver, Cleveland is 0-1, LA 2-0.

Marino-to-Duper leads Dolphin rout of Cincinnati

MIAMI (AP) — The redhot passing combination of Dan Marino to Mark Duper is setting the National Football League on fire and blazing the trail the Miami Dolphins are traveling toward the playoffs.

The Cincinnati Bengals are but the latest victims of the dynamic duo's destruction, yielding a pair of touchdowns to the tandem Monday night during a 38-14 loss to the defending American Conference champions.

"They've got my vote for the Pro Bowl," Bengals wide receiver Cris Collinsworth said of Marino and Duper. "We've been around the league now, and those guys are in a special class at their positions."

Marino, the AFC's passing efficiency leader, threw for 217 yards and three TDs as the 9-4 Dolphins took a two-game lead over Buffalo in the Eastern Division and moved to within a game of wrapping up the title.

Duper, who caught scoring passes of 7 and 15 yards, had five catches for 84 yards, allowing him to maintain a pace that would give him a 1,000-yard receiving season — the first in Dolphin history.

"They're the best defense I ever played against," said Duper, a second-year pro who moved into the starting lineup eight weeks ago. "They really punish you after you catch the ball. Half of my body was numb."

Marino, meanwhile, boosted his record as a starter to 6-2 and a victory over Houston next Sunday will clinch the division crown and send the Dolphins into the playoffs.

"You have to say Marino really kept his cool. He was able to move around and find his receivers," said Miami Coach Don Shula, who earlier in the day signed a new, multi-year contract to remain with the team he's guided to four Super Bowl appearances.

"It's been a good day," Shula added. "First the announcement, and to have that precede an effort like this would have to make you feel pretty proud."

The loss all but eliminated the 5-8 Bengals from the playoff picture, and Coach Forrest Gregg and players agreed they were their own worst enemy Monday night.

Cincinnati, which trailed 17-14 at halftime, lost two fumbles and quarterback Ken Anderson threw two interceptions, one that led to Marino's 3-yard, fourth-quarter touchdown toss to tight end Dan Johnson.

Anderson and Isaac Curtis teammed on an 80-yard scoring play in the second quarter, and the Bengal quarterback set up Pete Johnson's 1-yard plunge with a 48-yard completion to Collinsworth.

"Those two big plays were the biggest part of their offense the entire night," said Shula. "It was one great effort by our football team.

"The defense got the ball and the offense was able to take advantage of the field position and put points on the board," he added.

Gregg said errors were the key to the contest, played before an Orange Bowl sellout of 74,506.

"It gets down to this: you can't turn the ball over four times against a team as good as the Dolphins and expect to win," the Cincinnati coach said.

"We played well enough in the first half offensively, but frankly we didn't execute in the second," he added.

Anderson completed 23 of 36 passes for 342 yards and was sacked twice for 17 yards in losses.

The 13-year veteran said the Bengals were forced out of their game plan when the Dolphins extended their halftime lead.

As a result, Johnson, the Bengals leading rusher, was held to 44 yards on 15 carries.

Drew tops KC

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Kansas City Kings Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons, unhappy with the play of Larry Drew, recently sat his normally sharp-shooting guard down for a talk.

"I talked to him just to give him confidence. He was too concerned with setting things up, and because he wasn't shooting well, he began turning down shots," Fitzsimmons said.

The pep talk was effective. Drew, whose jump shots had been flat, was razor sharp Monday night, scoring 26 points, handing out a career-high 17 assists and collecting five steals as the Kings beat the Portland Trailblazers 113-104 in the only scheduled National Basketball Association game.

"Cotton told me I was coming down and waiting on things instead of just making things happen," said Drew, who led the Kings in scoring last season with a 20-point average, but who had dipped to an 18-point-per-game average this season.

Eddie Johnson, who scored 24 points for Kansas City, said he thought the return of reserve guard Mike Woodson, who missed 11 games because of knee surgery, had helped Drew.

Whatever the reason, nobody had to tell Johnson to shoot Monday night. He led a surge that made a 94-92 lead in the fourth quarter a 103-96 advantage, scoring four points, assisting on one basket and stealing a pass that led to another.

"He made the play," Woodson, who scored 19 points, said of Drew. "That's what we expect."

The Trailblazers jumped to a 4-0 lead, but the Kings then scored 10 unanswered points and never trailed again.

The Kings led by as many as 15 points in the third quarter, but Portland trimmed the lead to two points, 94-92, on a basket by Mychal Thompson midway through the fourth quarter.

Woodson answered with a basket and a free throw at the 5:37 mark to put the Kings on top 97-92. The Trailblazers, now 11-5, could get no closer than three points the rest of the way.

Thompson led Portland with 28 points and Darnell Valentine added 19.

The victory was the Kings' fifth in their last six games. The loss snapped Portland's three-game winning streak.

"This was by far our best game," Fitzsimmons said. "We played the hottest team in the NBA. They were playing super ball . . . Offensively we moved better. We got the ball to the open man."

"They executed very well," Ramsay said. "You have to be getting the shots when you shoot 68 percent like the Kings did in the first quarter."

The loss dropped Portland into second place in the NBA's Pacific Division, one-half game behind the idle Los Angeles Lakers.

Canucks, NY Rangers tie

NEW YORK (AP) — Knowing they were up against a better skating team, the Vancouver Canucks did what comes naturally for them: they hit and, when in doubt, they hit again.

The Canucks, known for their clutch-and-grab style, also did some skating of their own, controlling most of Monday's only National Hockey League game. But they needed a third-period goal by defenseman Garth Butcher — his first point of the season — to earn a 3-3 tie with the New York Rangers.

"Vancouver grinds and hits you every chance they get," said Rangers center Pierre Larouche, who scored a pretty goal in the second period. "They didn't want to skate with us so they hacked us and held us. That's their style. It's up to us to beat it."

The Rangers couldn't and now are 0-3-1 in their last four games, though the tie lifted them into a deadlock with the Islanders for first place in the Patrick Division. Vancouver hasn't won at Madison Square Garden in six years, going 0-0-2 in that stretch.

How to get telephones and how to get them repaired after the Bell System breaks up.

As the divestiture or breakup of the Bell System takes place, a lot of changes will also take place. Two major ones will affect telephones and repairs.

HOW TO GET TELEPHONES.

You can continue leasing your current phones and pay a monthly charge as you now do. Except your lease will be through AT&T Information Systems instead of Southwestern Bell Telephone. That means you'll see a separate leasing charge from AT&T Information Systems on your monthly bill from Southwestern Bell Telephone. We won't be leasing home telephones after divestiture. If you continue to lease, we'll handle the transfer, so you don't have to do anything.

WHERE TO GET TELEPHONES REPAIRED.

Beginning on the first of the year, Southwestern Bell Telephone will no longer repair leased telephones, AT&T will. We will continue to repair telephone lines at no charge, though. So when you have a problem, it's important to determine if the problem is in your phone or on our line. And there's an easy way to do it. Just check a different phone at your home. If neither works, the trouble is probably in the line, and you should call us for the repair.

If one phone works and the other doesn't, the problem is probably in the phone. And you should not call us. If you lease the phone or bought it from either AT&T Information Systems or Southwestern Bell Telephone, you should call AT&T Information Systems for repairs.

If you purchased your phone from another source other than Bell, the repair should be referred to the original manufacturer or retailer.

MORE INFORMATION.

If you have any questions about the breakup of the Bell System and how it will affect your service, call us toll-free at 1 800 555-5000. We'll be glad to answer them and send you a special information booklet, too.

Or, if you have specific questions about your service, please call your Southwestern Bell Telephone Business Office.

Perkins, Smith eat late; NC chews up Chattanooga

By The Associated Press

Sam Perkins and Kenny Smith, key operatives for No. 2 North Carolina's attack, were late for the team's pre-game meal and, consequently, were not in the starting lineup for their game against Tennessee-Chattanooga.

But Michael Jordan had a strong game with 28 points and Perkins came off the bench to add 16 as the Tar Heels broke open a close game early in the second half and ate up their visitors 85-63 Monday night.

North Carolina Coach Dean Smith, who won his 498th career game, disciplined Perkins and Smith for being five minutes late to the meal as Dave Popson started ahead of Perkins and Steve Hale replaced Jordan.

The Tar Heels, 2-0, led 33-30 at halftime before Tennessee-Chattanooga, the Southern Conference champions, surged ahead early in the second half. That's when North Carolina used a 14-2 streak to get out of trouble.

Brad Daugherty added 16 points for the Tar Heels, who had dropped from No. 1 to second behind Kentucky in the Associated Press poll released earlier in the day.

Only two other Top Twenty teams played Monday — 12th-ranked Louisiana State beat North Carolina-Wilmington 94-59 and No. 15 Boston College routed Stonehill 97-63.

Jordan said he felt slightly miffed that Moccassin defenders were talking to him during the game in an attempt to distract him.

"It got me angry and it gave me extra incentive," Jordan said. "I concentrated on executing the defense a lot harder."

Despite the loss, Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Murray Arnold saw some bright spots for his 1-1 team.

"I saw some pretty nice things I feel we can build on," Arnold said. "Before we came in here, I felt North Carolina was No. 1 in the country and I still feel that way.

"If we leave here tonight as a better team, then our time was well-invested," he said.

Jerry Reynolds scored 14 points and four other Louisiana State players were in double figures for the Tigers. Derrick Taylor and reserve Nikita Wilson each had 12 points as LSU, 2-0, scored the first eight points of the game and was ahead 39-21 at halftime.

Senior forward Jay Murphy, who underwent arthoscopic knee surgery three weeks ago, scored 17 of his 22 points in the first half to help Boston College win its season opener. Junior guard Michael Adams scored 17 of his 19 points in the first half as the Eagles raced to a 57-30 lead at intermission.

Kenneth Perkins had 17 points and Tom Sewell 13 as Lamar extended the nation's longest home-court winning streak to 69 games with a 78-57 triumph over St. Mary's of Texas.

Robert Morris College, which has reached the NCAA tournament the past two seasons, opened its season with an 86-63 victory over Lock Haven as Forest Grant scored 20 points. It was the Colonials' 22nd straight victory game at home.

Delaney Rudd hit for a game-high 18 points as Wake Forest started its season by breezing to a 74-59 victory over Furman.

Charles Barkley, an all-Southeastern Conference junior recovering from back injuries, played only 2½ minutes early in the second half but helped rally Auburn past Columbus College 58-54. Barkley scored just two points but blocked two shots during a streak in which Auburn scored 10 straight points to overcome a one-point halftime deficit.

Buck Johnson hit 27 points as Alabama downed Cincinnati 83-64.

Senior forward Art Aaron's 21 points paced Northwestern past Bradley 63-42. The game was the first for Northwestern in the Welsh-Ryan Arena at newly remodeled McGraw Hall.

Ron Tarpley scored 17 points and Leslie Rockymore had 16 as Michigan raced to a 15-3 lead and cruised to a 71-55 triumph over North Carolina A&T.

Reserve guard J.J. Crawl tallied 14 points to help West Virginia past Indiana, Pa., 73-46 in a sloppy game.

Fred Lee hit 10 of 13 shots from the floor and finished with 27 points, leading Rider over James Madison 76-68.

John Dixon and Al Young keyed a 15-point spree in the first half that carried Virginia Tech over Towson State 93-53. The winning Hokies hit 37 of 52 shots from the floor.

Freshman Bruce Dalrymple made his college debut by scoring 21 points and grabbing 17 rebounds as Georgia Tech downed Alabama A&M 95-75.

Junior guard Vernon Moore hit an eight-foot jump shot over three defenders with two seconds left to lift Creighton past Southern 57-55.

