Sympathetic support

Demonstrators gathered in Chicago Wednesday night to mark the tenth month of martial law in Poland. They built a cross of white birch and stood around a grave symbolizing Poles killed since martial law was begun last Dec. 13 by the Polish government. That government today threatened an extension of martial law if rioting doesn't stop. Meanwhile, rioting and strikes continued.

Poles continue rioting; Regime threats go on

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist regime warned today that strikes and rioting could extend martial law, but underground militants of the outlawed Solidarity trade union called for more protests.

The threat to extend martial law, which was imposed Dec. 13, followed work stoppages and riots in Gdansk Monday and Tuesday and protests Wednesday in Nowa Huta and Wroclaw, where 170 people were reported arrested.

Rocks, tear gas cannisters and remains of barricades littered the streets of the riot-torn cities, but tough measures taken by the authorities apparently forced people back to work and the country was reported calm.

"The operation of the oppositionist underground and its confrontation could extend, contrary to the government's intentions, the period of application of extraordinary measures," the party paper Trybuna Ludu said.

The hardline army daily Zolnierz Wolnosci said, "The events of the past few days prove that class enemies, blinded by hatred, have not put up with reality."

It said workers should welcome the law passed Friday that banned Solidarity because the measure had widespread public support.

But Warsaw's underground union leaders called on workers to stage "sympathy strikes" to help the workers in Gdansk who called off their protest Wednesday. The statement, circulated in Warsaw today, said plants with more than 2,000 workers should begin occupation strikes but did not say when.

There were no immediate reports of workers in the Warsaw region complying with the appeal. The Gdansk workers ended their protest Wednesday in the face of massive police pressure and government "militarization" of the Lenin shipyard.

Solidarity's underground leaders in Krakow, meanwhile, said in another appeal circulated in Warsaw that workers in the southern city would stage a protest Oct. 20, but would start it sooner if the authorities attempted to prevent it.

Several thousands steelworkers, youths and bystanders battled martial-law enforcers Wednesday in Nowa Huta, near Krakow, and state television reported police jailed an unspecified number of "the most aggressive rioters."

Police sealed off the center of the southern city and rioters tore up roads and littered streets with glass shards and stones, official sources in Krakow said.

There was no word on injuries in the clash that erupted in Nowa Huta after riot police fired water cannon and tear gas into a crowd of 3,000 steelworkers demonstrating in support of the outlawed independent union.

The workers scattered, but within a few hours, Warsaw television reported, "rowdies blocked the streets and were damaging municipal and transport equipment."

Police tear-gassed the rioters again and sprayed them with powerful water hoses when the mob tried to destroy public buildings, the television said.

It said police "were showered with stones, glass, ball-bearings and concussion grenades. It is difficult to estimate the damage, but indications are that it is considerable."

The broadcast did not explain how the rioters obtained the concussion grenades, which have no shrapnel but can knock people down with the force of a gunpowder blast.

Sources said the uprising matched the fury of Aug. 31, when five people were killed and hundreds injured in protests and riots that swept scores of Polish cities on Solidarity's second anniversary.

Poland has been rocked by bloody protests since the government decreed martial law Dec. 13 and interned hundreds of union activists, including Solidarity chief Lech Walesa.

Anti-government demonstrations also erupted Wednesday in the southern city of Wroclaw, where about 700 people screamed "Gestapo!" A reporter for a Wroclaw newspaper said police fired tear gas and water cannon to disperse some of the protesters.

The unrest began Monday in Gdansk, the Baltic seaport where Solidarity was formed as the Soviet bloc's first independent labor federation during strikes in August 1980.

Reagan insists he's helping nation to economic recovery

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, insisting he is forging a lasting economic recovery, cautioned voters not to be tempted by those advocating a return to "big spending and big taxing."

In a speech billed by the White House as non-partisan but broadcast over Democrats' protests 20 days before the election, Reagan said the country's problems were years in the making and were the fault of big spenders and people playing politics with the economy.

Democrats, however, pointed out that unemployment has soared to its highest level in four decades during Reagan's presidency and said his recovery program must be changed.

"I was disappointed that the president failed to propose a single new measure to create jobs and put America back to work," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass.

"If he thinks we should stay the course, he should ask those millions of American families who have already reached the end of the line," O'Neill said in a statement. "If he thinks Reaganomics is working, he should ask the fellow who isn't."

Speaking from the Oval Office Wednesday night, Reagan said, "Now I do not pretend for a moment that in 21 months, we have been able to undo all the damage to our economy that has built up over more than 20 years."

He said the current recession "is part of a long series — a series that hasn't stopped because, in the past, when the crunch came, too many in government resorted to quick fixes instead of getting to the root cause."

Sen. Donald M. Riegle of Michigan, giving the Democrats' formal response to Reagan, said the economy "is on a downhill slide."

"More people are out of work now than at any time since the Great Depression," said Riegle. "And it's getting worse."

"What kind of course is it that creates more business failures than at any time since the Depression?" Riegle asked.

The senator called for cuts in Reagan's massive Pentagon buildup, and said Democrats would seek legislation to protect American industries from unfair foreign competition, changes in the credit system to reduce interest rates and restoration of cuts in Social Security benefits.

White House officials insisted Reagan's speech was nonpartisan but it was packed with self-praise for the administration's program and scorn for previous remedies for inflation and unemployment.

County inmate withdraws appeal

By ED TODD

Wayne Graham Patton, a 42-year-old convict who sued Midland County Sheriff Dallas Smith in federal court for alleged improper medical treatment while he was confined in the county jail here, has withdrawn his appeal after Federal Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled against Patton in a trial before the court last April.

Patton claimed he suffered symptoms of a stroke while he was in the Midland County Jail in early 1981, alleged he did not receive prompt medical attention and therefore was subjected to violations of his civil and constitutional rights.

However, the defense countered that Patton did receive treatment on Jan. 27 and Feb. 4, 1981, but the jail's physician, Dr. Patrick Leung, testified that he did not detect any indications of a stroke. Rather, the doctor prescribed medications for angina, a common and relatively minor heart ailment which can be aggravated by nerves, and for possible psychomotor epilepsy.

"His symptoms were not consistent with a stroke," Dr. Leung testified in mid-April. He said Patton's reflexes were normal, his eyes were not dilated and his blood pressure was 130 over 80. "His blood pressure is better than mine."

Patton testified that he had suffered a stroke in California in the mid-1970s but did not present any evidence during the trial to back up his claim.

Mark Dettman, assistant county attorney who represented the sheriff in the case, argued that Patton received timely and adequate medical attention and care and was not sub-

Midlander gets lucky in Vegas

When Allan Stroker lost the raffle aboard weekend shuttle flight 711 from Midland to Las Vegas, he quickly surmised that perhaps this trip Lady Luck missed her plane.

As it turned out, the fortuitous female took the bus.

She arrived 11 p.m. Tuesday, when with a few tugs on a "bandit's" arm, Stroker realized the dream behind most treks to Vegas — the elusive pot-of-gold at the end of a "Glitter City" runway.

After a long day attending the American Mining Congress Convention in the city's cavernous convention center, Stroker descended to the Las Vegas Hilton lobby for some milk, a

Five die in refinery accident

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — A ruptured line that spewed superheated powder on employees at a Texaco refinery, killing five and injuring eight others, was part of a unit that had to be repaired last week, officials say.

The line ruptured Wednesday as workers were trying to restart the unit after repairs, said Texaco spokesman Charles Rentz.

The nature of the repairs was not disclosed and it was not known if the problem needing repair was linked to the accident.

The break was so clean that "it looks like somebody took a knife and sliced it right through sideways," said Ed Morse, a member of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union's safety committee.

The powder, which is heated to 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit and is used to trigger chemical reaction during refining, was heaped ankle-deep in some places and covered the ground around the No. 1 fluid catalytic cracking unit for many feet, Morse said.

"There was a loud roar, the line exploded and the catalyst escaped," spraying the fine powder over the work yard near the unit, said James A. Werner, one of those injured in the accident.

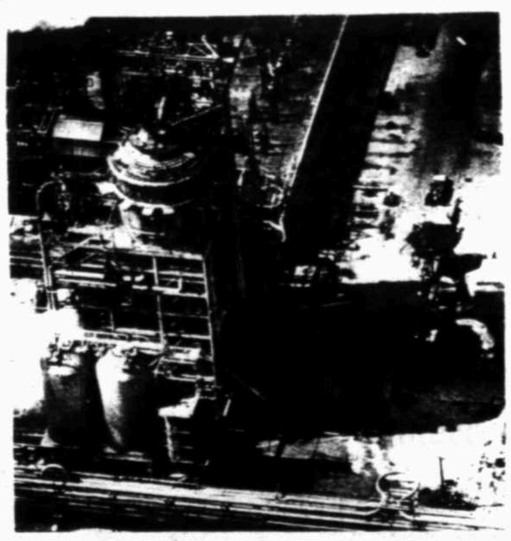

A safety specialist of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in Houston and an industrial hygienist today were to survey the six-story tower where the accident occurred, Rentz said.

In March 1977, eight workers at the Texaco plant died in a fire in which the plant's main stabilizer unit exploded.

Danny Dement, brother of one of the injured, said a break in such a line was unusual. "I've been out there 15 years and I never heard of anything like that happening," he said.