LaSalle guard Steve Black scored eight of his 23 points in the final eight minutes as the Explorers topped Monmouth 75-60.

Guard Terrence Stansbury stole a pass and scored on a breakaway dunk with just over a minute remaining to give Temple the lead, and he then blocked a last-second shot as the Owls held off Drexel 61-60.

Karl Racine scored 18 points, including eight-for-eight from the free throw line in the final three minutes, to lead Pennsylvania over Davidson 69-59.

Sophomore guard Kevin McAdoo, cousin of National Basketball Association star Bob McAdoo, scored four points in the final minute of overtime to help Detroit beat Grand Valley State 70-65.

James Stern scored seven points in the final 1:14 of the game as Baylor held off Tarleton State 64-57 and Ken Harvey had 18 points in Mississippi State's 47-40 victory over Birmingham Southern.

In upsets, Aniset Lavodrama scored 17 points to help Houston Baptist over Oklahoma State 75-65 and Ron Fleming sank two free throws with 10 seconds left in overtime to give Northern Kentucky a 61-59 victory over Evansville.

Mike Huffman had 15 points as Virginia Military Institute, which went 2-25 last year, opened its season by beating Emory & Henry 75-48.

Bulldogs blow out Big Spring

BIG SPRING— Midland High's boys varsity, fresh from winning the Tall City Invitational over the Thanksgiving weekend, remained in top form Monday as the Bulldogs routed Big Spring 74-48.

MHS, now 5-0, was lead once again by senior gunner Chris Rooker. Rooker, who saw limited duty in the second and final quarters, netted a game-high 18 points. He is MHS's leading scorer.

The Bulldogs opened a four-point lead after the first quarter, but similar to their season-opening, 107-56 win over the Steers the 'Dogs got rolling in the second quarter.

Despite Rooker's absence, the Bulldogs pounded Big Spring in the second quarter with a 26-11 surge. The resulting 44-25 halftime edge was more than enough to beat the Steers, now 0-5.

MHS' junior varsities and varsities return to action tonight. The girls' JV team takes on the Pecos JV's at 4 p.m. at MHS, followed by the boys junior varsity game against Plainview at 6 p.m.

In action at the Midland College Langford Chaparral Center, the MHS girls' varsity tests Pecos at 6:15, while the boys tip off against Plainview at 8:00.

Chaps claim eighth victory

THE CHAPS clamped the WTC offense in a defensive vise through the first seven minutes of the second half to take command 52-37, outscoring the Westerners 21-6 during a 10-minute span that started late in the first half.

"I thought we were going to have more trouble than we did," said Coach Jerry Stone. "I saw Western just the other night and they looked super."

Midland College also showed WTC something new by substituting in platoons. Stone changed teams every five minutes and it paid off after an uncertain start.

"It's the first time I've ever done it, but we came in from the Amarillo tournament at 3 a.m. Sunday, had a hard workout Sunday. I knew that we'd be tired," Stone explained. "Two results came out of it, one positive and one negative. It kept us fresh and gave me a chance to see everybody. That's positive. But, to tell the truth, I still don't know who my best seven or eight players are. That's negative. So far, they haven't asserted themselves."

THE CHAPS not only stayed fresh, but "came alive", as Jerry put it, in the second half.

The spurt that won it began late in the first half when Vernon Coleman converted a free throw to tie it at 31, then Jeff Hurd hit a 15-footer, 6-11 Teviin Binns drove the base line for a jumper, Essary fed Zeak Williams on a fast break and Jerald Wrightsil struck on another fast break for a 39-31 halftime lead.

Six-eight Mike Woolley opened the second half with a goal from under the iron, Wrightsil drove for another. Lawrence Chumbley made it 44-35 with a free throw and after Floyd Singleton's basket cut it to nine points for WTC, the Chaps ran off six unanswered points. Bert Cooper from the circle, Essary from the corner and Binns dunker did the damage.

WTC COULDN'T handle MC's big men, Binns and 6-5 Jackie Phinnessee inside in the second half. Phinnessee worked the lane for 12 of his 17 points and Binns had 10 of his 16 in the second half.

Singleton's 11 points were high for WTC while Larry Banks and Anthony Smith had 10 each.

MC's defensive tenacity is reflected in the 25 for 71 field goal shooting stats for WTC. MC hit 36 of 65.

The win lifts MC to 8-3, all the losses on the road, while WTC is 6-4 for the season.

CHAPSTYQUES—All three MC losses this year have been on the road, which is unusual..."Two years ago we lost three games all season and two of them successive home defeats," Stone pointed out. "We've been spoiled winning on the road, but this team will have more trouble winning on the road."...Trinidad, Colo.,; Snow, Utah; and Shelby State, Memphis, the three teams that beat MC, all were blessed with sophomores....Assisting WTC Coach Barry Evans is Dennis Spradling, who played for Nolan Richardson's WTC national champions a few years back and then went with Nolan to Tulsa...Stone looks for another tough test Thursday at Clarendon. "They led Hutchinson, Kan., by 20 and wound up beating them by 12. We'll have our hands full."...

Ponies, Baylor nab cage wins

By The Associated Press

Baylor and Southern Methodist managed to knock off pesky small-college teams as Southwest Conference basketball play entered its first full week.

Baylor, opening its season, committed 22 turnovers to nip Tarleton State 64-57 Monday night, and SMU shook off the disciplined Southwestern Pirates 90-71.

Texas Tech didn't get out of Lubbock Monday, postponing a game with Nebraska in Lincoln because of a blizzard that shut down air traffic in the Midwest.

The Red Raiders and Cornhuskers planned to try again tonight.

Also tonight, Baylor hosts Presbyterian, Rice visits Tulane, Texas A&M hosts Prairie View A&M and Southwestern goes to Texas Christian.

Southern Methodist forward Larry Davis pumped in 22 points and center Jon Koncak grabbed 17 rebounds for the Mustangs.

The victory raised SMU's record to 2-0. The Pirates fell to 3-3.

SMU led by only four points at halftime 36-32, but the Mustangs outscored the Georgetown, Texas, school 17-6 in the first six minutes of the second half for a 53-38 advantage.

Southwestern managed to close the gap to 11 points, 75-64, before the Mustangs put the game out of reach.

The Pirates, operating a patient offense and shooting mostly from the outside, were led by guard Andra Higgs, who scored 16 points. Jon Koncak also had 17 points for SMU.

Emergency oil law due to expire

By WILLIAM KRONHOLM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — With Congress still wrangling over government's role in emergency energy planning, major American oil companies are facing 1984 without guidelines to prepare for a possible cutoff of foreign oil imports.

An 8-year-old law allowing the oil companies, under government scrutiny, to share supply and price information for emergency planning expires Dec. 31. That will make oil companies vulnerable to antitrust laws if they attempt to continue the emergency preparedness program.

An extension of the law, granted almost routinely in past years, failed to pass before Congress recessed for the year because of a dispute over a rider calling for more centralized government control if supplies were disrupted.

A Senate Democrat threatened to block the bill without the rider; House Republicans refused to consider it with the rider.

Failure of the bill to pass does not mean the government is helpless to deal with shortages. But government planners say it would be difficult — and become even more difficult if shortages were aggravated or long-lived.

"Our examination so far indicates that it probably can be done," said a State Department official involved in the program, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

"You'll probably need a few more lawyers and have the government as an intermediary every step of the way. ... That would be very cumbersome, but if that's what it takes to make it work, you do what you have to do," he said.

The law involved is a limited antitrust exemption intended to allow oil companies to participate in the International Energy Agency, a Paris-based group intended to coordinate industrialized nations' response to a supply disruption such as the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

The agency collects supply information from member nations, including the United States, that would be used to share available oil supplies in the event of a disruption. Ordinarily, oil company executives would risk prosecution under antitrust laws for discussing joint actions. But the exemption allows them to meet, with government and public observers, to discuss such matters for the purpose of emergency planning.

The exemption has been extended periodically by Congress since it was first passed in 1975. This year, bills passed in the House and Senate to extend it to June 30, 1985. The extension was supported by the administration.

But Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, persuaded the Senate to accept a rider to its version of the bill requiring that the president have standby authority to control oil supply allocations. The Reagan administration has consistently opposed standby price and allocation schemes, saying it believed the free market could best handle supply disruptions.

Metzenbaum's proposal was supported reluctantly by Senate Republicans. But House Republicans balked, saying they wanted a simple extension and that Metzenbaum was attempting to turn the non-controversial measure into a political football.

AT&T, MCI poised for long-distance fight

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. and MCI Communications have selected the next battlefield in their war for long-distance phone calls — the nation's airports, bus stations, convention centers and hotel lobbies.

AT&T announced Monday it would soon start installing special "Card Caller" telephones and distributing new credit cards that would allow travelers to dispense with the hassle of punching in special codes or using an operator. More than 47 million of the new cards will be mailed free-of-charge in January to customers who now have a Bell System calling card, AT&T said.

The heavy plastic cards will be specially encoded, allowing customers to simply insert the card in the new phones to automatically bill their local number.

MCI, which operates the nation's second-largest long-distance network, immediately responded with an announcement of its own — it will begin installing special "card-reading" telephones next week tied to the MCI network that will accept MasterCard and Visa.

"There are about 120 million holders of MasterCard and Visa and they'll be able to call anywhere in the continental United States and Hawaii from these phones using those cards," said MCI spokesman Gary Tobin. "They won't have to be MCI subscribers."

Both companies said they had been moving toward credit-card phones for some time and claimed the other was merely an imitator. Both agreed, however, they would now have to fight for "shelf space" for their new phones.

Of the two systems, AT&T's is the most advanced from an equipment standpoint. Its new "Card Caller" phone features a small, built-in computer and a video screen to display instructions and the number that's being dialed. While AT&T executives refused to discuss such possibilities Monday, they agreed their new phones have the capability for more futuristic uses, such as displaying "electronic mail" or directory information.

The AT&T phone can also be used regardless of whether a traveler is placing a local call or a long-distance call because AT&T will be paying the Bell companies to handle billing services.

Sohio's Mukluk TD 7,360

HOUSTON (SWN) — Sohio Petroleum Company, the wholly-owned exploration and production subsidiary of The Standard Oil Company (Ohio), reported Monday exploratory drilling at Mukluk Island has reached a depth of 7,360 feet.

Sohio also indicated that as of November 25, a third logging run had been completed and 9-5/8 inch casing had been set to 7,353 feet.

The Mukluk No. 1 well, which is operated by Sohio, began drilling on November 1. The well is located 65 miles northwest of Prudhoe Bay on Mukluk Island, a man-made gravel island in the Harrison Bay area of the Alaskan Beaufort Sea.

AUCTION
Pagosa Springs, Colorado

10 luxury lakefront townhome condominiums to be offered individually on the premises.
12 noon, December 10th.

These 3-bedroom luxury townhomes are nestled below the grandeur of the San Juan Mountains, along the shore of Hatcher Lake. Wood-burning fireplaces, designer carpeting, custom cabinetry, aspen paneling, fully-equipped electric kitchens, relaxing patios and balconies — plus many more quality features — are found in these dramatic homes. The adjoining San Juan National Forest offers great four-season recreation opportunities and Wolf Creek Ski Area is only a short drive away.

Each residence will be auctioned individually. In addition a ¾ acre building site zoned for 12 residences will be auctioned.

Open daily for inspection 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. The Auction Information Office is at the site, Unit 115, Building No. 3.

EXCEPTIONALLY ATTRACTIVE FINANCING IS AVAILABLE FOR QUALIFIED BUYERS.

A unique opportunity to own a home at substantially below-market prices. Examples:

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks were mixed through morning trading today but the Dow Jones industrial average rebounded from its loss in the previous session.