Rentz identified the dead as Frederick T. Rhine, 39, Jessie Dennis Jr., 34, and Herman C. Hope, 35, all of Port Arthur; Vernon J. Cole, 56, of Groves; and Charles L. Choate, 33, of Nederland.

One injured worker was reported in fair condition and three other men were hospitalized in stable condition with burns, officials said. Rentz said four workers suffered minor injuries and were treated at the plant.

Five workers died and eight were injured Wednesday when a feeder line snapped, spewing a 1,200-degree chemical over people in this Port Arthur Texaco refinery. Texaco officials say the chemical is used to trigger a reaction in the refining process.

Walk-ins won't find IRS help anymore

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Deep within many disgruntled taxpayers lurks a dark, unspoken desire to just once corral an Internal Revenue Service agent and engage in a few moments of intense axe-grinding.

Yet 11,751 Permian Basin residents with tax-related questions got help — not even — through walk-in tax assistance service provided by Midland's IRS office during the fiscal year ended Sept. 30.

But jittery taxpayers accustomed to an occasional fix of one-on-one help from local IRS employees will be forced to look elsewhere after the Midland office eliminated walk-in tax assistance service effective Oct. 4.

Robert Ray, group manager for Midland's IRS office, said taxpayers instead may seek answers to tax-related questions between 8 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. through a toll free telephone number, 1-800-492-4830, connecting them with district IRS headquarters in Dallas.

Ray said the elimination of walk-in taxpayer assistance represents a "reallocation of resources" within the IRS. "We feel we can give better service and reach more taxpayers by the toll-free service."

Marlene Gaysek, public affairs officer for a 143-county IRS district centered in Dallas, said eliminating the service is part of an effort to decrease overhead and boost efficiency within the IRS.

"What we've been working toward is stretching our resources, getting taxpayers the most for their money," she said.

Ms. Gaysek added that although federal agencies are still awaiting final budget allocations for fiscal year 1983, preliminary budget proposals call for reducing taxpayer assistance funds by $43 million.

While eliminating the service may disappoint some taxpayers, Ray said the Dallas office is often better

WEATHER SUMMARY

AP Laserphoto Map

Midland nights will continue to be cool

Another chilling night, nature's hint that winter is just a season away, will visit Midland tonight and will cool the night air.

The low temperature tonight will be in the mid-40s, according to the weatherman at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. Winds will be light and variable.

Friday's forecast calls for a high in the upper 70s and for winds to be southwesterly at 5 to 10 mph.

Wednesday's high temperature of 68 degrees was far away from the record high of 94 degrees for the comparable date in 1968. The overnight low of 41 degree was within two degrees of tying the record low of 39 degrees for the date in 1969.

Sunset today will be at 7:18 p.m. Sunrise Friday will be at 7:52 a.m.

In early May, U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton ruled against Patton, who subsequently filed an appeal with the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

However, Patton, who says that he is a law school graduate, apparently reconsidered his appeal and asked the appellate court to dismiss his case.

Patton admitted that he did not prove his contentions.

"This plaintiff has totally failed to show any constitutional violations on the part of the defendants in this action," Patton wrote, "and at most, can only show a state tort action." Patton further said that Judge Bunton had given him "every opportunity to show a cause of action and has shown extreme patience with plaintiff's unskilled application of law."

Patton, who is serving a four-year state prison sentence for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, claims that he is a graduate of the San Francisco School of Law.

"I know how to prepare a case," he had told his court-appointed attorney, John Smith of Odessa. "I do not know how to prosecute one."

Shooting victim's family asks for blood donation

The family of shooting victim Louis Cruz Arreguin, who is hospitalized in satisfactory condition in Midland Memorial Hospital, is asking for blood donations to help ease the financial burden.

Although no shortage of blood exists at MMH, persons who are interested in reducing Arreguin's blood costs may donate blood in his name at the facility. He requires O negative.

Arreguin, 43, of 1004 S. Dakota, was shot several times with a small caliber revolver outside the Dog House Bar at 307 S. Mineola on Oct. 8.

Absentee voting starts for Nov.2 election

Absentee voting in the Nov. 2 general election is being held weekdays through Oct. 29 in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office at 709 W. Washington Ave.

On Wednesday, the first day of absentee voting, 44 Midlanders cast ballots on the four voting machines set up in the office, and 85 absentee ballots were mailed out, according to Elections Administrator Janeice Builta.

All told, 42,411 Midland County residents are registered to vote in the election.

State law allows four reasons for voting absentee: expected or actual absence from the county on elections day; age 65 or older, religious belief, confinement in jail, and sickness or disability.

Absentee balloting will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Andrews County Sheriff's Department investigates death

ANDREWS — Circumstances surrounding the death of a person in eastern Andrews County were being investigated this morning by Andrews County Sheriff's Department.

The body was discovered beside Highway 176 15 miles east of Andrews shortly after 8 a.m.

A sheriff's department spokesperson said foul play was suspected.

No further details were available at press time.

Texan sought in Tylenol extortion case

CHICAGO (AP) — Police searched for a second time the home of a "closet chemist" in connection with seven cyanide killings as federal agents looked in Texas for a man accused of trying to extort $1 million from the makers of Extra-Strength Tylenol.

Roger Arnold, 48, an employee of Jewel Food Stores, had been held without bond from Monday to Wednesday night while city detectives pursued what they said was circumstantial evidence that led them to consider him a possible suspect in the poisonings, homicide Sgt. Monroe Vollick said.

"There are a lot of circumstances surrounding it that can't be overlooked," Vollick said.

"He has not been discounted as a suspect...he is not a strong suspect," said homicide Detective Robert Brown.

Illinois Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, who is heading the multi-agency task force investigating the killings of seven people who took Extra-Strength Tylenol laced with cyanide, described Arnold's arrest as "another one of those (incidents) that are unrelated" to the killings.

Bond was set at $6,000 Wednesday night and Arnold was released after posting $600 cash bond, or 10 percent of the bail.

Police also searched Arnold's automobile and work locker, Vollick said, but there was no immediate word on the results of the new searches. His home had been searched Monday with his permission, detectives said.

Police Area Commander Kenneth Curin and Lt. August Locallo said a "series of coincidences" surfaced when Arnold talked with investigators and they had no choice but to investigate further.

Meanwhile, federal authorities issued an arrest warrant Wednesday and were searching in Texas for a man accused of trying to extort $1 million after the killings, Fahner said.

The warrant alleged that Robert Richardson, in his mid 30s, wrote a letter to McNeil Consumer Products Co., manufacturer of Extra-Strength Tylenol, demanding money "if you want to stop the killing."

The letter told the company to deposit the money in an account at a Chicago bank. The account, which officials said was closed, had belonged to a suburban resident questioned last week by the FBI. Fahner said the man, who ran a travel agency that is now closed, has "never been a suspect" in the extortion or killings.

Richardson's wife, Nancy, once worked for the travel agency, Fahner said. He said the couple was believed to be in the Amarillo area.

Arnold was arrested late Monday night after an informant told police he was known to keep cyanide in his home, and was charged with five counts of failure to register firearms and one count of aggravated assault, Detective James C. Gildea said.

Robert Richardson

Gildea said that among the books found in his apartment was one that explained how to put poison into a capsule. Arnold "said he was a closet chemist" and had "a working knowledge" of chemicals and compounds, he said.

When police first searched Arnold's South Side apartment, they found a plastic bag containing a white powder as well as five guns, ammunition and literature on poisons and explosives.

The powder was sent Wednesday to the U.S. Food and Drug Administration laboratories in Cincinnati for analysis, Vollick said.

Vollick said Arnold had two one-way tickets to Thailand and intended to leave the country Friday for a 28-day vacation there. He said Arnold previously had traveled to Thailand, China and Hong Kong.

Arnold's lawyer, Thomas J. Royce, said his client refused a police request for a lie-detector test after consulting Royce. "He says he didn't do it (the cyanide killings)," Royce said.

Arnold works as a warehouseman at a Jewel salvage building in Melrose Park, Jewel spokeswoman Janie Armstrong said.

Jewel operates a chain of supermarkets and drugstores in the Midwest, including two in the Chicago suburbs where four of the seven cyanide victims had bought their poisoned bottles of Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

Detective Jerry Beam said the assault charge against Arnold stemmed from a recent, unrelated incident involving a bartender at a local tavern who provided police with the tip leading to Arnold's arrest. Beam declined to elaborate.

A task force of more than 100 local, state and federal investigators has been working to find whoever placed deadly cyanide in the capsules, killing seven people in the Chicago area between Sept. 29 and Oct. 1.

Women's groups back candidate

CLAYTON, Mo. (AP) — Harriett Woods is more than just the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate against incumbent John Danforth: She is the standard-bearer for the women's movement in this fall's elections.

National women's groups are making major efforts in the 55-year-old state senator's long-shot bid to unseat the first-term Republican.

Mrs. Woods knows how difficult her task is.

"You don't go into a race against a multi-millionaire incumbent who is perceived as a good guy with any illusions that it's going to be easy," she said in an interview last week.

The Democratic activist is one of three women running for the Senate as a major party nominee this fall. But the other two have not attracted the unified support from women's groups that Mrs. Woods has.

In New Jersey, Republican Rep. Millicent Fenwick's support for President Reagan's budgets and spending cuts have cost her the backing of the National Organization for Women and some other feminist groups.

"The Woods campaign is one of our highest priorities," says Ranny Cooper, who runs the Women's Campaign Fund.

Despite the backing of women's organizations and a number of unions, Mrs. Woods still trails in the polls and in fund raising.

GOP officials say Danforth, an heir to the Ralston-Purina fortune, will win by a substantial margin, but they no longer describe his seat as "safe" for the incumbent.

A Democratic Party professional in Washington conceded that Danforth has a comfortable lead, but added that Woods can win the race in the final weeks.

"When you get in a fight with Harriett, you're in a fight."

Mrs. Woods backing is from the National Organization for Women, the National Abortion Rights Action League, the National Women's Political Caucus, the Women's Campaign Fund, Friends of Family Planning, the American Nurses Association and the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union, among others.

Danforth likes to mention some of those groups on the campaign trail:

"I have been targeted by the National Organization for Women, the National Abortion Rights Action League, and now we get in the paper that I have been targeted by Ralph Nader. Teddy Kennedy is coming into the state to campaign against me and any minute I expect Jane Fonda to storm the battlements of Missouri."

He explained in an interview that his statement is not "not male vs. female ...the groups and individuals who have become active in stating their opposition to my candidacy have been far out."

Mrs. Woods, not surprisingly, takes a different view.

"There is some danger that he could antagonize women by implying that any woman who dares to run for the Senate has to be a militant female.

"I don't think I carry with me the baggage of militancy — I would say conviction is the right word."

He had won about $87 during the afternoon but was disappointed to find that day's favorite machine occupied. Stroker moved to another Super Pot-of-Gold machine. "I figured, what the heck, I was going to spend $20 and go to bed," said Stroker, a sales manager for Drilco Industrial.

He began feeding the slot $3 at a time, scoring some small wins as he went. With $5 in hand and some winnings in the payoff trough, his last pull brought four plums — a $20 win — into view behind the middle of three sets of windows.

Simultaneously, the bottom windows revealed four triple bars, the $250,000 bonanza. Later, Stroker calculated the prize cost him $2 plus labor.

Lights flashed and people rushed toward Stroker. "I was not aware of what happened, seriously, until they told me."

"Sir, do you know what you've done?" a hotel employee asked the bewildered Stroker. "You've just won a quarter of a million dollars!"

"Sure, you're really kidding me," was the only reply he could muster. "This one person behind me said you're supposed to be jumping up and down," said Stroker. "But I said, 'No, I don't react that way.'"

Security guards and hotel officials quickly hustled in to keep curious onlookers at bay and whisked Stroker away to begin the paperwork incumbent upon his new-found wealth.

A phone call early Wednesday morning roused the Stroker household, eliciting screams of joy from his wife, Jolene, and mother-in-law, Nell Prater. Mrs. Stroker left Midland Wednesday to join her husband.

According to Lynn Berk, Las Vegas Hilton assistant publicity director, Stroker's win proves doubly sweet since it qualifies him for a spot in the Hilton Hotel Million Dollar Super Pot-of-Gold Championship Slot Tournament April 5 at the Reno Hilton.

Berk said 26 contestants are already scheduled for the tournament, when participants will be given $300 and 30 minutes to accumulate as much money as they can, winner take all.

Stroker was to have received his $250,000 check this morning. As of Wednesday evening, in a telephone interview, Stroker said he had some level-headed plans for the booty.

"Like the average person I think I'll try to become completely free from small debts," he said. "I don't intend to change much, I don't think."

Stroker said he'll replace his wife's car with a new one and probably complete payments on a converted trailer home gracing the banks of Hayden Lake in Idaho.

He also plans to take his wife and mother-in-law for a Mississppi River paddle-boat cruise. "We've been talking about it for quite a few years," he said.

Stroker, a father of three children who moved his family from Denver to Midland two years ago, said his immediate plans are "to sit down with my tax accountant and figure out the best way to store this until next April, when Uncle Sam takes a big chunk of it."

Meanwhile, Stroker said his celebrity status followed him into the convention hall.

"It's been fun, but it's a little bit hectic," he said. "The customers all heard about it and I've been repeating the experience, but it's a blast."

IRS removes walk-in aid from services equipped to answer specific questions because its employees have access to computerized account records. He suggested callers avoid peak calling hours, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. during the early days of the week.

Midland's office will continue dispensing some basic tax forms, including the 1040 and 1040A, but will no longer dispense W2 withholding forms or any of the 90 free informational publications published by the IRS. Ray said order blanks will be provided for obtaining forms and publications not available in the office.

Ray said the IRS locally will continue to sponsor the Voluntary Income Tax Assistance (VITA) program, providing tax help through volunteers trained by IRS employees. He said VITA sites for Midland and surrounding communities will be announced soon.

Ms. Gaysek said several other IRS branch offices, including San Angelo, Lubbock, Abilene and Wichita Falls, will also lose walk-in assistance. She said the service will be retained in only three district cities: Dallas, Fort Worth and Amarillo.

Despite service cut-backs, IRS officials expect to provide walk-in assistance to about 5.2 million people nationwide during fiscal year 1983.

Ms. Gaysek said a study of the questions handled by Midland's office last year revealed that only 831 people — about 7 percent of the cases — needed personal assistance. "The proportions convinced us that the phone was the most efficient method for answering questions," she said. "There are plusses and minuses to all decisions and what we try to do is benefit the most people."

Ms. Gaysek said IRS officials are developing another source of taxpayer information, Tele-Tax, a battery of prerecorded informational messages for curious or confused taxpayers.

She said a pilot Tele-Tax program was conducted in Baltimore and she predicted the Dallas district could be one of the first to receive Tele-Tax once IRS officials move ahead with the plan.

A simplified, 11-line tax form — the 1040EZ — could alleviate many questions and problems encountered by taxpayers filing returns in 1983, Ms. Gaysek said. She estimated that as many as half of the nation's taxpayers could file with the new form.

Ray said that reducing taxpayer assistance jibes with the Reagan administration's plans to remove government services where the private sector will suffice.

Gene Kail, senior manager at Beneficial Income Tax Service in Midland, said calls from quizzical taxpayers will likely increase and business may as well. Elimination of the IRS's service "can only help us, it certainly can't hurt us," he said.

Kail said individuals with low incomes and complicated tax questions may have difficulty deciphering answers on the phone. "It's hard to call a number and do your taxes, I assure you," he said.

Horace Robb, president of the Permian Basin Chapter of the Texas Society of Certified Public Accountants, said taxpayer assistance is becoming increasingly important because tax laws are growing increasingly complex.

In January, Robb said the chapter will conduct a six-hour, two-night course on income tax preparation for the public.

Sims concerned with natural resources

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Preserving natural resources, and especially water, was the focus of a non-political talk by state senatorial candidate Bill Sims, who was the featured speaker for the Lions Club Wednesday luncheon in Midland Center.

Sims, a Democrat from San Angelo, is seeking the 25th Senatorial District seat held by W.E. "Pete" Snelson of Midland. He is running against Ernest Angelo Jr., a petroleum engineer and former mayor of Midland.

Turning to the "importance of natural resources," Sims said, "We're on the verge of a real problem."

Pointing out there are depletable and non-depletable resources, he listed coal and oil as belonging to the first category. "There are x-number of days we can enjoy these petrochemicals. It's up to us to maintain these resources as long as we can."

Although his family has been involved in the ranching and sheep business for three generations in the Concho Valley, it has dealt some with the oil business. Sims told the story of his grandmother who traded a milk cow and Model T Ford for a lease in Yoakum County. The well didn't start producing until after her death, he said.

To illustrate his point of depleting resources, Sims talked about his Grandpa Sims who came to the Concho Valley from Missouri, "where it rained 50 inches a year." Thinking he could graze the same number of animals per acre as he had done in Missouri, the man woke up one day to find all the grass gone. "He learned you can only put a few animals per section," said Sims.

Bill Sims

"One resource that everyone talks about but doesn't seem serious about is water. Some say it's a depletable product," he said, disagreeing with that theory. "All the water that will be available is in the world today."

When it's used for irrigation, the water goes into a hydrological cycle where it is cleaned up and returned to the ground water system. "Water is not a depletable product, but we tend to transport it away from us."

Poor use of water by early ranchers can be seen in the Rankin, McCamey and Pecos area which used to be the site for cotton farmers. Now the land is covered in mesquite, Sims noted.

Hurting Texas is the fact that "it's growing much faster than our water resources will sustain. We'll wake up in 15 to 20 years and see we didn't have enough water. People are coming down from the north and we don't have water for all of them."

Wondering aloud if the state should limit its growth, Sims offered an answer and that was "probably, because we don't have enough water."

"We need to get our heads out of the sand and do something now" about the water supply, he said. "We can't afford to pollute the water where it can't be used again."

Although he offered no specific solutions to the problem, Sims said he is optimistic about the possibilities with support from the governor.

"I feel we'll correct the problem we have about water."

Sylvester helps MMH keep records clean

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Patients' medical records at Midland Memorial Hospital are kept in tiptop shape through the efforts of Sylvester and 18 other hospital employees.

Sylvester is an efficient, reliable and automated filing and retrieving system in MMH's medical records department.

Resembling an enormous trash compacter, Sylvester, which is about 35 feet long, 12 feet wide and reaches from the floor to the ceiling, mechanically retrieves and files patients' identification cards and medical records.

It has the capacity to file 13,700 typed lines of record information, 3,240 linear inches on filing cards and 6,480 linear inches of microfiche.