Steel and drug issues paced the gainers. Auto, utility and mining stocks retreated.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 7.62 Monday for its biggest drop in three weeks, recovered 6.40 to 1,276.22 in the first two hours of trading today.

Gainers held a slight edge over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, where the composite index rose 0.09 to 96.28. Big Board volume totaled 43.50 million shares against 34.76 million at noon EST Monday. The American Stock Exchange index rose 0.95 to 223.65.

BUSINESS MIRROR

Cost-cutting questions cut

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Whatever may be the eventual fate of the Grace committee's report on cutting government costs, it has laid to rest at least two questions that have always plagued cost-cutters:

How and where.

In view of 41 reports having been issued containing 2,287 recommendations that have the potential for cutting $365.3 billion in three years, how can the two questions be seriously posed any more?

They will be, of course, because it is almost a matter of theology now that there is no room to cut the budget, 75 percent of it being foreordained by legal commitments and much of the remainder being for defense or social needs.

But now, at least, there is ammunition to counter the contention that there is no room in the budget for cuts.

Consider these suggestions from the commission, formally called the President's Private Sector Survey on Cost Control:

—A $12 billion savings over a three-year period by improving the strategic planning of research and development by bringing R&D up to private-sector standards, which it lags by five to 10 years.

—A three-year savings of more than $3.4 billion by having the Defense Department buy more supplies from dual sources rather than from just one company.

—A savings of at least $13.2 billion in three years through improved management of military inventories and by having the military use common parts and standards.

—A potential savings of $28.4 bilion in three years by transferring a variety of government operations to private contractors.

Nobody, including J. Peter Grace, survey chairman and chairman also of W.R. Grace & Co., expects it will be easy to implement the recommendations, which are the work of 161 corporate chief executives and 1,300 volunteers.

For one thing, nearly 60 percent of the recommendations require action by Congress, which hasn't been a particularly enthusiastic supporter of cuts in the past. For another, some cuts won't win the approval of all taxpayers.

Labor, for example, might object to eliminating the Davis-Bacon Act, which requires contractors to pay workers on federal projects the local areas's "prevailing wage." The purpose was to discorage contractors from importing low-cost labor. The result, says the survey, is $1 billion a year of waste.

But, J. Peter Grace suggests, in so many recommendations there are bound to be cuts acceptable to the majority of people. In fact, he points out that some recommendations already have been implemented.

Among them:

—A new cash management plan that might save as much as $4.7 billion on the fiscal 1985 budget.

—A reduction of 1,200 federal employees from the Department of Health and Human Services, with an estimated $172 million in savings over three years.

—A decision by the Department of Education to get serious with non-payers of student loans, with the initial focus on 41,000 current or retired federal employees who owe more than $65 million.

A small begining, but more cuts seem inevitable. The suggestions, Grace says, are "ageless." If not acted upon immediately they don't lose value. Nor must they be implemented in full; a bit at a time is still progress.

The recommendations are now down on paper, and the final report is scheduled for next month.

There's no way to cut the budget? Well, here are 2,287 specific options for cutting, with details on how and where.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Can I choose redemption?

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I am within two years of age 70½, when I will have to start taking withdrawals from my individual retirement account. My IRA is in an income mutual fund, which invests in bonds. Because bond prices are lower than when I started my IRA, the value of this fund's shares are down. However, I get one benefit. My monthly income reinvestment buys more full and fractional fund shares.

This temporary benefit might disappear after I have to start my IRA withdrawals, when who knows what interest rates will be. Am I really stuck? Or, is there some way for me to choose — with wisdom — when I would like some of my fund shares redeemed?

Doyle

A. Under IRA rules, you must start making withdrawals by December 31 of the year in which you reach 70½ — not on the day you reach that age. Withdrawals must be made at a rate so that all the money is taken out of the IRA over your life expectancy.

Because no one has what would have to be called the infinite wisdom of knowing exactly what day of the year is the very best for redeeming mutual fund shares, or selling stocks, bonds or anything else, it's wise to delay your IRA withdrawals until December 31 of every year. That way, your investment will continue to earn tax-sheltered income for you as long as the rules allow.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Gulf®

YOUR CHOICE, YOUR VOICE, YOUR VOTE.

We are gratified by the overwhelming support we have received from our shareholders and our employees. We appreciate your confidence in us.

For those of you who haven't voted yet, please remember that we must receive your proxy by this Friday, December 2. This is a crucial vote for all Gulf shareholders. Your vote is vital. It gives you an opportunity to help enable your Company to continue in the sound strategic direction that Gulf has been pursuing—a strategy that has led to 10 consecutive years of increases in dividend payments.

You have a choice, a voice, and a vote. But you must act quickly.

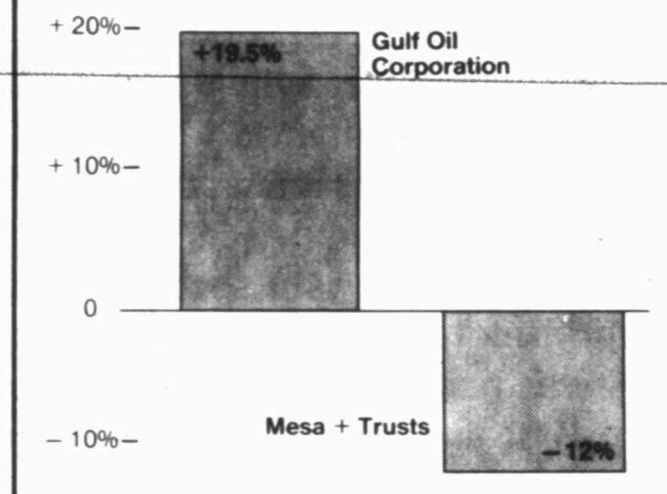

In this proxy contest, the Mesa Group—headed by T. Boone Pickens, Jr.,—has sought to convince you that their interests are the same as yours. We don't believe it.

Remember what Mr. Pickens said as recently as October 19... after his group had bought a substantial number of Gulf shares... "I just work for one crowd; that's the Mesa stockholder."

Let's look at the recent record—ours and theirs.

The chart that follows shows the total return on Gulf stock from the time I became Gulf's chairman (December 1, 1981) until the Pickens Group began purchasing our stock. Gulf's total return is up approximately 19.5%; Mesa's total return (including both royalty trusts) is down approximately 12%.

TOTAL RETURN ON INVESTMENT*
(12/1/81—8/10/83)

*Price appreciation plus dividends plus trust distributions to a person who purchased on December 1, 1981 one share of Gulf stock or four shares of Mesa stock and one share of Mesa Royalty Trust (equivalent to one share of Mesa prior to the distribution of the Mesa Royalty Trust) at the closing price on November 30, 1981.

IF YOU DON'T VOTE, IT'S THE SAME AS A VOTE AGAINST.

We believe our solid record of accomplishment deserves your support and your vote FOR management's proposal. But you must also know that abstaining from voting is the same as voting against the proposal, since approval requires that more than 50 percent of the company's outstanding shares be voted for it.

EVERY VOTE COUNTS

Your latest dated proxy is the only one that counts. Even if you have previously signed a Blue opposition proxy, you can still change your mind.

Please express your support of Gulf's proposal by signing, dating, and mailing the WHITE proxy card. And please do it now. While you still have a choice. And a voice. And a vote.

Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer

IMPORTANT

Because time is so short before the December 2 Special Meeting, we have arranged for you to vote, if you wish, by sending a Datagram. The procedure is simple and costs you nothing:

1. Call Western Union toll-free 1-800-325-6000 any time day or night (in Missouri only, dial 1-800-342-6700)
2. Tell the operator you want to send a prepaid Datagram charged to I.D. #F7082
3. The operator will have a complete copy of the WHITE management proxy card. Please tell the operator:
   I want to vote all my Gulf shares FOR the proposed reorganization.
4. Give the operator your name, address and telephone number. If you are not a record owner, tell the operator your authority to send the proxy.
5. Western Union will then send a Datagram to Gulf reflecting your vote.

If your shares are registered in "street-name" with your brokerage firm or bank, only they may vote your shares, and only upon receipt of your specific instructions. To ensure that your shares will be voted, please instruct the party responsible for your account to execute a WHITE proxy on your behalf immediately.

If you have any questions or need assistance in voting your shares registered in broker name, you are encouraged to call D. F. King & Co., Inc. at (212) 269-5550 in New York, (312) 236-5881 in Chicago, or (415) 788-1119 in San Francisco. Please call collect.

If you have any questions or need assistance in voting your shares registered in bank or nominee name, you are encouraged to call Georgeson & Co. Inc. at (212) 440-9800 in New York. Please call collect.

Gulf has also established the following toll-free numbers: 1-800-255-4853, and for Pennsylvania residents only 1-800-222-2152. If you cannot get through on the toll-free lines, we encourage you to call collect on the D. F. King & Co., Inc. and Georgeson & Co. Inc. telephone numbers.

GULF INVESTORS GROUP

116 John Street, 26th Floor
New York, New York 10038

Dear Fellow Gulf Shareholder:

During this proxy contest, we have urged you to join us in opposing Gulf management's reincorporation proposal. In our opinion, the proposal is a defensive reaction to our investment in Gulf stock.

We believe that if the reincorporation proposal passes, Gulf Oil will become a much less attractive investment, and the price of Gulf stock will decline.

Despite their numerous ads and letters, Gulf management has never once addressed what we believe to be the true issue in this proxy contest: How can the reincorporation proposal, with its elimination of important shareholder rights, possibly benefit Gulf shareholders?

Instead, Gulf management has attempted to divert your attention with personal attacks on members of the Gulf Investors Group. The members of the Group are experienced, successful businessmen who have committed over $1 billion to this investment. Each of us has the same objective that you have—to realize significant appreciation in the value of our Gulf investments.

In the event you are not familiar with Mesa Petroleum Co., we offer the following information: Mesa, started less than 20 years ago, has grown to over $2 billion in total assets and has a stock market value of about $1 billion. T. Boone Pickens, Jr., founder and Chairman of Mesa, has built a solid reputation as a successful oil finder and chief executive officer during more than three decades in the oil and gas industry. Mr. Pickens was named the Best Chief Executive in the Oil Producers Industry in 1981 and 1982 by The Wall Street Transcript.

We believe Gulf management scores no points by attacking Mesa Petroleum and the co-investors.

Vote on the issues. Do not let management take away your shareholder rights. Vote against management's reincorporation proposal.

Thank you.

Gulf Investors Group

YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR VOTE

Even if you have already voted for the reincorporation proposal, you have every legal right to change your mind and vote AGAINST on a later dated BLUE proxy card. Since time is short, please mail your proxy today in the envelope that has been provided to you. If you are concerned that your vote may not be received in time for the December 2 meeting, please call our proxy solicitor for immediate assistance.

Officers trying to increase animal cruelty prosecutions

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

They got a tip that the man had moved his greyhounds and coonhounds to a building on the south side of town. The Midland Animal Control officers had been chasing him down for months, but he kept moving the dogs around to different locations.

There were several dogs crammed into the filthy building — they were sick, scrawny and sluggish. The one lying in the corner apparently had been shot accidently during a hunting incident some time ago. The pellets that had been sprayed up and down his leg had not been removed.

The wounds were badly infected — the leg swollen three times its normal size.

The animal control officers were forced to put the dog to sleep.

When they were told about the woman with the dozens of unvaccinated cats, they called her and told her they would be confiscated. Asking for her cooperation, they requested the animals be confined so they could be rounded up more easily.

When they arrived, the cats had been hog-tied and dumped into burlap bags.