The medical records department may be hidden in the bowels of MMH, but the location is no reflection on its importance.

Throughout Texas this week, hospitals are recognizing medical records week.

According to Mary Jackson, MMH medical records department head, the records are of vital importance to the patient and hospital in meeting current and future health care needs. For the physician, the record can be used for education, research and advancement of health care. And for the hospital it also serves to review the quality of services.

Medical records are made the day a patient comes into the hospital and the file serves the patient, doctor and hospital as a legal document, according to Ms. Jackson.

"When the record is brought down here it becomes a research document," Ms. Jackson said. "The record has served the patient once and it will be pulled again if the patient comes back in the hospital."

Entries on patients' records include all the physicians' orders and those medical personnel who carried out the orders, medical background, surgery notes, what brought the patient into the hospital and what was done for the patient.

"From the records, you can tell if the patient is allergic to any kind of medicine or if there have been any complications in the past," she said.

The records are kept on paper, which can be up to 65 pages for each patient. But Ms. Jackson said a program that is in the beginning stage will allow the department to keep five years of hard (paper) copy and microfiche the remaining records.

"All information is unitized," she said. "Old folders are pulled and any new information is added. That's why it's important that patients tell the admitting clerk their full, legal name and let them know if they've been in the hospital before."

Besides Sylvester, the department also has the newest dictating equipment.

Ms. Jackson said there are phones available throughout the hospital and special lines outside the hospital that make it possible for physicians to call in any information for the medical record.

"They can call on Saturday or at night when there is nobody here," Ms. Jackson said. "The information is recorded. Then one of the five transcriptionists records the information on the patients' record."

With the equipment, Ms. Jackson said she anticipated a cut in personnel, but the department's 18 employees have all been kept busy.

"With an increase in the patient load, we have more than enough to do," she said. "Before we got Sylvester, all of these records were filed in open cabinents piled high to the ceiling. It took a lot of time to file and retrieve. Sylvester has been more of an aid than a replacement of employees."

Minorities' SAT scores improve; Decline in overall scores continues

NEW YORK (AP) — New figures from The College Board show that black youngsters are gradually gaining on whites in college entrance examination scores.

The figures, released Wednesday, also show that while average Scholastic Aptitude Test scores rose in 1982 for the first time in 19 years, that rise was "due significantly" to better performance by blacks and other minority youngsters.

Average SAT scores this year were up two points to 426 verbal, and up one point to 467 in math. But the new figures show that blacks boosted their verbal scores from 1981 levels by nine points to 341, while whites rose just two points on average to 444. Average black math scores went up four points to 366, while average white scores were unchanged at 483.

Earlier this month, the board for the first time released a breakdown of SAT scores by race and ethnic group. The report showed blacks and other minorities lagging far behind white children in college board scores, but did not include the statistics released Wednesday that show how blacks have steadily improved their scores since 1976.

The new figures, said George H. Hanford, president of the board, "indicate that, as a whole, minorities are making progress in closing the gap that exists between their scores and those of the white majority."

In 1982, the new figures show, blacks averaged 341 on the verbal section of the SAT, and 366 on the math section, for a total of 707. Whites averaged 444 in verbal and 483 in math, for a combined 927. That left whites a combined 220 points higher this year, on average, than blacks.

But in 1976, blacks trailed whites by 258 points, when blacks averaged 686 combined verbal and math scores, and whites averaged 944 — meaning both that black scores have improved and white scores have worsened over the last seven years.

Average blacks scores rose more than any other minority group since 1976.

American Indians averaged 388 verbal in 1982, unchanged from 1976, and 424 in math, up four points from seven years earlier. Mexican-Americans improved from 371 to 377 in verbal and 410 to 416 in math in the seven-year period. Orientals declined from 414 to 398 verbal and from 518 to 513 math. Puerto Ricans fell on average from 364 to 360 verbal and went up two points to 403 in math.

"It's all a dream, a fuzzy dream," White told KHOU-TV reporter Cinny Kennard in his first interview since his arrest Sept. 29 near Brownsville.

"I was told I kidnapped three people and buried somebody. Yet I was told nobody got hurt. So what's going on? There are too many pieces of the puzzle I can't put together," White said.

White's arrest ended a four-day chase between East Texas and brush-covered South Texas. Authorities began searching for White after arresting three other people in connection with the kidnapping of Michael Baucom, 20, of Santa Fe, Texas.

White was admitted to a Brownsville hospital immediately after his capture for treatment of a high blood pressure condition. He was transferred to John Sealy Hospital here Oct. 1 and released four days later. He is being held in the Galveston County jail on $300,000 bond.

"The last thing I remember is a doctor looking into my eyes with a light and it was very, very cold," White recalled.

Baucom was buried alive for four days in an oil field northeast of Houston. Authorities said the abductors had demanded Baucom's father pay a $75,000 ransom.

White also is charged with kidnapping Houston firefighter Coby G. Hamilton, 27, and Robert Cameron, 37, an employee of an oilfield equipment company.

Vietnamese turning remains over to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vietnamese authorities today turned over to U.S. officials in Hanoi five sets of remains and material evidence on three other American military personnel unaccounted for in Indochina, the Pentagon announced.

The remains are being flown to the Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu, Hawaii, and are expected to arrive at Hickam Air Force Base there Friday morning, the statement said.

It said further details were not available immediately.

The turnover of the remains appeared to fulfill a pledge Vietnamese authorities gave last month to four members of a private group known as the National League of Families of American Prisoners and missing in Southeast Asia who visited Hanoi.

At the time, a U.S. official in Bangkok, Thailand, said the five sets of remains were retrieved in Vietnam earlier this year and announced to a visiting delegation from the Vietnam Veterans of America in May and June.

The Vietnamese said at the time that one of the bodies was identified as that of Gerald Patrick Frye, killed in 1967 in the northern province of Ha Nam Ninh, and that the remains of three others were found at the same crash site.

The fifth set of remains was reported to have come from Quang Ninh privince, also in the north.

Before today, the communist Vietnamese had turned over the remains of 75 U.S. servicemen since 1973. The latest were transferred in July 1981, when three sets of remains were surrendered.

But this is a tiny fraction of the estimated 2,500 U.S. personnel who remain unaccounted for in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia from the Indochina war. The large majority have been listed as presumed dead, although there have been persistent but unconfirmed reports that some Americans remain as prisoners.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Five years ago, Laura Brown adopted a girl and became a single parent. But when she wanted another, adoption wasn't possible. So she had her own through artificial insemination.

And now, shortly after giving birth to a healthy girl, Ms. Brown is helping other women conceive by providing that part of a man no mother can do without: his sperm.

Laura Brown is the administrative director of what may well be the nation's first feminist sperm bank. It is run by the Feminist Women's Health Center, a decade-old organization with sliding-fee clinics in three San Francisco Bay area cities.

The idea of a feminist sperm bank might startle those who perceive feminists and artificial insemination as threats to the traditional family. Health center officials, however, say they favor all families, whether headed by one parent or two, and whether the mother is heterosexual or a lesbian.

"To take the position that there must be a male figure (in a family) is a slap in the face to every single woman raising a child in this country," said Pat Parker, another health center director.

THE SPERM bank also serves couples in which the male is infertile.

"We've had over 300 calls in the last two days, and they're breaking down about half-and-half between prospective donors and women and couples," said Ms. Parker. "We realized there was a need in this area, but we didn't know there was this much of a need."

When a woman comes to the feminist sperm bank, she chooses the father of her child from a catalogue that lists hundreds of details but omits his photo and his name. The donor's height, weight, education level, occupation, blood types, eye color, hair color and dozens of other characteristics are listed. The donor's IQ is not.

"We don't believe that intelligence is hereditary," said Ms. Parker, who maintains IQ is "environmentally determined." Most scientists say both heredity and environment play a role in intelligence.

Donors, who are asked to complete a 10-page medical history, are excluded for several medical reasons. And the clinic will not accept a man who they perceive is egotistical, although Ms. Parker admits egotism is not hereditary.

"I just had a call from some guy down at Stanford (University) who says, basically, 'I'm 6-feet-2, blond hair, blue eyes — pure Aryan, and I would make a good donor,'" she said. "Well, in our minds, no, he wouldn't make a good donor at all.

"WE'RE NOT out here to perpetuate the Aryan race and we're out not here to help some guy ego-trip, either," she said. "Our whole point is to make sperm and choices available to women who want to have children."

Not all women like the idea of picking a father for their child from a catalogue. For example, Ms. Brown "wasn't interested in a lot of screening."

"You don't fall in love with somebody based on their genetic history and their ears and nose," she said. "You want to have their funny ears on your babies...all I really cared about was getting somebody who was reasonably healthy."

The prospective mother pays from $50 to $150 for an examination and other personal services, and $50 for each dose of donated sperm.

Donors sign away custody rights and are given a nominal fee. Although the center keeps records, the donor will never learn how many children he has fathered or who they are. The records are intended for use in case of a medical problem with the child and to guard against unintentional intermarriage in the next generation.

THAT CONTRASTS with the policy of many other sperm banks, which destroy records after one year. Sperm Bank Inc., a Santa Ana, Calif., company owned by Linda Sullivan, is an example.

"I don't know if there is any way of finding out who the father is," said Mrs. Sullivan, who opened her clinic in May 1981. She said she is not worried about possible intermarriages because "the odds are something like one in 10 million."