"We can go out on a call and not really know what's going to be there," Dalton Byerly, animal control director, said. "Sometimes we can just look at each other and say, 'Oh, my God, look what's there.' "

Whether it is the family that has left a dog with inadequate supplies of food, water and shelter while they went on summer vacation, or the older couple whose cute puppy had grown out of it's collar, the raw, oozing flesh around it's neck never having a chance to heal, the term "cruelty" applies. At least as far as the animal control department is concerned.

"Sometimes, if we come up on a situation that's awful, we forget people don't realize what they've done," Rice Freeman Zachary, animal control public information officer, said.

"Ignorance borders on neglect," Byerly said. "Cruelty is anything that causes pain, mental anguish, stress or scares the hell out of an animal."

Educating the public on laws concerning treatment of animals is the main priority of the animal control officers, Ms. Zachary said. But prosecution is moving up on the list.

Recently, animal control officers Debbie Hill, Karen Hoffman and Lisa Ferguson accompanied animal technician Patti Armstrong to a week-long seminar at Texas A&M University on prosecuting cruelty cases. Sponsored by the Texas Animal Rescue League, obtaining statements and seizure warrants and fostering cooperation with law enforcement officers, veterinarians, the public and media were emphasized.

"You need good witnesses and good information from them," Ms. Armstrong said. "You need witnesses that are willing to testify in court, which is a big problem. Many people aren't willing to get involved. You need people that can memorize the license number or description of a car that is dumping animals."

And that can make or break the case, Ms. Zachary said: "The backbone of any cruelty case is a reliable and willing witness."

Jeanette Probandt of the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Inc., agreed.

"People don't want to be involved," she said. "They want us to do whatever is necessary. We can work with them, but we can't do it alone. The individual is the one that actually witnessed it. The SPCA didn't."

The humane society works closely with the animal control, relaying all calls to the city department. Byerly often accompanies the SPCA investigators and the sheriff's office cooperates in the investigations of county cases.

At the animal control shelter, 10-20 animals a day are brought in and 20-30 runs are made every day, according to Ms. Zachery. Anywhere from 50-70 calls are received and 25-35 people come in each day.

"Our dealings on a day to day basis have more to do with people contacts than animal contacts," Byerly said. The phone calls and personal visits are the only way the animal control can properly operate.

Persons guilty of cruelty to animals may be jailed, fined

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

When the Midland Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, Inc., receives a complaint of animal abuse or neglect, the owners of the animal are sent a letter outlining cruelty to animal offenses.

Section 42:11 of the Texas Penal Code states a person commits an offense if he intentionally or knowingly does the following:

— Tortures or seriously overworks an animal;

— Fails unreasonably to provide necessary food, care or shelter for an animal in his custody;

— Abandons unreasonably an animal in his custody;

— Transports or confines an animal in a cruel manner;

— Kills, injures or administers poison to an animal belonging to another without legal authority or the owner's effective consent;

— Causes one animal to fight another.

Persons convicted of such crimes, considered Class A misdemeanors, may be punished with a fine of up to $2,000 and/or a jail sentence of up to one year.

Those who witness any of the above incidents are urged to contact the SPCA at 684-7582, or the City of Midland Department of Animal Control at 683-4281 or 683-2941. All calls are confidential although persons should leave their names and telephone numbers in case the investigators need further information or the violators are taken to court.

Animal control officers urge that the calls be placed immediately. If an animal's life is in danger, time is essential.

According to Dalton Byerly, director of the Midland Animal Control Shelter, the law provides some leeway in prosecuting cases of cruelty.

If one person says he is going to kill a neighbor's dog because of its bothersome barking and witnesses heard the threat, that person could be legally prosecuted if something happens to the dog. "It's called probable cause," he said.

City ordinances require the following:

— All dogs and cats must be vaccinated against rabies once each year. At that time, the animal will receive a city license for $3 in addition to the fee for the vaccination.

— Dogs and cats must wear the current license and vaccination tags at all times.

— Dogs must be restricted behind a fence from which they cannot escape, on a chain, leash or in a building. Cats must not be allowed to become a nuisance to one's neighbors.

— No one is allowed to keep more than four dogs without first obtaining a kennel license.

— It is illegal to cruelly mistreat any animal.

— It is illegal to enter any city park with a dog unless that dog is on a leash not to exceed six feet in length. Training permits are available for some city parks.

— It is illegal to keep a vicious dog inside the city limits.

Ector County plans 1983-84 budget cuts

By LAWRENCE BUDD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Ector County Commissioners emerged from nearly three hours in executive session Monday afternoon with a plan that will cut more than $1.86 million from their $24 million budget.

These amendments to the 1983-84 budget — which mean 46 people will be dropped from the county's 525-person payroll — do not reflect nearly $900,000 that would still need to be pared in the aftermath of a successful rollback election. The hope of county officials is that these cuts would otherwise allow Ector County to finish the current fiscal year without any deficit spending and replenish reserve funds.

A capacity crowd, made up largely of anxious department heads, listened as County Judge Jan Fisher read off the cutbacks that touch most of the county's departments — especially services county officials pointed out are not usually funded by counties, such as park systems, animal control and cemeteries.

Emphasis was put on the fact that the impact of tax bill increases could be attributed to the reappraisal of property values done by the Central Appaisal District in its first year in Ector County. Because much of the property nad not been re-evaluated for several years and was appraised at 100 percent of its real value this year, many homeowners' property values doubled.

When questioned on why Midland County was not in a similar situation, County Auditor Dan Ramirez pointed to past financial practices of Ector County and the fact that Midland County does not support the broad spectrum of services offered in Ector. During the past year, the county has paid cash for property near the courthouse and construction of an annex, using up much of the county's available surplus.

Ramirez warned the court in June 1982 that some action was needed to be taken to enable them to end the year without a deficit.

Pointing to past problems with financial management, Ramirez explained "you adopt a tax rate to support your budget or you set a budget that will fit your tax rate."

Other changes included closing a county pool to save $200,000, dropping $55,000 earmarked for runway and groundskeeping at the airport and a freeze in scheduled step increases in wages for county employees until 1985.

"What we have done today will help, if not come close to curing, a situation we've had all along," said Ms. Fisher.

Another point raised by the court was the lower percentage of the total tax revenue produced by oil companies, due to the depression in the industry and the fact that these entities did not experience the percentage increase in valuation since they have been appraised annually.

Mike Holden, manager of data processing, estimated that the property owner would only receive about 50 percent of the $900,000 that would be saved by taxpayers if the rollback movement succeeds.

An election would cost approximately $15,000. Other costs the county would incur include retabulating the entire tax roll and an estimated $8,850 in postage for tax statements and refund checks.

Holden quoted figures indicating that the 6,328 people with $30,000-$40,000 homes in the county figured to save $6 if the tax rate was rolled back to comply with the Property Tax Code created by the Peveto Bill in 1979. No taxpayer with a valuation of less than $70,000 would save as much as $10, according to these calculations.

"If the rollback is successful, we'll have to sit down again and go through the finances of the county," said Ramirez. Because many cuts have already been made in departments, the county will be hard pressed to find another $900,000.

Study: Effluent has negative effect on draw

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A consulting geologist with a Midland firm testified Monday at the Texas Water Commission on data gathering methods used to prepare a study on the effects of effluent from the South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant and the East Water Reclamation Plant in Odessa.

The study was prepared at the request of the Midland County Commissioners Court in early 1981, said Earl Mouton, geologist with Ed L. Reed and Associates, Inc. of Midland.

"I did 97 percent to 98 percent of the field work on the study," said Mouton, who noted the study concluded effluent from Odessa has a negative effect on the groundwater along Monahans Draw. The report was published in June 1981, he added.

Monahans Draw, which primarily runs east-west, bisects Midland County "almost in half," said Mouton.

Midland attorney Ted Kerr, who represents Midland County, said he will put on at least three more witnesses, two hydrologists with Ed L. Reed and Associates and a chemist with an independent Midland firm.

The city of Midland plans to present at least two witnesses, the city utilities director and planning and zoning director, according to David Reagan, first assistant city attorney for Midland.

Attorneys said they hoped the hearing on the renewal of two waste discharge permits for the city of Odessa would conclude by Friday.

Under the current permits, effluent from the plants is discharged into Monahans Draw, then to Johnson's Draw, Mustang Creek, Beal's Creek and finally into the Colorado River.

The South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant has an average daily discharge of 9.8 million gallons per day, and the East Water Reclamation Plant has an average daily discharge of 5.22 million gallons per day, the Texas Department of Water Resources reports.

Judge rules government didn't prove case against chopper

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

The three-place Hiller helicopter which the federal government confiscated and took to court after alleging the "chopper" was used illegally in the airborne hunting of wildlife has been restored to its Midland owners.

U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled that the government did not prove its case against the helicopter, owned by Charles Koonce and Phillip Stroud, partners in the Koonce & Stroud (K&S) Land Co.

"Well, it finally worked out for us," Koonce said Monday. "It was sure making me nervous. I know it (the seizure of the helicopter) wasn't right, and I'm glad the ol' judge saw it our way."

His partner, Stroud, termed the government's investigation into airborne hunting and resultant prosecution as "frivolous" and a "travesty...of justice."

The government claimed the helicopter was subject to forfeiture, since it allegedly had been used in "alleged violations of the (U.S.) Airborne Hunting Act" even before Koonce and Stroud paid J.C. Short, former owner of the helicopter, $100,000 for the aircraft through their K&S Land Co. in February 1982.

However, the government did not prove to the satisfaction of the judge that the K&S helicopter, a 1976 Hiller UH12E, was the same one used in illegal airborne hunts and flown by Short, 35. Short, the judge noted from previous testimony, owned several helicopters and "apparently functioned on an informal basis as a helicopter 'dealer.' "

Koonce and Stroud purchased the helicopter to better show prospective buyers large tracts of land, they said.

"THE FATE of this aircraft has been up in the air pending completion of criminal prosecution against its human accomplices," the judge said in his ruling.

As a result of the state and federal governments' investigation into illegal airborne hunting, four men were convicted, three pleaded guilty and a total of $47,500 in fines was assessed against the seven defendants.

Prosecuted were:

—Steve Dudley Quain, 40, and Frankie Keller, 30, were convicted by jury of violating U.S. Customs laws by smuggling bears they had killed from an airborne helicopter, flown by Short, across the Mexico-Texas border in June 1981. Each was sentenced to 179 days in prison and fined $6,000. Quain and Keller are serving their sentences in the Federal Prison Camp at Big Spring.

—J.C. Short was convicted by jury of flying trophy hunters in the pursuit of wildlife, such as eagles, bear, Barbaro sheep, and deer for fees up to $5,000 per hunt. Short, convicted of conspiracy to violate the Lacey Act via airborne hunting, of the violation and of violating the Bald Eagle Protection, was sentenced to 1½ years in prison, was fined $20,000, and was forbidden from flying "any aircraft" or hunting until he has served a five-year probation, which is to follow his prison term. That case is on appeal.

—Larry Todd, 30, the alleged "promoter" in the airborne hunts, was convicted by jury of conspiracy. He was sentenced to one year in prison and was fined $10,000. That case, too, is on appeal.

—Lee Bell, 29, and Mike Nickell, 23, pleaded guilty to airborne hunting from a helicopter flown by Short in January 1982, and each was placed on probation for five years. In addition, Bell was fined $3,000 and Nickell, $2,000.

—Karl Brosig, 26, a taxidermist, pleaded guilty to mounting game killed in violation of the Airborne Hunting Act. He was fined $500 and was placed on probation for two years.

IN CONSIDERING the fate of the helicopter, Judge Bunton recounted the evidence, which included Short's flying the helicopter, carrying 14 freshly killed coyotes, in the Pecos area in December 1981. However there was no evidence that Short or his passenger, Tim Bates, was hunting from the air. At that time, Short's permit to kill predators from an airborne craft had expired.