Mrs. Sullivan said most of her customers are heterosexual couples who want the donor sperm to carry the characteristics of the husband, and that single clients pick the characteristics they want from a checklist.

Lumps may not be cancer

BOSTON (AP) — When a woman is told she has "fibrocystic disease" she often worries needlessly about breast cancer when all she really has are harmless and normal lumps in her breast, a group of doctors says.

"The real problem is that this nebulous disease has been said to impart a twofold to fourfold increase in the risk of breast cancer," which is not the case, according to a report in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

"There is no link between clinically lumpy breasts or painful breasts and cancer," said Dr. Susan M. Love of Beth Israel Hospital in Boston, one of the authors of the report.

The doctors said half of all women have lumps in their breasts and 90 percent have microscopic evidence of "fibrocystic disease."

"If 90 percent of women have it under the microscope and 50 percent have lumpy breasts, it's not a disease," Ms. Love said. "It's how the breast reacts to hormones. Some women are tall and some are short, and some have big breasts and some have lumpy breasts."

Ms. Love said she wants to abolish the term "fibrocystic disease" because it is so frightening that some women request mastectomies to prevent breast cancer and their physicians sometimes recommend surgery.

Instead, she said, she would like to call the condition "physiogic nodularity" or simply "lumpy breasts."

"If you send a pathologist a breast biopsy, they'll never report normal breast tissue, because that will make the surgeon feel bad," said Ms. Love, a surgeon.

Chad was victim of 'medical child abuse,' says lawyer

BOSTON (AP) — Little Chad Green would be celebrating his seventh birthday soon if his parents hadn't whisked him away to a Mexican Laetrile clinic, a former prosecutor said on the anniversary of the boy's death from leukemia.

But Chad's parents, Gerald and Diana Green, say their decision to use the controversial drug instead of court-ordered chemotherapy allowed their 3-year-old son "quality time" in his final days.

Chad Green

Three years after Chad's death, the principals in the case agree only that it shook the medical and legal establishments.

"It's in all the casebooks," says Jonathan Brant, the former assistant attorney general who prosecuted the Greens. He says Chad was the victim of "medical child abuse."

Had the Greens stayed in Massachusetts and given him chemotherapy, "Chad would be celebrating his seventh birthday," he says.

Mrs. Green calls Brant's statement "amazing."

"We thought we were also protecting Chad from the same thing," she says. "We didn't think it was right to force a therapy that could also be dangerous. There are warnings in the physician's books that the drugs can kill you, so you just don't know."

The Greens fled their Scituate, Mass., home in January 1979 to avoid court-ordered chemotherapy for their son's leukemia. The parents felt drugs were wearing Chad down and he was doing well on a diet of natural foods, vitamins and Laetrile.

"The drugs had a debilitating effect on his little life," recalls Mrs. Green. "We wanted quality time for what was left of his life."

Laetrile is a trademark for a chemical derived from apricot and peach pits. Advocates say it is effective against cancer, but recent findings by the National Cancer Institute dispute those claims.

Dr. John T. Truman, who treated Chad at Massachusetts General Hospital, says the case raised important doubts about Laetrile.

"We documented for the court that cyanide was accumulating in Chad's body," he says. "It did give the public cause to pause about the uses of Laetrile."

Truman stops short of saying Chad would be alive today if his parents had allowed the chemotherapy to continue.

"I think it's probably fair to say he would have had a 50-50 chance with treatment," he says. "Without the treatment, his chances were zero."

Mrs. Green says there was never any proof that Laetrile hurt her son.

"Chad never had any side effects of cyanide poisoning. Even at the very end of his life — even at the autopsy — there were no traces of cyanide."

Chad died on Oct. 12, 1979 — 10 months after his parents took him to a clinic in Tijuana, Mexico, to continue the Laetrile treatments. He was buried in Hastings, Neb., where one of his grandparents lived.

The Greens eventually returned to face contempt of court charges in Plymouth, Mass. They were found guilty, then ordered freed.

Brant, now a professor at the New England School of Law, thinks the case established the state's right to protect children from parents who choose a dangerous medical course.

"We showed that parents can abuse their children by denying them medical care and that the state has the right to intervene aggressively to protect the children," he says.

Mrs. Green agrees that children should be protected from uncaring parents, but she says the state should not have that power over concerned parents who have to make tough, life-or-death decisions.

Services for Samuel Edwin Mickey, 85, of 1900 W. Kentucky Ave., will be at 11 a.m. Saturday at the First Christian Church with the Rev. Steve Edwards officiating. Burial will follow at Fairview Cemetery directed by Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mickey died Wednesday night in a Midland hospital.

He was born Feb. 26, 1897, in Altus, Okla., and was raised in Petersburg. In 1917, he moved to Clovis, N.M., where he married Bernese Weathers in 1922. They moved to Roswell, N.M., in 1934 and then to Midland in 1936. He had been an auto and tire dealer in Midland for many years and was last associated with Blair and Sons Leasing Co. He served in the Motor Transport Corps in World War I and was a member and elder emeritus of the First Christian Church.

Survivors include his wife; two sons, Dale Mickey of Gulfport, Miss., and Howard Mickey of Houston; a daughter, Doris Moorman of Pecos; two brothers, Ernest Mickey of Arroyo Grande, Calif., and L.W. Mickey of Wilburton, Okla.; four sisters, Eula Faris of Clovis, N.M., Rena Omey of Globe, Ariz., Laura Crow of Stockton, Calif., and Pearl McClain of Merkel; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

George C. Lair

VERNON — Services for George Cecil Lair, 75, of Vernon and formerly of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Friday in the Sullivan chapel in Vernon. Burial will follow in the East View Cemetery under the direction of Sullivan Funeral Home.

He died Wednesday in a Vernon hospital.

Lair was born June 22, 1907, in Kentucky. He was an oilfield worker.

Survivors include a son, James Lair of Vernon; a daugther, Joyce Fraticelli of Vernon; a brother, James Lair of Odessa; and two sisters, Emma Zimmerly of Odessa and Elsie Meacheam of Monahans.

Ruth Bradshaw

Ruth Bradshaw, 50, of 219 N. Eisenhower, died Wednesday evening at her residence.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Wilshire Park Baptist Church with the Rev. Chris Osborne officiating. Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park, directed by Ellis Funeral Home.

She was born Jan. 19, 1932, in Huntington Park, Calif. She was raised in Arkansas and moved to Midland from Fort Worth in 1979. She also had lived in Albuquerque. She was married to James A. Bradshaw in Fayetteville, Ark., in 1972. She was a member of Wilshire Park Baptist Church.

Survivors include her husband; two sons, John Martin Bradshaw of Plano and Stanley Bradshaw of Hurst; four daughters, Valerie Brown of Texarkana, Ark., Janice Cavin of Albuquerque, Donna Shook of Irving and Alice Bradshaw of Midland; mother, Martha Jane Grigsby of Malvern, Ark.; three sisters, Frances Avendell of Shreveport, La., Pat Yeager of Irvin and Nancy Wallen of Detroit, Mich.; and eight grandchildren.

Linda Jo Galloway

Services for Linda Jo Galloway, 47, of rural Midland, are pending at the Newnie W. Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Galloway died Wednesday evening at her residence.

She was born Feb. 12, 1935, in Hamlin. She grew up in Sweetwater, where she also graduated from high school. She married Darrell L. Galloway in Lovington, N.M., in July 1955. They lived in various towns in the West Texas area until 1970, when they moved to Midland.

Survivors include her husband and a son, Richard M. Galloway, both of Midland.

Mary Ann Gaultney

McCAMEY — Services for Mary Ann Gaultney, 76, of McCamey will be at 11 a.m. Saturday in St. James Episcopal Church in Monahans. Burial will be in Monahans Cemetery under direction of Richard W. Box Funeral Home of McCamey.

Mrs. Gaultney died Wednesday in a McCamey hospital.

She was born in Midland in 1906 and lived in Odessa before she moved to McCamey.

She was a member of St. John's Episcopal Church of Odessa and was an associate member of the Methodist Church.

Survivors include two daughters, Joyce Young of McCamey and Milly Manning of El Paso.

Ferdinand A. Koch

SANTA FE, N.M. — Services for Ferdinand A. Koch, 84, of Santa Fe, N.M., father of Charles E. Koch of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Friday at the Holy Faith Episcopal Church in Santa Fe, N.M.

He died Monday in a Santa Fe hospital after a brief illness.

Koch lived in Santa Fe for 71 years. He held a Silver Beaver Award in the Boy Scouts of America. He was a recipient of the Harris Award of the Rotary International with a perfect attendance record of 59 years. He was a charter member of the Santa Fe Rotary Club. He was the founder of Santa Fe Country Club and the Santa Fe Ski Basin. He retired as president of the Santa Fe Electric Laundry Company and New Method Cleaners.

Other survivors include his wife, four sons, 13 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

The family requests that memorials be directed to the Midland Society of University Women, P.O. Box 4291, Midland, or to the Santa Fe Rotary Club Koch Memorial Fund, La Fonda Hotel, Santa Fe, N.M.

Sadat's widow, Jihan, answers Arab rumormongers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Emerging from the seclusion of her mourning, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's widow, Jihan, is answering the rumors she says have circulated since her husband was assassinated a year ago.