"There was no evidence, however," the judge said in his opinion, "to show whether the coyotes had been taken from the air or whether the helicopter was merely being used to transport animals shot on the ground."

No law prohibits the shooting of predators, such as coyotes, from the ground.

Futhermore, neither Bell nor Nickell could verify the registration number (N506-HA) of the helicopter they flew in and could not say if it was the same craft owned by K&S Land Co.

In another incident involving airborne coyote hunting, a photograph tendered by the government failed to prove it depicted the same helicopter owned by K&S.

Journalists gifted with ability to work in face of tragedy

We buried a part of our family Monday.

More than 400 people turned out for the services of KOSA anchorman Gary Hopper and his brother-in-law Jay Price. Brian Wood from Channel 2, seriously injured in an automobile accident last week and just released from the hospital, arrived on crutches.

Gary's former co-workers Harry Dean and Eric Scholl flew in from Oklahoma. Dozens came from Odessa and still others, unable to attend because news has no regard for personal desires, were there in spirit. For some it was their fourth service in one day.

Family.

I don't know if anyone outside the business can appreciate the shock and sense of loss that rippled though the entire journalistic community this week. And I doubt many can understand our grief, because our reaction is so different from the norm.

We deal with death and suffering on a daily basis. We even, at times, may make a cynical, morbid wisecrack about it.

It's not that we don't feel and don't care. In this business you can't wear your heart on your sleeve, you can't react "normally" to every tragedy, and survive.

So we push reality to the back of our minds and simply deal with the facts. (They aren't the same thing.) We take notes, ask questions, shoot pictures, verify information. We have a job to do and, somehow, we do it — even though our stomachs are in knots.

It's not until we reach the safety and privacy of our cars, homes or offices that we start shaking and the tears come.

I'm sure many wondered how — how Conrad Coleman could shoot video and interview witnesses while identifying the charred bodies of his co-workers. How the Channel 7 news team could go on the air and, nearly, treat it like any other news story. How the other media could take photos and jot down notes...in short, how we function in the face of tragedy.

I'm not sure I know how. But humans have a tremendous capacity for doing the impossible because it has to be done.

We do it, not just because it's our job, not just because it keeps our hands busy so our minds can go blank, not just because of a sense of duty. In this case, our work was also a tribute to those who died working at something they believed in. "I'm doing the job Gary trained me to do," Coleman summed up that night.

So we withdraw, put up walls, focus on the trivial and the routine. And somehow we get through it. But we're not left unscarred. In a way, I think the wounds run even deeper because we carry on as if they are superficial. We don't have the automatic, healthy release of grief. We stifle our pain, and it seems to do more damage. It's not the clean cut of a blade but the invisible destruction of a cancer.

And to make it worse, others tend to view us as callous, unfeeling, indifferent. And we begin to wonder ourselves if it's true.

All I know is we journalists are different, and yet the same. "If you prick us do we not bleed?"

When you have ink in your blood you may bleed differently, but you still bleed.

Rhonda Rigenhagen is a staff writer for the Reporter-Telegram.

Watkins died Saturday at an Odessa hospital.

He was born June 13, 1924, in Carthage, Miss., and had been a resident of Odessa for the past 10 years. He married Lois Irene Thornton April 17, 1943, in Meredian, Miss. He was the owner and operator of H.G. Watkins Trucking Co. He was an Army veteran of World War II and belonged to the Sprayberry Masonic Lodge 1365.

Other survivors include his wife, a son, two brothers, a sister and four grandchildren.

Nora Martin

WICHITA FALLS — Graveside services for Nora K. Martin, 82, of Wichita Falls and formerly of Midland, will be at 1 p.m. Wednesday at Resthaven Memorial Park in Midland with the Rev. J.B. Stewart, of the First Methodist Church, officiating. Services will be directed by Hampton-Vaughan Funeral Home of Wichita Falls.

Mrs. Martin died Monday in a Wichita Falls nursing home.

She was born July 28, 1901, in Grannis, Ark. She lived in Midland for 15 years, before moving to Wichita Falls, where she lived for a little more than 10 years. She was a housewife.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. J.W. Prentice of Wichita Falls; a sister, Mrs. W.A. Farris of North Hollywood, Calif.; two grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Petra S. Ortega

FORT STOCKTON — Services for Petra S. Ortega, 70, of Fort Stockton, sister of Frances Ramirez of Midland, were to be at 10 a.m. today at St. Joseph Catholic Church with the Rev. Paul Osterle officiating. Burial will be in St. Joseph Cemetery, directed by Fort Stockton Funeral Home.

Mrs. Ortega died Sunday at a Fort Stockton hospital.

She was born Jan. 31, 1913, in Fort Stockton. She was a lifelong resident of Fort Stockton and attended St. Joseph Catholic Church. She belonged to Guadalupanes, Apostolado de Jesus, Cursillista and the charismatic movement.

Survivors include her husband, a daughter, two other sisters, six grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Donel DeBerry

Graveside services for Donel D. DeBerry, 67, of 2306 Castleford, were to be at 11 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Ben Walker, pastor of Fannin-Terrace Baptist Church, officiating, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

DeBerry died Sunday at a Midland hospital following a lengthy illness.

Pallbearers were to be Charles Wolle, H.M. Walters, Gary Kern, James Donnell, Randy Bredemeyer and Herb Cooley.

The family requests memorials be directed to Hospice of Midland, P.O. Box 2621, Midland, Texas 79702.

Judge restores chopper to owners

Bunton said he would have "little trouble" accepting the government's contention that the K&S helicopter was the same one used in the airborne hunts were it not for testimony which indicated Short owned several helicopters and frequently he changed their colors.

IN HIS DECISION, Bunton noted that the government has invested "much time and effort investigating airborne hunting" in West Texas and federal and state wildlife agents involved in the probe are to be "commended for their diligent efforts in enforcing the laws against airborne hunting, laws which apparently were being violated with impunity."

"From the court's involvement with the various cases, it appears that a number of the people touched by this investigation felt that a lack of enforcement in the past meant that the laws carried little weight, or that they had no cause to worry about prosecution."

"Aerial hunting is, however, a serious offense: it is neither sporting nor a trivial matter," the judge wrote. "To pick out a trophy animal and shoot it from above, or run it until it drops, is a deplorable act."

In addition, Bunton wrote that the "government's investigation and prosecution has been...impressive enough to convince anyone that the Airborne Hunting Act is a statute to be reckoned with."

The judge noted the punishment, including $47,500 in fines, meted out in the cases.

"For the government to now seek forfeiture of a helicopter worth $82,000 could easily be interpreted as disproportionate."

THOUGH THEIR helicopter was seized in November 1982 by agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Koonce and Stroud got their aircraft later that month by posting an $82,000 surety bond.

"They (government agents) thought if they held that over our head, they would smoke us out," Koonce said Monday night. "Really, there was nothing for us to tell. It was just a bunch of bull. The ol' judge saw it our way, and I'm tickled."

Stroud, who had spent 21 days in jail for contempt of court for refusing to testify before a grand jury during its probe into illegal airborne hunting, said the seizure of the aircraft amount to "quasi-prosecution" of him and his business partner.

"If I testified, I not only would have given my friends up, I would have to give them (the government) information they could use to keep my helicopter," Stroud said, and later allowed: "They want the helicopter? Fine. I'll buy another."

"I think they were pretty well satisfied that we didn't have anything to do with the (airborne) killings of wildlife," he said. "When we refused to co-operate, they (the agents) seized the helicopter...They admitted we didn't have much to do with the thing."

Stroud said the defendants — Short, Todd, Keller, Quain, Nickell and Bell — are friends of his and are former schoolmates.

However, he said he had no real quarrel over the punishment of violators of laws. But he said he felt the punishment meted in the airborne hunting cases too severe.

"Those boys were guilty," Stroud said. "They all should have been fined. Half the citizens of West Texas have done it (violated hunting laws)."

He said the government wouldn't be satisfied with guilty pleas but wanted the defendants to testify against each other.

Bell and Nickell pleaded guilty and agreed to testify for the government in the Todd-Short trial. Todd testified in his own defense. Short did not.

"He (Short) took the non-filtered cigarette and blindfold and went before the firing squad, and they nailed him," Stroud said.

Stroud said that a "$5,000 fine would have been all the punishment necessary to handle the (illegal airborne hunting) situation."

"There's no question the law was broken," he said. "You've got to have some correlation between the crime committed and the punishment."

Stroud termed the government's case "frivolous at best."

"It just turned into a complete travesty of what I think justice in America is all about."

Officers trying to increase cruelty prosecutions

"Instead of going out there like the old dog catcher did, we rely on the calls," Byerly said. "We don't chase dogs down — we'll follow them until they go home and then we can talk to the owners. We don't patrol because we have other things to do rather than ride around looking for loose dogs."

Byerly, pointing out the difference in loose and stray dogs, estimated that 95 percent of the dogs in Midland are loose. These dogs have owners and are either allowed to roam during the day or night, or they dig out of their yards.

Strays, abandoned or born in the streets, have no owners.

When an animal is picked up and the owners come to claim it, the animal control personnel is usually apologetic. They explain they had to pick the dog up for its safety and a $25 fee is charged to cover the expense of dealing with the dog. The second time a dog is picked up, the employees talk with the owners, asking them how the dog is getting out and offer suggestions on how to keep him in. The third time, Byerly said, "if the owners act like they don't care — that's when we give them a citation."

Available for awareness programs for schools and organizations, the animal control officers concentrate on prevention, education and enforcement. Answers to questions about leash laws, medical care, neutering, licenses and vaccinations are available from the animal shelter or the SPCA.

This year, there are less calls concerning rabies vaccinations than last year during the publicized outbreak, Ms. Zachary said. But because no one is as concerned is not an excuse to waive the required yearly vaccinations.

Because many do not realize what the responsibilities of feeding and caring for a pet entails, a major task is educating the owners. The Texas Animal Rescue League reported that 50 percent of the complaints they receive are false, Ms. Armstrong said. "They are not considered an act of cruelty — they're not the ones that will hold up in court."

When owners who are starving their animals from ignorance or deliberate neglect make excuses about the animal being so skinny because it's sick, "that's when the veterinarian comes in," Ms. Armstrong said.

"That's when we can get a statement from him saying the animal is not sick and the only reason it's in that position is because it hasn't been cared for properly."

That's when the case can be prosecuted.

In Midland, only one case of cruelty has been taken to court, Ms. Armstrong said. About three years ago, the animal control was contacted about two ponies starving to death out in the county. The informant said one pony had been down for a couple of days.

"It looked like a big bag of bones," Ms. Armstrong said. "It couldn't get up."

The sheriff's department and animal control officers began the process of getting a seizure warrant although they knew the weakest pony would probably have to be put to sleep.

It died during the two hours they were getting the warrant.

The other pony lived and within two months "it was doing pretty good." Meanwhile, the owners were taken to court and found guilty. They paid a $200 fee and were sentenced to 30 days in jail.

"That's the only one we ever did try to prosecute and we won it," Ms. Armstrong said. "We need more like it. And we want to start working on prosecuting them a little more."

"There is so much law involved, you almost have to be a lawyer to fill out a search warrant affidavit," Midland County Attorney J. Scott Henderson said. "The animal control officers are going to have trouble getting a peace officer to quit fighting criminals, looking for murderers and writing traffic tickets to worry about an animal."

"We just want to get the animal away from them so we can at least halt the suffering," Ms. Armstrong said. For that reason, the county attorney's office is implementing a plan to speed up the process of obtaining seizure warrants.

"We're going to make it as easy as possible where all they'll have to do is fill in the blanks and stick it in front of a JP (justice of the peace) for his signature," Henderson said. "We'll educate the JPs on what to expect."

"We'll still require an investigation before we actually file criminal charges. But the animal control's primary concern in getting the animals out."

"Our basic role in cruelty is prevention by education," Ms. Zachary said. "If we have to prosecute someone in a cruelty case, that means we've failed."

Commissioners plan budget cuts

Insisting that salary cuts were a "last resort," Ramirez pointed out that the majority of the budget goes toward salaries. Other possibilities the auditor alluded to were alternating the payment schedules or eliminating a service entirely that is not required of the county by state law.

But nearly 13,000 Ector County residents saw fit to sign the petitions in opposition to the proposed tax rate of 32.5 cents and will likely be called upon to decide whether this rate will be rolled back to 31 cents in an election in early 1984.

Property owners can calculate their savings based on the estimation that a $10,000 parcel of property would net a savings of $1.50 and a $100,000 parcel would roll back $15. Individual county residents can determine their figure based on these numbers.

The budget session emphasized the relatively small savings to taxpayers and the loss of services presently provided as a result. Voters will ultimately decide whether more cuts like the one that eliminated Monday the County Extension Service's secretary of 27 years justify the reduced tax rate.

Circus becomes miniature

In the P.T. Barnum Museum in Bridgeport, Conn., Brinley's Miniature Circus presents a Lilliputian version of Barnum's tanbark world, with acrobats, clowns, lions, tigers, a midway featuring a sideshow and hot-dog and cotton-candy stands. A tiny train unloads the circus menagerie at a siding. The display took William R. Brinley 42 years to construct.

Trust fund established for plane crash victim

A trust fund for the children of Jay Price, 37, who was killed Saturday in the plane crash at Midland Regional Airport, has been set up at First City National Bank of Midland.

Price has three children attending Midland schools: Stacey, 15; Shelly, 12; and Michael, 6.

Price was the brother-in-law of KOSA-TV, Channel 7, anchorman Gary Hopper, who also was killed in the crash. A trust fund has been set up at First City for Hopper's two daughters.

Bank president Bill Franklin is in charge of the trust funds.

Survey concludes femininity best for successful marriages

Hearst Feature Service

Men in happy marriages tend to have an unexpected quality in common with their wives: femininity.

John Antill, a psychologist at Macquarie University in Sydney, Australia, interviewed 108 married couples about their relationships. The survey included an evaluation of the "femininity" and "masculinity" of each spouse. (Femininity was characterized by compassion, gentleness, sensitivity and loyalty; masculinity by assertiveness, dominance, ambition and leadership ability.)

This was compared with each couple's rating of their marital happiness. In most marriages deemed successful, both partners tended to be more feminine.

AT WIT'S END

Mission sounds impossible

By ERMA BOMBECK

Welcome to teaching, Miss Stevenson.

Your mission is to teach 26 first-graders how to read. Should you decide to accept the job you will be reinforced by every modern bit of technology known to education, including visuals, computers and teaching aids.

You will have the confidence of the parents, the support of the administration and the love of the children. You have nine months in which to accomplish this miracle with three and a half weeks of holidays and an occasional closing of the schools for an Act of God. Good luck.

Oh, just one thing. You won't forget to instill good nutrition habits, teach the gifted, the neurologically impaired, the emotionally disturbed.

All we expect from you is to give the public what they want ... a back-to-basics education. Good luck, Miss Stevenson. Miss Stevenson? MISS STEVENSON!

Another one self-destructed. No one wants to teach kids how to read anymore.

DEAR ABBY

Pop-in visits leave daughter-in-law ready to snap

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a fairly competent young woman who can usually handle any given situation, but at this point I am ready to explode.

Once again I have been surprised by my mother-in-law, who lives 125 miles away. She gives me absolutely no notice. She just gets into her car and drives here! Abby, she must know several hours in advance where she's heading. We both have telephones, and it doesn't cost that much to call. She could even call collect and I wouldn't mind.

Lucky for her someone has always been here when she pops in. I wish just once she'd come and find the house locked up with nobody home. It might teach her a lesson. I've begged her to give me a little notice, but she never does.

What can I do? Sometimes I've made plans for the day, and when she surprises me I just can't leave her. Her excuse: "I didn't want you to fuss."

When she's here, my husband (her only son) pays very little attention to her, so guess who has to entertain her? Help me, Abby. I can't take much more of this. — HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Roll with the punches. When she pops in, if you've made plans, just take her at her word — don't "fuss." Pop out and go about your business. Maybe she just likes to drive.

DEAR ABBY: My wedding invitations went out two weeks ago and the response cards are coming in. Abby, they are throwing me into total panic!

I sent invitations to 31 single people. Nowhere on the invitation did I indicate "and guest," but so far 14 of these single guests have returned cards with the names of their "guests" written in.

Two couples have informed me that if they can't bring their children, they will not attend. I do not want children under 12 years old. And if I allow one, I will have to have at least 20.

Abby, due to space limitations and a tight budget, I cannot accommodate any more than I have already invited.

Please tell me what to do. — CHRISTMAS BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: If you can't personally write or phone those who have informed you that they are bringing a guest (or their children), enlist the help of one or two close friends. Be assured that you are in no way being rude or unreasonable to inform invited guests that due to space limitations you regret that you cannot accommodate their guests or children.

DEAR ABBY: Has there ever been a book written on wheelchair etiquette? If so, I would like to buy several dozen copies and pass them around.

Because of an accident, I am confined to a wheelchair. It is a difficult enough adjustment to make without having to put up with the thoughtlessness and insensitivity of some people.

When I am shopping with my husband, the salesperson will invariably ask my husband, "What size is she?" Being unable to walk does not necessarily mean that I am deaf, mute or of diminished mental capacity.

Also, when I am out with friends, I have had so many coats, hats, pocketbooks and packages piled on top of me that I look like a rolling rummage sale!

And, lest I forget, there's the clown who likes to let go of my wheelchair at the top of an incline, only to run up after a few steps to catch it with a jerk.

Please print this, Abby. I'm sure there are thousands (at least) who get around in wheelchairs who would appreciate it. — FOUR-WHEELER

Breeder trains setters as 'gentlemen's gun dogs'

TUNKHANNOCK, Pa. (AP) — At the DeCoverly Kennels, in a country setting near Tunkhannock, Ken Alexander spends 12 hours a day caring for and training more topnotch pointing dogs than most sportsmen will see in a lifetime. Alexander, of Centremoreland, raises what he calls "gentlemen's shooting dogs."

Alexander has 70 pedigreed English setters in his pens, the best of the the Ryman line, and 25 pups currently in the "puppy house." And he plans to double the size of the operation.

Well known and respected in the gun-dog world, the Ryman setter is a homegrown breed, having been developed in Wilkes-Barre before the turn of the century.

Alexander breeds setters with the aim of constantly improving the line and selling the pups and young adults to bird-hunting sportsmen. As with racehorses, meticulous records are kept of bloodlines and crosses, and Alexander is always looking for the offspring with the best gun-dog characteristics, appearance and temperament. Though Alexander says he has dogs of show quality, he stresses his setters are training to be companions and hunters.

Alexander handles nearly 130 pups a year, paring them down over a two-year period, reserving just the handful that are the cream for breeding. The rest are sold, going to many corners of the nation, to fulfill their roles as gunning dogs.

Alexander recommends that the new owner of a pup, 8 to 10 weeks old, start training immediately, especially by developing a rapport with the dog. By beginning early and putting in a lot of time, the hunter could begin gunning over the setter when it's 7 to 9 months old.

One thing the owner will not have to teach the dog is how to point. That natural instinct is bred into it, Alexander says, though it can be refined and steadied.

With so many dogs, Alexander doesn't get much time for training the pups he has reserved until they are nearly a year old.

Boy walking dogs all the way to bank

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Richard Ochoa is only 11, but he's already gone to the dogs. And the young businessman hopes to turn a profit in the process.

Ochoa is the president of Dog Walkers Inc., based in this seaside suburb of Los Angeles.

To announce the opening of his business, he personally handed his neighbors flyers that said: "We will always walk your dog — In snow, sleet, hail or fog."

His published rates: "Big dog — 80 cents; medium dog — 70 cents; small dog — 60 cents."

Unfortunately, business has been slow. So Ochoa is offering his first discount: small dogs — 20 cents.

Dolls cause run on toy stores

By The Associated Press

An industry spokeswoman claimed no toy ever "caused this much chaos," as officials reported at least 10 injuries and two arrests nationwide in the clamor for the homely but lovable rag dolls known as the "Cabbage Patch Kids."

A financial analyst said the boom in the dolls is providing a happy Yuletide bundle for their manufacturer, Coleco Industries Inc.

But an international support organization for families separated by adoption Monday charged that the one-of-a-kind, computer-designed doll, which comes with "adoption" papers, "desensitizes kids to the reality of adoption."

The excitement is over 16-inch dolls with yarn hair and outstretched arms that also come with birth certificates, disposable diapers and detailed fingers and toes. Computers design the dolls' features, giving each a unique appearance.

"To the child, it's like a little person," said Brad Meerfield, manager of Toys by Roy in Albuquerque, N.M.

Since the start of the Christmas shopping season Friday, thousands of people have clawed their way through packed department stores in quest of the dolls, the brain-children of artist Xavier Roberts. Until this year they were available only in limited, hand-made versions costing $125 and up. The doll, which came on the market this spring, sells for between $18 and $25.

Although Coleco plans to ship 2.5 million of the dolls by the end of the year, stores say they're unable to keep up with demand.

A woman shopper in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., suffered a broken leg in a stampede for the dolls Sunday. A woman in Olean, N.Y., sustained a head injury and had to be hospitalized. In South Attleboro, Mass., another woman had to be treated for multiple bruises. Four other injuries were reported in Pennsylvania and three in Massachusetts.

Police arrested a man Sunday for disorderly conduct in Elmira, N.Y., where an ad drew more than 1,000 shoppers hoping to buy one of the 150 dolls available. They were sold out in three minutes.

A woman at a mall in Marion, Ind., was arrested after she allegedly tried to grab a doll from a woman carrying two.

"I think if the kids knew how their parents were acting they would be embarrassed," said the manager of the Hills Department Store in Marion, Norman Boucher.

The demand is "unprecedented," said Donna Datre, spokeswoman for the Toy Manufacturers of America, based in New York. "There has never been a product that has caused this much chaos."

And the momentum is building, said Coleco spokewoman Barbara Wruck, citing consumers "extreme behavior" in searching out the dolls.

AP Laserphoto

A crowd of approximately 300 people pushed and shoved into Hills Department Store in Lynchburg, Va., at 9 a.m. Monday, stripping the shelves of 138 Cabbage Patch Dolls in a matter of seconds. The crowd formed at 6:30 a.m. to pay $19.98 for each doll.

"We knew they'd be successful, but no one could have imagined demand that has been this high," she said.

Financial analyst Christopher Kirby of Sanford C. Bernstein & Co. said the dolls' success is a welcome boon for Coleco.

"The profits of Cabbage Patch dolls can cushion them for a quarter if they do $25 million in the fourth quarter," Kirby said.

Coleco's stock rose 3½ points Monday to 21¾ on the New York Stock Exchange. Kirby said investors were pleased by the doll sales and by production improvements involving Coleco's Adam home computer system.

The sales boom struck a sour note, however, with a support group for people involved with adoption, Concerned United Birthparents.

The organization based in Dover, N.H., has launched a campaign against the dolls, saying they suggest that adopted children "come from low-life vegetables — cabbages" and can be bought.