Mrs. Sadat told the National Press Club on Wednesday that rumors about her have abounded in Egypt because she lived a private life and her activities were not publicized as they were while Sadat was alive.

"The rumors said that I left Cairo, I left the country, I'm not going back, I left with gold and money ... I have buildings in America," she said.

"And by the way, I have a ranch here, I don't know where exactly. I would like to know the address of it please," Mrs. Sadat said, tongue-in-cheek.

In her first visit to the United States since Sadat was slain Oct. 6, 1981, Mrs. Sadat denied she accumulated wealth while her husband was president.

Labeling her critics as "narrow-minded," she also denied that her feminism fueled the Moslem fanaticism that led to Sadat's assassination.

"I'M NOT AFRAID, if I have anything, to declare it," she said of the her finances. "I believe in what I'm doing, and I have nothing to hide."

She said the only house the Sadats own is one they built at the late president's birthplace, the Nile Delta village of Mit Abul Kom, and that their only land is the 15 acres that go with the house.

As Sadat did for the widow of his predecessor, President Gamal Abdel Nasser, President Hosni Mubarak has given the Sadat family the use of two houses in Cairo and Alexandria for life, she said, adding that they will revert to the state.

Of her rumored travels abroad, Mrs. Sadat said she in fact stayed at home, recovering from the shock of the assassination and writing a book on her life with Sadat.

She took a sabbatical leave from her teaching and Ph.D. studies at Cairo University and only visited her welfare projects twice, she said.

"IT'S TRUE THAT I'm not in the newspapers...because I'm not active any more, although just a few days before I came there were many photos with our president in our house," she said. "When I went to the tomb to my husband there were many photos because of the occasion."

On whether her campaign for women's rights hurt her husband, Mrs. Sadat said: "It never hurt him or otherwise I wouldn't have done it. On the contrary, he was giving the strength to me to continue. I never interfered in politics...I was working in social activities."

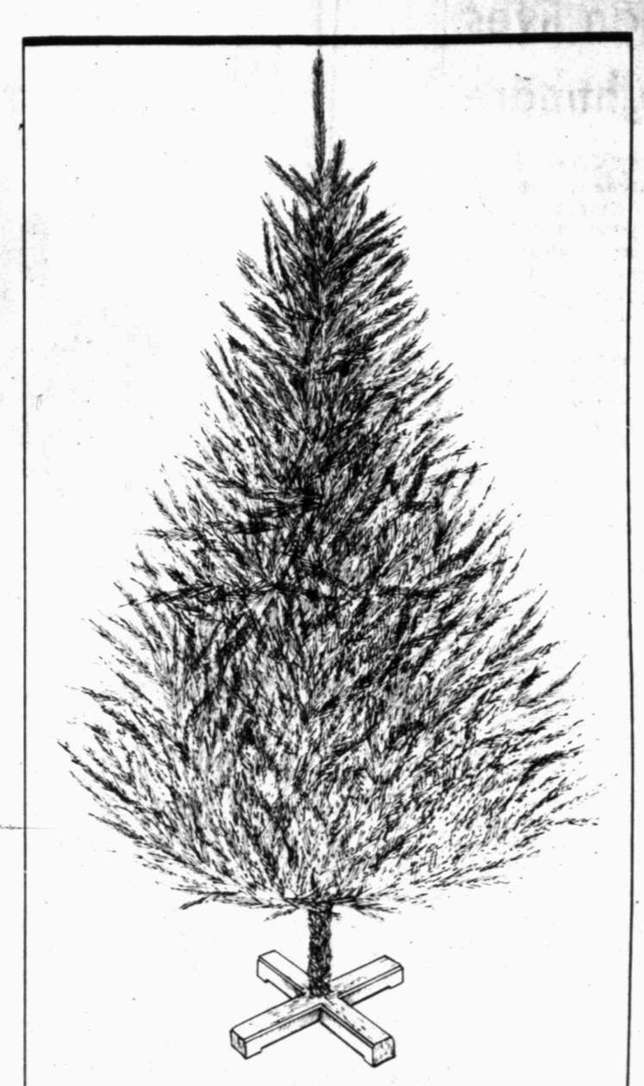

She said she has resumed work on her projects, including care for the disabled, orphans and rural women's rights.

Mrs. Sadat also noted that a recent television documentary in Britain and the United States quoted Egyptians as criticizing her because, during a state visit to her and her husband, former U.S. President Jimmy Carter kissed her on the cheek, a violation of Islamic custom.

"THEY SAID THAT this is a very bad thing. Well, if you put yourself in my shoes, what could I do?," Mrs. Sadat said. "This man I respect very much. And he was kissing me in front of my husband. It was not behind him.

"You can't imagine how I was severely criticized for this."

She said even one of her professors told her that he was saddened to see the photograph of Carter kissing her.

Man lives nightmare

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Eighteen months ago, Gary Smrekar was a highly touted laboratory technician with Frito-Lay, where he was in line for a big promotion and a seemingly limitless future.

Smrekar now rises daily at 6:30 a.m. and feeds a flock of ducks while struggling to comprehend what happened to him in a car wreck that killed three of his friends.

The wreck left Smrekar, 25, with a head injury and an IQ of 67.

He was in a coma for three weeks in Parkland Memorial Hospital in Dallas after a speeding automobile in the wrong lane struck the car in which he was a passenger on April 28, 1981.

THE LAST 18 months have been a living nightmare for Smrekar.

When he regained consciousness, the left side of his brain was severely damaged. His head was tilted to the side and his eyes were glazed. He did not speak for a month and a half, and two weeks after that started learning to walk.

He now lives at the Tangren Rehabilitation Center south of Austin, where his treatment in a special program for brain-damaged patients costs $14,000 a month. Tests last April showed he was functioning at the level of a 7-year-old.

Before the accident, Smrekar had scored 65 points out of a possible 66 on his job review at Frito-Lay, where he was a lab technician performing genetic experiments in the cloning of potatoes.

"Gary was one of the most outstanding young men, especially at that age, that I have ever worked with," said Dr. John Carmichael, director of the Frito-Lay agricultural research group where Smrekar worked.

NOW SMREKAR'S achievements are small — and painful.

Everything comes to him slowly. To learn something, he must be told 20 — or even 50 — times, and with his progress comes frustration and emotional problems, said Dr. Stanley Seaton, director of the center.

Seaton said that unlike someone born retarded, Smrekar senses he has lost something he can't regain and suffers from frustration and depression.

When Smrekar first came to the center, he could not carry on a conversation, Seaton said.

"He simply repeated the same half-dozen sentences that had been said to him: 'My name is Gary Don Smrekar. I was in an automobile accident. Three people were killed. My friends are now in heaven.'

SEATON SAID Smrekar's improvements have been modest.

"Now if you meet him, he may still use some of those sentences, but most of that kind of repetitive talk and that manner is gone. He can carry on some conversation, but it'll be interspersed with things that don't tie in."

The center, one of a handful in the nation, emphasizes rehabilitating brain-damaged patients through repetition of lessons and a predictable routine.

Few people with severe head injuries survived 20 years ago, but about 400,000 people annually live through serious head injuries because of improvements in medical technigues, Seaton said.

While Smrekar is learning to perform some of life's simple tasks, Seaton said most complex brain function — such as abstract reasoning and an understanding of social inhibitions — probably will remain lost.

EVEN THE minimal progress is terribly high-priced.

Smrekar's $14,000 monthly bills are paid in part by a multi-million-dollar insurance settlement awarded in September. His lawyer, Frank L. Branson, said the award gives Smrekar up to $25 million during his lifetime.

Smrekar's parents had sued the company that employed Bobby Joe Rust, the driver who hit Smrekar's car.

Amputee excels at hunting

LAKEWOOD, Colo. (AP) — Ray Guerra sometimes gives a shock to other hunters who happen upon him along some brush-covered slope.

"They look down and see I don't have legs," said Guerra, smiling, "and I guess they think, 'What the hell is this guy doing out here?'"

What this guy is doing is hunting — and usually quite well, although he has had his share of the kind of waterhaul hunts all hunters experience. Guerra, 36, of Lakewood, has killed several whitetail deer, three mule deer and two antelope despite being a double amputee. He still seeks his first elk but plans to remedy that in a hunt next month near Craig.

"It's funny, I've never associated firearms with hostility," said the Vietnam War veteran. "I've been able to make a distinction that some other guys who were in Vietnam have trouble making. They hear a shot or smell gunpowder and it brings a terrible flashback to them. Once in a while something will click in my memory, too, but it's not something I can't cope with."

IN FACT, there isn't much Ray Guerra can't cope with. But coping wasn't easy at first, after a manually detonated land mine blew his legs off during a firefight near a village north of Da Nang in 1966. Guerra was a Marine Corps radioman, one of three brothers from Texas who served in Vietnam.

Guerra, now married and with two children, knows he was more fortunate than some of the Vietnam veterans who came back to a torment of emotional crippling, drifting off like ghost ships, alienated from friends and society.

"After I got out of the hospital in California, I went home to the small town I grew up in (San Benito, Texas) and I got a world of support there, from family and friends and everybody," said Guerra. "The anti-war sentiment didn't prevail in small towns like it did in the big cities."

Guerra had hunted a little with his father and friends as a youngster. After returning from the war, he said that his disability was accepted by his friends and he began to join them on hunting excursions.