"This desensitizes kids to the reality of adoption," said member Donna Light of Montpelier, Vt. "There's pain and suffering in giving up a child."

Rather says he's paid 'more than I'm worth'

Rather

CHICAGO (AP) — CBS anchorman Dan Rather says he's getting paid more than anyone in the news business "could reasonably be expected to be paid" and it's "more than I'm worth."

While he says he doesn't feel comfortable about the situation, Rather adds that "in the end, your worth is what anybody is willing to pay."

He was asked how much he makes, but would not say.

In an interview in the January issue of Playboy, Rather, 52, had some complimentary comments for newspapers.

"I think that in print, one has a better chance of getting in touch with mainstream journalistic traditions, such as accuracy and fairness," he said. "If it were up to me, I wouldn't hire anybody at CBS News who didn't have some print experience."

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — Prince Edward, youngest son of Queen Elizabeth II, sounded a bit philosophical after making his Cambridge University stage debut in Arthur Miller's "The Crucible."

"Life is one big act," he commented. "You may be nervous but you don't show it."

The 19-year-old prince, who played Deputy Governor Danforth, the 60-year-old Puritan judge in the play about the 17th-century Salem, Mass., witch trials, admitted having stage fright before he went on, but still found the experience thoroughly enjoyable.

"The part suits him like a glove," said Nicholas Walmsley, who directed the production Monday in the chapel of the university's Jesus College.

However, Edward, who is studying history and archaeology at Cambridge, said he doubts he will appear in another university production. "It has been fun," he told reporters. But he said he felt the press attention he received was not fair to the other people involved.

SPRINGVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Playboy Magazine's 30th Anniversary Playmate, 18-year-old Penny Baker of Springville, is described as a "real farm girl" by her mother.

Mrs. Frances Baker says Playboy founder Hugh Hefner apparently was looking for something different for this anniversary playmate, noting he wanted a person with a rural background.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Arthritis can be treated with electricity

Dear Dr. Solomon: My brother has rheumatoid arthritis and it has been giving him a great deal of pain. He now tells me that his doctor has recommended electric shock. I always thought that electric shock was only used for mental patients. Is this something new or is my brother confused about what the doctor told him? — Al, Trenton, N.J.

Dear Al: Your brother is probably referring to a form of treatment called transcutaneous electrical nerve stimulation. The procedure is used to alleviate pain in patients with rheumatoid arthritis. It is completely different from, and should not be confused with, electroconvulsive therapy, which is used in the treatment of some forms of mental illness.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Since my husband was laid off from his job, it's been one thing after another. First he began having stomach pains, then he got a rash, and then he caught a cold, which he still has. How come he wasn't sick all the time he was working, but now that he gets plenty of rest, he always seems to be sick? — Mrs. G.S., Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Mrs. S.: There is increasing evidence to support the theory that stress reduces a person's ability to fight disease, and I assume that your husband's loss of employment was a very stressful experience for him. Of course not everyone experiences the same degree of stress in reaction to what might appear to be identical situations.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 71 years of age and has cancer, and the doctor wants to operate on him. Don't you think that drugs or something like that would be safer for someone my father's age? — Andre, Norfolk, Va.

Dear Andre: Without knowing the kind of cancer or anything else about your father, I can only say that in general surgery is not contraindicated simply because of a patient's age. Dr. Alfred S. Ketcham, chief of the division of surgical oncology at the Miami School of Medicine, points out that whenever there is a chance of cure, surgery is likely to be the treatment of choice.

While the possibility of complications in an older person should not be ignored, it should also be recognized that other forms of treatment carry some risk. There is evidence that many patients over 65 years of age can tolerate surgery as well as they do drug or radiation therapy.

Southerners drink less, more likely to develop hypertension

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal researchers say people in the Southeast misuse alcohol less frequently than other Americans but suffer more from uncontrolled high blood pressure.

The national Centers for Disease Control recently released the figures from its third quarterly survey of health risk factors from various states. After three such reports, the CDC said, "regional distinctions appear."

Among them are the conclusions that uncontrolled high blood pressure is more prevalent in the Southeastern states, alcohol misuse is at consistently lower levels in the Southeast except in Florida, and obesity is more common in Eastern states than in the west.

CDC researcher Dennis Tolsma said the conclusions were not achieved by plotting regional percentages, but by general observations and mapping from the 20 states and the District of Columbia surveyed thus far.

The CDC said other risk factors it surveys — including smoking and seatbelt use — do not appear to vary significantly according to geography.

The survey covered adult residents of Arizona, Iowa, Michigan, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Tennessee and Texas, measured by eight health risk factors. People were polled by random telephone dialing with a prepared questionnaire, the CDC said in its Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report.

Risk factors, states and percentages of population surveyed were:

—Obesity (weight 120 percent of ideal): Michigan 24.2 percent, New Hampshire 23, Tennessee 21.9, Iowa 21.9, Texas 20, New Mexico 18.1, Arizona 17.7.

—Chronic heavy drinking (more than 56 drinks a month): New Hampshire 14.8, Texas 10.9, Arizona 10.2, Iowa 8.7, New Mexico 7.3, Michigan 6.8, Tennessee 4.3.

—Uncontrolled hypertension (diagnosed with high blood pressure and still having it): Michigan 4.9, Tennessee 4.1, New Hampshire 3.9, Arizona 3.4, New Mexico 2.3, Texas 2.3, Iowa 2.0.

—Cigarette smoking: Tennessee 32.4, Arizona 32.0, Michigan 31.1, Texas 29.9, Iowa 29.6, New Hampshire 29.1, New Mexico 29.1.

—Acute heavy drinking (five or more drinks on at least one occasion in past month): Michigan 30.9, Iowa 26.9, New Hampshire 24.2, Texas 23.5, New Mexico 21.4, Arizona 21.1, Tennessee 12.7.

—Drinking and driving (driving after having too much to drink at least once in past month): Iowa 8.6, Michigan 7.8, New Hampshire 7.1, Texas 6.5, Arizona 4.7, New Mexico 3.7, Tennessee 2.7.

—Lack of seat belt use (seldom or never using seat belts): Iowa 68.8, New Hampshire 68.3, Texas 61.8, Tennessee 59.2, Michigan 54.7, Arizona 53, New Mexico 52.3.

—Sedentary lifestyle (low level of activity from exercise, work and recreation): New Mexico 13.9, Tennessee 12.8, Michigan 11.6, Texas 11.3, New Hampshire 9.7, Arizona 9.2, Iowa 5.3.

THE BETTER HALF

"Stop nagging me about exercise. For your information, opening a bag of chips involves more than 25 different muscles!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, November 30, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: British Prime Minister and Statesman Winston Churchill, writer Samuel Clemens (Mark Twain) and Irish clergyman-satirist Jonathan Swift were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: actors Efrem Zimbalist Jr. and Richard Crenna, TV host Dick Clark, New York Mets pitcher Craig Swan and actor Robert Guillaume (TV's "Benson"). Travel and overseas jobs enjoy highly favorable influences now. You feel more ambitious than in the past. Weigh the pros and cons of working for a large organization. The number 5 proves very lucky. As romance becomes more serious, you think about changing your lifestyle. A financial windfall makes the decision easier.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get in touch with someone who is in a position to help you achieve your goals. If home life is difficult now, be diplomatic. Avoid confrontations by offering compromises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Travel could be the key to greater career or financial success. If single, you meet a member of the opposite sex who will play a major role in your future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The time is right for promoting and cashing in on a business plan. A talk with someone influential leads to impressive career gains. Wear brighter colors. A chance encounter could spark romance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Others may oppose your plans. Be patient. Your self-confidence and thorough knowledge will win them over. Real estate transactions are favored. Tie up any loose ends in the domestic department.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Plan to practice some small economies on a weekend trip. Early morning is the best time to reach influential people. Romance could be deceptive. Self-improvement projects enjoy favorable influences.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Welcome an opportunity to make a quick profit on a one-of-a-kind venture. Someone puts in a good word for you at work. A raise or promotion seems likely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Give a young or inexperienced person the benefit of the doubt; you make a friend for life! The mail brings exciting news about a member of the opposite sex.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Higher-ups could heap extra work on you. Grin and bear it. A nice end-of-the-year bonus is possible. A new romance leaves you puzzled. Slow down.

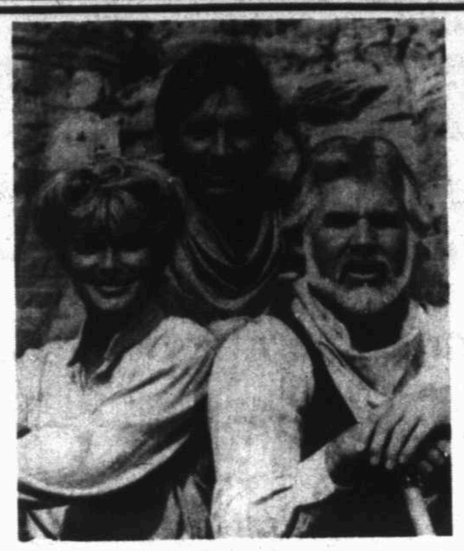

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your intuition helps you grasp a situation quicker than higher-ups. Take steps to lighten your work load. Domestic chores should be shared. Your quick thinking boosts productivity.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A wonderful day to launch a new project. Romance heats up. You could find yourself pulled in two different directions. Plead for more time! Fulfill all work and domestic obligations promptly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Now is the time to try something new. Mate or partner will understand. Thanks to expert advice, your financial affairs are in good shape. Turn a deaf ear to gossip.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go over your bills to check for mistakes. Your gallant attitude wins you new friends and admirers. The financial picture looks much brighter.

'Nova' features disabled

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — "Captives of Care" is the real-life story of some courageous patients who take over the hospital to prove, in the words of one named Neil, "that freaks are people, too."

The television docudrama, starring five of the wheelchair-bound rebels who challenged authority at the Leumeah Home for the Handicapped near Sydney, Australia, will be broadcast tonight as part of public TV's "Nova" science series.

The widely acclaimed Australian production was based on a book by one of the disabled protagonists, John Roarty, a prominent player in "Captives of Care," along with fellow revolutionaries Jeannie Best, Neil Russ, Les Hume and Jill Dennis.

An actress, Julieanne Newbould, is Sister Robin Bishop, an idealistic young nurse who listens to the patients' complaints and ultimately helps them in their campaign for respect and responsibility.

Many of the patients are grossly deformed, and others are virtually immobile without assistance. They play out the drama naturally, without calling undue attention to their disabilities. It is their dignity, and their concern for one another, that is the dominant image created by "Captives of Care."

A decision by Leumeah's administrator to bar one patient, Les, from obtaining an electric wheelchair touches off the revolt. "It would give me more freedom to go where I want," says Les, who can't even cross the room without help. "And it would allow the staff to do things more important than pushing me about."

"There are going to be others who want the same thing and can't afford it," the bureaucrat reasons, "and then they will feel deprived. And let's face it, our job is to see that they don't feel any more deprived than they already are."

Sister Bishop suggests that the patients be allowed to vote on Les' request. "If we allow the patients to make those kinds of decisions," she's told, "before you know it, they will be deciding all kinds of things, and we would be in all sorts of trouble."

The patients, led by Roarty and Neil Russ, the bearded activist in the group, organize in protest and take their case to a local TV station. The patients' feelings, expressed in interviews with a television reporter, are interspersed throughout the show.

Neil: "I think I'm pretty normal, really. ... "

Jeannie: "The thing that bugs me is that we all are looked upon as one big blob of people."

Neil, again: "They try to impose in areas that you people accept as your own privacy."

The United States beat Italy by 5 International Match Points over 160 boards to win the 1983 World Team Championship. The lead see-sawed throughout the final, and the United States clinched the title with only a couple of boards left to play when an Italian pair bid a slam off two cashing aces.

Earlier, the Italians had come from behind in the semifinal to defeat a highly rated French team by 11 IMPs. Benito Garozzo and Giorgio Belladonna, architects of so many Italian comebacks in recent years, were benched for the last session by the Italian captain.

This deal, with only five boards left to play, was decisive in Italy's semifinal win. The French North-South pair got no further than four spades. For Italy, Arturo Franco and Soldano De Falco bid as shown. De Falco's jump to three clubs as a passed hand showed a strong club suit with little outside. It was not difficult for Franco to visualize slam if his partner held the ace of clubs, so he checked via Blackwood and then bid the small slam.

West led the king of hearts, knocking out a key entry to the dummy. Now declarer cashed two high trumps, and when the suit split evenly, he had no problems. He went after the spade suit, and the slam was safe if that suit broke no worse than 3-2 or if East held four spades to the queen — the lady could be ruffed out and declarer still had an entry to the table by leading the two of clubs to the five.

Against a 3-1 trump division, declarer would probably have gone down. He would have had to set up spades, and the percentage play in that suit would have been to finesse. Had the slam failed, France would have been in the final instead of Italy.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? D'Anne Burchett — Electrologist

D'Anne Burchett has been a Registered Nurse for 10 years. She then trained in Dallas to become a certified electrologist. Now she is available in Midland for electrolysis.

Electrolysis is the permanent removal of unwanted hair. Any part of the body can benefit from electolysis. For women, facial hair seems to be the most common problem according to Ms. Burchett.

Each individual is different with different skin and hair conditions so it takes longer on some than others to remove all of the unwanted hair. It usually takes more than one treatment to acheive the desired results.

Ms. Burchett stated,"It does a lot for your self-image to have it(unwanted hair) taken care of in a permanent way. It is the best solution to the problem."

Now is the time to have any unwanted hair removed including that unsightly bikini line.

Call D'Anne at Christine Valmy,683-9891, to set up an appiontment for a free consultation. If an evening appiontment is needed D'Anne will be happy to set it up for you.

Tony Rogers, Acme Marketing, phone 367-6977, 3103 E. 31st, Odessa, will show you how simple it is to transform city tap water into delightful spring quality water, without electricity or plumbing, for about 2¢ a gallon. Tony also has ALOE VERA JUICE, DMSO, and Dr. WILLARD WATER at wholesale prices.

Pure water economical, delicious with Home Spa

With a Home Spa water purifier in your home, you no longer have to pay inflated prices for drinking and cooking water, or water for your house plants, pets and goldfish.

The Home Spa water purifier with the activated carbon (charcoal) filter solves the bad water problem for Midland and Odessa families, as well as for families nationwide.

The Home Spa removes chlorine, ammonia, sulphates, rust, algae, iron, turbidity, taste/odor and reduces hardness. You get nature's delicious water with impurities removed for less than two cents a gallon. This water is much more healthful than distilled water with a few minerals added.

The following are quotations from leading magazines on the subject of water and activated carbon:

READER'S DIGEST: "At present, the most promising technique for dealing with chlorine and organic chemicals is the remarkable purifier – Activated Carbon."

AMERICAN HOME: "An activated carbon filter eliminates toxic organic pollutants and is excellent for eliminating non-toxic objectional elements, such as chlorine, hydrogen sulphide, taste/odor and turbidity. No home should be iithout one."

THE WALL STREET JOURNAL: "Home Water Purifier Business Booming."

GOOD HOUSEKEEPING: "Many states recommend that water be filtered through activated carbon. Yet not a single health department is requiring or even urging that this improved form of filtration be installed."

The Home Spa unit is portable, made of durable polyethylene and will last for many years without showing wear. The charcoal filters are interchangeable. Each filter will purify from 400 to 500 gallons of water depending on the pollutants in a given area.

ACME MARKETING, 3103 E. 31st Street in Odessa is the National Distributor for the Home Spa and complete satisfaction is guaranteed or purchasers can return the Spa for a full refund. No questions asked.

The Home Spa water purifiers can be delivered or mailed anywhere in the United States for a $2.00 mailing and handling charge. Free delivery in Midland and Odessa.

The complete unit with an extra filter is only $29.95. Extra filters are $8.95 each or 3 for $21.95; 6 for $39.95. The shelf life of Spa filters is forever so purchasers can stock up on them before the prices skyrocket. They need to be changed about every 6 months to a year depending on the amount of water used.

ALOE VERA JUICE, retail price $22.00 a gallon is now on sale for $14.95 a gallon for a very limited time. Dr. WILLARD WATER is also on sale. A 16 oz. bottle (makes 16 gallons) regular price $29.95 now only $21.95. DMSO, 99.9% pure, 99.9% strength, only $14.95 for an 8 oz. bottle, and $19.95 for a 16 oz. bottle.

Call Tony at Acme Marketing, 367-6977 for further information and free local delivery. Out-o-ftown orders can be mailed for a handling and mailing charge of $2 per unit on any of the above products.

Rep. Ron Paul, R-Texas, wants to stop the Federal Reserve, which says Paul, plans to begin printing colored money. Paul unveiled at a Houston news conference artist's renderings of a blue $10 bill and a pink $1 bill.

Congressman unveils plan to color bills pink and blue

HOUSTON (AP) — Pink and blue money could replace the familiar U.S. greenback, with a metallic strip on the bills to trace how much cash is being taken out of the country, a Texas congressman says.

Rep. Ron Paul said Monday he learned of the federal plan Nov. 3 in a closed meeting which included the Treasurer of the United States, Katherine Ortega.

Paul said representatives of the Federal Reserve and the Secret Service also attended the session, along with members of the House subcommittee on coinage and consumer affairs, of which Paul is a member.

Besides new colors, Paul said Monday, the bills would carry a metallic strip running vertically next to the picture of the person on the bill to allow authorities to determine whether huge amounts of money are being taken out of the country.

"The solution is not to change the color of our money," Paul, a Republican, said at a Houston news conference. "The inflation, the monetary system, as well as the tax system — that's where the problems are."

In Washington, a Treasury spokesman who would comment only if he remained unidentified said any discussion about changing the color of currency was "very, very premature." The motive for any change would be to foil counterfeiters, he said.

"The point to be stressed here is that while a number of options are under review, there have been absolutely no decisions made," he said.

As for the metallic strip, the congressman said it would violate a citizen's freedom to leave the country.

"Americans must have the freedom to travel out of the United States without any restrictions," he said, calling any attempt at restrictions "outrageous and a violation of our rights."

Paul said federal officials who showed him examples of the proposed money would not let him to keep the bills. So he had an artist draw renderings of the bills, which he unveiled at the news conference.

The drawings were of a blue $10 bill and a pink $1 bill.

Candidates' debate planned for Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — A series of four presidential primary debates will end May 2 at the Amfac Hotel at the Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport, according to the League of Women Voters.

"The sites of the debates have been chosen because of the importance of their states in the nominating process," national league president Dorothy Ridings said Monday.

The other three league-sponsored debates are scheduled for Feb. 24 in Manchester, N.H., March 11 in Atlanta and April 5 in Pittsburgh.

Lydia Rice, the local league public relations director, said of the Dallas-Fort Worth selection, "Possibly the fact that the Republican National Convention will be here made it very timely."

The GOP convention will be held in Dallas in August.

Pat Sabin, Dallas League of Women Voters president, said the scheduling of the debate on May 2, three days before the Texas delegate selection process begins, could make the event "pivotal in determining who will be the party's candidate."

Ruptured eyeball could occur after surgery, eye doctor says

AUSTIN (AP) — An Austin eye doctor says surgery to correct nearsightedness increases the risk of a ruptured eyeball if the patient gets hit in the eye with a blunt object within a few weeks after the operation.

Normally, a person can withstand getting hit in the eye by such objects as a fast-moving tennis ball, but he should be extremely careful of such accidents after undergoing the surgery, Dr. H. Grady Rylander III reported.

He said his research showed that after the operation, called radial keratotomy, the eyeball is 50 percent more likely to rupture if struck in an accident. He said he is not yet sure how long the increased risk lasts, but he said the eyeball is weakest during the two weeks following the operation.

Officials have no clues in deaths

SHERMAN (AP) — After nearly two months of investigation, authorities are faced with "a blank wall" in trying to find the killer of four Grayson County men, Sheriff Jack Driscoll says.

Three Grayson County sheriff's deputies and three investigators from the Texas Department of Public Safety are working full time on the case but have not identified a suspect or a motive for the killings, he said.

The four were found dead on the evening of Oct. 8 at a remote airplane hangar in Grayson County. Each had been shot in the head with a .22 caliber weapon at close range, authorities said.

Deceptive trade suit filed

AUSTIN (AP) — State officials announced Monday they have filed a deceptive trade suit against a Houston man accused of selling more than $500,000 in advertising for a phone directory that was never published.

The suit, filed in Harris County jointly by Attorney General Jim Mattox and the state Department of Labor and Standards, also accuses Ory Nergal of failing to pay his employees.

The suit said Nergal used the aliases "Ory Mazar" "Roy Orwell" and billed his directory as the "Yellow Pages Combined Area Addition," and other names and sold ads for $198 to $6,778 each.

Rural death toll compiled

AUSTIN (AP) — At least 20 travelers died on the state's rural roads during the Thanksgiving holidays, but officials say they won't know the full death toll for another week.

Reports of traffic fatalities in metropolitan areas won't be compiled until next week at the earliest, said Department of Public Safety spokesman David Wells.

The number of fatalities is normally "pretty well evenly split" between rural and urban areas, Wells said.

Man very active in crime fighting program killed

FORT WORTH (AP) — An insurance agent active in a crime fighting program was found dead in his home, apparently the victim of a robbery-slaying, police said.

Police found the body of Fred Hodde, 57, in the bedroom of his home shortly after 8 p.m. Monday. He was either shot or severely beaten around the head, investigators said.

Neighbors said Hodde had taken over as block representative of the Crestwood Neighborhood Association two weeks ago and last week went door to door distributing anti-crime information he had picked up from Fort Worth police.

"That's what we were just talking about — it's so ironic," said Bruce Smith, who lives across the street. "And then it apparently hit him...The last time I saw him was when he was handing out that information."

Two friends who had gone to visit Hodde found his car missing, saw his body through a bedroom window and asked neighbors to call police, authorities said.

Hodde, who had lived alone in the neighborhood for about 18 years, was last seen alive about 10:30 p.m. Saturday when he left the home of a friend with whom he had eaten dinner, police said.

Officer E.J. Stress said authorities found the front door of the victim's house open and the Sunday newspaper still in the front yard. The house had been ransacked and the victim's car was missing, police said.

Greyhound bus attacked

ABILENE (AP) — FBI agents joined police in investigating an attack upon a Greyhound bus that was apparently fired upon shortly after departing from a terminal in this West Texas city.

The driver, identified as Duane Brown, escaped injury when a projectile struck the lower corner of the bus' windshield on the driver's side as it traveled on State Highway 351 headed for Dallas about 8:15 p.m. Monday, police said.

Brown escaped injury and immediately stopped the bus to notify authorities, police said.

Greyhound workers have been on nationwide strike for nearly four weeks over proposed cuts in wage and benefits. The bus line has resumed partial service in many areas of the country, having hired new drivers and other personnel.

J.C. Moore, district manager for Greyhound, said Brown was not a newly hired driver. He declined to comment further on the incident and would not say how many passengers were aboard the bus.

"We're reasonably sure it was a gunshot, and we're sure it was aimed at the driver," said detective Roger Berry. "Somebody wanted that driver, but it could've injured a lot of people."