He hunted whitetail deer and javelina in the Texas cactus and thornbrush country. He fished in the surf in his wheelchair along the Gulf of Mexico beaches. "You should have seen the looks I got out there..."

LATER, AFTER moving to Colorado, he went after mule deer, elk, antelope and bear. He took a doe antelope earlier his year east of Colorado Springs. He bagged a four-point mule deer near Kiowa last year.

A veterans' benefits counselor for the Veterans' Administration, Guerra was a top competitor this summer in the second National Veteran Wheelchair Games in Wood, Wis. He won a silver medal in trap shooting, a bronze medal in archery and was a finalist in weight-lifting, shot put, discus and javelin.

How does he hunt? How does he physically manage it?

He drives a jeep specially fitted with hand controls. "I drive my jeep as far as it will take me, and then I get out and go in my wheelchair," he said.

Guerra said he will tackle most any terrain in his wheelchair, unless it is too steep or rough. "I've taken it four or five miles at a time," he said. "Then I get out and cover up the wheelchair to camouflage it and I go on the ground.

"What I try to do is get myself in a place where animals will appear near me — on a trail or at a crossing. Because I can't stalk an animal in certain types of terrain, I have a large supply of something all hunters should have a little of — patience."

College being rejected

Hearst Feature Service

PARIS — Jean-Claude Evrard, an 18-year-old student with a consistent B-plus average, stunned his banker father recently by announcing blandly that he would not be going to college but had decided, instead, to learn cabinet-making.

Like a growing number of Europeans of his generation, the young Frenchman has rejected the idea of a university diploma. He has decided that a manual trade will prove a better guarantee of a steady livelihood during the course of his lifetime when, some economists estimate, one in four of his contemporaries may never hold a full-time job.

More and more young people in France, as in Germany, Britain and other Western European countries, have been turning away from higher education. Theirs is not, as it was in the America of the 1960s, an ephemeral gesture of generational protest. It's simply that they doubt a degree still makes much economic sense.

"I would have liked university," Jean-Claude explained. "But I feel it's a luxury I can't afford. Millions of graduates all over Europe can't find jobs. What's the point of joining them?"

ONCE HE recovered from his shock, the elder Evrard, a Paris bank executive, confessed he could think of few reasons to oppose his son's decision.

"He'll be the first member of our family in three generations not to have at least one university degree," he said. "But, in all honesty, I couldn't really tell him he was wrong. The economic picture suggests that having been to a university will be an irrelevance, at best, in the future."

Unlike America, it isn't the cost of a university education that poses an obstacle. Nearly everywhere in Europe, tuition is free and, even in these hard times, government "grants" to cover students' living costs are generally available.

Nor have Europeans grown blase about higher education. Less than a quarter-century ago, university enrollment in countries like France and Britain numbered only a few hundred thousand. Going to college was still, as it had been down through the centuries, the privilege of a small elite. It was only two decades ago that, in a changing social and political climate, university doors were opened to a much broader spectrum of society. France's student population, which was only 180,000 in 1958, rose to well over a million only 12 years later.

European universities were regularly criticized for turning out too many liberal arts graduates, teachers and lawyers, instead of scientists and engineers. But, during the expansionist years of Europe's economic "miracle," most graduates had little trouble fitting in somewhere.

THAT SLOWLY changed as Europe's economy turned sour. Now, according to the European Economic Commission, graduates form one-fifth of Europe's 12 million jobless. By this decade's end, when total unemployment is thought likely to reach 20 million, the proportion of degree holders among the jobless is expected to rise to one-quarter.

At the same time, university entrances in EEC countries have been dropping by about 5 percent a year since 1979.

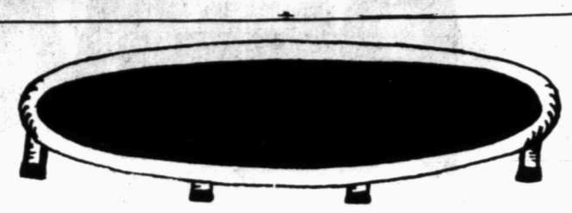

Tradition vanishing

The "traditional" American family, consisting of wage-earner husband, a homemaker wife and two children, is fast becoming a thing of the past. Only one household in 18 now fits that description.

Designers of cars talk shop

Hearst Feature Service

NEW YORK — There is one select group of designers who live and work in anonymity while shaping one of the most significant and expensive purchases an American will make: the ubiquitous automobile. These are the men who head the design staffs of America's four major car producing corporations.

They bear the ultimate credit, as well as the blame, for the way the vehicles look and work.

While each man has a unique outlook, the four experts share certain concerns and visions that are equally fascinating indicators of the shape of cars to come. Here are the quartet's capsule comments as reported in the October issue of Town & Country magazine:

Irvin W. Rybicki, Vice-President, Design Staff, General Motors Corp.: "The role of the car designer has become far more complex in the past 10 or 15 years. Today, we must consider government-mandated safety standards, fuel efficiency, weight, costs, quality and aerodynamics. These are issues that weren't raised before. Today's designer has to understand every aspect of the automobile. It's not a matter of being decorative anymore; he is a total designer. We're even training our designers to work with the computer today, because we can do things so much faster in the studio that way. If you can speed up the process, it gives you the opportunity to look at a wider range of design ideas. The computer will never create the theme for you, but it sure can help to develop it."

DONALD F. KOPKA, Vice-President, Design Staff, Ford Motor Company: "One of our toughest problems today is moving our production designs into the technologies that are going to be available. We're advancing so fast in our understanding of package efficiency, aerodynamics and the use of new materials that we're now ahead of our ability to incorporate these elements in our cars. For the first time, we've reached out so far ahead in design research that we're now frustrated by our inability to get these concepts into production. It's mainly a problem with economics. For example, we know that certain composites of graphite and boron would be great but they're far too expensive to use in cars right now. But they will be cheaper when the volume goes up."

Don R. DeLaRossa, Vice-President, Product Design, Chrysler Corporation: "In the 1990s the four-passenger, four-door sedan will emerge, and the area of the market that required six- or even eight-passenger capacity will be served by another kind of vehicle that doesn't exist today. A so-called mini-van, for instance, opens up all kinds of new possibilities, and in fact we have one that's coming out shortly."

Richard A. Teague, Vice-President, Automotive Styling, American Motors: "A specific aspect of car design that is becoming more of a challenge is the cowl area in front of the instrument panel/glove compartment at the base of the windshield. You literally have to design the instrument panel around the air-handling system (heating, ventilation and air conditioning); get that the way you want it, and then design the rest of the car's interior. It's not only the instruments, of course, they take up less space now with component miniaturizing, but also the ductwork for the air-handling, provision for radios of five or six different types, and all of the controls. On top of this, each new generation of cars is requiring us to compress all of this into a constantly diminishing space."

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Exact method of leprosy transmission not known

Dear Dr. Solomon: How does a person catch leprosy? And how contagious is it? I read about a husband and wife living together even though one had leprosy. This would seem to be very dangerous. — Alice, Reno, Nev.

Dear Alice: The exact method by which leprosy (Hansen's disease) is transmitted is not known; however, there appears to be general agreement that it is transmitted in the same way as tuberculosis, via the respiratory system.

Most people do not appear to be susceptible to leprosy. In addition, most transmissions probably take place before the disease is diagnosed in a patient. In the United States, it is likely that only people living in the same household with the affected person would be a substantial risk of contracting the disease.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't like to take medicine if I can help it, but I don't like to live on bread and water either. What I'm getting at is that I have gout and I know that if I don't watch my diet, I'll have to take pills. Do these pills cause any side effects? — Murray, Cleveland.

Dear Murray: Patients with gout should practice moderation in their diets, but since when does moderation mean bread and water? As for your question about medication, all drugs have the potential for side effects. However, according to Dr. Bertrand Agus, of the New York University School of Medicine, the drugs prescribed for the treatment of gout have been found to be safe after being used for long periods of time.

The majority of my patients with gout are adequately controlled with diet and/or medication.

Dear Dr. Solomon: This may sound silly to you, but my wife and I have arguments because I don't like to wear a hat. She says it's important to wear one to be well-dressed, and that it's especially important during the winter to protect my health. May I have your opinion? — Eddie, Buffalo, N.Y.

Dear Eddie: I'm not going to get involved in a sartorial discussion about what a well-dressed man should or should not wear. But I can tell you that a hat will keep you warmer in winter. About 40 percent of body heat is lost through the head, and a head covering, preferably a wool cap, can be very helpful when the temperature is low.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've heard people say you can tell about a person by feeling the bumps on his head. The latest is that you can tell something about the personality by studying fingerprints. Have you heard of this? — Sam, Detroit

Dear Sam: There have been reports in the medical literature about the subject you raise, but I can't confirm it or refute it.

County has timber worth four cents

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — There's plenty of tall timber in Idaho, but some counties come out on the short end of the stick.

On Tuesday, counties containing U.S. Forest Service land within their boundaries received checks from the government as their annual share of revenues yielded by the property.

Top dog was Shoshone County, which got $1.6 million.

But Jefferson County, with only a speck of Forest Service land, received a check for 4 cents.

Idaho Treasurer Marjorie Ruth Moon had a simple explanation: the recession. "Last year," she said. "they got 32 cents."

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, October 15, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Economist John Kenneth Galbraith, actresses Linda Lavin ("Alice") and Penny Marshall ("Laverne & Shirley"), historian Arthur Schlesinger were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Chrysler chairman Lee Iacocca, "Godfather" author Mario Puzo and Baltimore Orioles' pitcher Jim Palmer. Long hours and hard work pay off handsomely in the months ahead. Do not despair if a certain amount of confusion marks employment affairs. Eventually everything works out to your liking. Luck goes with you when you travel. Be on the lookout for new business-career opportunities.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A good day to travel if you can get away early. Put business considerations ahead of your personal desires. Protect yourself against an extravagant friend or relative.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A change in habits wins you friends and makes your co-workers more cooperative. Your first impressions are likely to be correct. Meeting with those who share your community interests proves rewarding.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Work tirelessly to attain your goals and progress will be very quick. Postpone signing legal documents until next week. Mate gets good news. Your weekend plans are subject to sudden change.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You receive a phone call that leaves you cheerful. Avoid hurting someone's feelings. Confide in a friend about a work problem. Broken promises could leave you feeling shortchanged.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your patience may be sorely tried today. Ignore any frustrations and think positively about your new responsibilities. A romantic interlude sets the stage for a happy weekend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be feeling tense because of something you heard that is not true. Check it out. Thorny problems can be swiftly dealt with if you are honest with yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): An unexpected change in your finances could cause dissension between you and your partner. How you handle yourself now is more important than any mistakes you might have made in the past.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spending a day at home can be useful for working on complex projects. Make certain higher-ups understand your need for a quiet environment. Be more prudent when shopping.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Do not discard old associations in favor of new ones. Learn from your past mistakes. A heart-to-heart talk with an older person could help improve a financial situation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your creative or artistic talents are recognized at last! A small celebration is in order. Share the good news with a loved one who has made sacrifices with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The morning hours are conducive to success. Discuss mutual funds with financial experts before making any changes. Your way with words makes quite an impression on an attractive new acquaintance!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Adopt a more realistic approach to both your work and money management. You need to get everything in writing. Seek help from an expert who is willing to share his resources or experience.

A young, unknown team eked out a 1 International Match Point victory in the final playoff to become Canada's representatives at the World Bridge Olympiad, now taking place in Biarritz, France. The winners sound like a mini U.N.: Nick Gartaganis, Voyteck Pomykalski, Zygmunt Marcinski and Gordon Crispin. This deal is from one of the qualifying rounds, and features another of Canada's unsung experts.

South made a trial bid in clubs, suggesting that there might be a game if his partner had some help in that suit. Since North had a maximum raise and a major club honor, he jumped to game even though he had only three trumps.

West led a diamond. The defenders collected two tricks in the suit and continued a third round, ruffed by declarer. It seemed that the fate of his contract hinged on the trump finesse. Bridge experts, however, hate to resort to anything as plebian as a finesse if there is another line available, so Greg Arbour of Montreal, who held the South cards, opted for another line which was not without an element of risk.

Declarer cashed the ace and king of clubs, followed by three rounds of spades, ending in dummy. He breathed a sigh of relief when the spades broke kindly. Now he led a diamond from dummy. Had East ruffed, declarer would have discarded his club loser and then played to drop the queen of hearts, a line of play that would have succeeded. East elected to pitch his queen of clubs, and declarer ruffed low. Then he exited with his last club. West won, but declarer had a position in trumps where he would be sure of his contract if West had either the queen or ten of trumps – again, the nine of a suit proved its worth.

Arbour picked up a game swing on the deal, because at the other table declarer relied on the trump finesse and ended up down one.

Suffering the ills

The 2.6 million Americans who served in the Vietnam War, including a number of Midlanders, have suffered tragedy and affliction enough. Sadly, it's only now — a decade or more later — that some of the ramifications of that conflict are surfacing.

In his memoir, Vietnam veteran Philip Caputo described how he felt after returning. He was, he wrote, suffering from "combat veteranitis," which he defined as "an inability to concentrate, a childlike fear of darkness, a tendency to tire easily, chronic nightmares, an intolerance of loud noises — especially doors slamming and cars backfiring — and alternating moods of depression and rage that came over me for no apparent reason."

Caputo's symptoms were not unique. During the 1970s, psychologists began diagnosing thousands of cases of combat veteranitis. They named the condition post-Vietnam syndrome (PVS). Says Max Cleveland, former head of the Veterans Administration, "It's a feeling of malaise or disaffection or alienation." The symptoms manifest themselves most often, he says, "in those who were most exposed to combat, those who were under the most stress, those who came from the most disadvantaged groups of society and were the least prepared in terms of age or background to handle that first-hand experience."

Today PVS is classified as a type of post-traumatic stress disorder — any emotional upset that manifests itself some time after one experiences a traumatic event such as a plane crash, fire or, in the case of the Vietnam veterans, an unpopular, unsuccessful war.

While most Vietnam veterans have adjusted to life back home, as many as 650,000 have experienced varying froms of emotional distress related to their war experiences. Those problems will be researched next Monday through Wednesday at a National Conference on the Treatment of Post-Vietnam Stress Syndrome in Kings Mill, Ohio.

Perhaps help will be forthcoming for troubled Vietnam veterans the nation over. But the real message is for the government and American society to recognize that war is always hell. Society lives with the repercussions for years.

Wars cannot always be avoided. But the price tag is always high, in human life and suffering as Vietnam has shown. The value of war must be carefully weighed.

The case against Nimmo

It was predicted Veterans Administration Chief Robert Nimmo's head would roll soon after the November election, but decapitation didn't take that long. Nimmo has now resigned.

Columnist Jack Anderson called Nimmo President Reagan's worst appointee. After Nimmo retired from office as a California state senator in 1980, he was appointed to head the Veterans Administration. Nimmo strode into federal office like a first mate on a hell ship, firing subordinates he considered disloyal, ordering a private elevator, remodeling of his office space, providing himself with a limousine and chauffeur, all at taxpayers' expense.

Worst of all, he was insensitive to the problems of the nation's 25 million war veterans. He suggested that veterans who seek or accept aid from the government are "malingering welfare bums" and those who claim to suffer ill health from Agent Orange, the defoliant used in Vietnam, were suffering nothing worse than "teen-age acne."

Veterans organizations rebelled. Obviously, Nimmo had become a political liability to President Reagan — and his resignation came just ahead of a Government Accounting Office report on Nimmo's use of chartered military aircraft, first-class air travel and the chauffeur.

The case of Nimmo is closed. Now the task before the Reagan administration is to find a new administrator who will bring stability and leadership to the important agency.

Another View:

A policy of honesty

When administration officials talk to the Soviets, they strike a posture of great American military strength. We want to get along with you if we can, they say, but if you insist on confrontationist behavior the United States is well able to take care of itself.

But when the administration speaks to Congress and the American people, it strikes a different note. The Soviet Union, it says, has achieved advantage — especially in strategic nuclear weapons — that will be highly dangerous unless the United States moves quickly to redress the balance.

We do not know what the Kremlin, which plays similar games of its own, makes of all this. But we strongly suspect that the effect is counterproductive both in terms of U.S. public opinion and relations with this country's allies.

These thoughts are occasioned by the mini-flap that developed recently when news dispatches from London quoted the authoritative International Institute for Strategic Studies as saying that it "does not endorse many of the current claims for supposed U.S. weakness in strategic forces." It turned out that the institute's actual report did not say that; the assessment apparently came from a press release or briefing.

In any case the Pentagon responded that it continues to believe that the United States has lost strategic nuclear-superiority to Moscow.

This is an area in which honest men can disagree. There is no question that the United States is still ahead in the numbers of warheads aboard land-based ICBMs, submarine-fired missiles and bombers. But the Soviet Union has larger missiles, heavier warheads — and the undoubted capacity to surpass the United States in warhead numbers.

Thus the trend is definitely unfavorable. Policy disputes revolve around whether the balance has already tipped, and whether the wisest American course is a rapid buildup of U.S. strategic forces or a stop-where-you-are nuclear freeze.

The Reagan administration favors the first course, on grounds that the Soviets will not have an incentive to embrace a genuine nuclear arms-reduction agreement unless they have reason to fear that the alternative is a markedly stronger U.S. nuclear force.

The Pentagon also has learned from hard experience that it does not get adequate funds from Congress by going up to Capitol Hill and bragging about U.S. strength. There is a natural inclination to look at the nuclear balance through dark glasses when talking to domestic audiences.

One obvious danger is that the Soviets might someday take the Pentagon's protestations of inferiority more seriously than they should and stumble into a war — creating situation through misjudgment. Another is that the nations that depend upon the United States for their security will become nervous and copper their bets by edging closer to the Russians.

There are signs that this is already happening to some degree in Western Europe.

In the long run U.S. national security would be better served by a policy of maximum honesty, of saying the same thing to domestic audiences that is said to the Kremlin. But we are not holding our breath.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Art investigation reveals more Navy abuses

WASHINGTON — Officials at the Navy Publications and Printing Service headquarters in Washington may be in hot water for commissioning paintings of such exotic unofficial subjects as landscapes, wildlife, a bullfighter and even a belly dancer.

Jack Anderson

It's not just this abuse of Navy artists' time and talent, which I first disclosed last July, that has caught the attention of the Naval Investigative Service. Nor is it just the response of the printing-service brass — they went to extraordinary lengths to identify my sources instead of correcting the abuses — that has the Navy investigators nosing around.

They're also checking into questionable accounting practices that inspectors discovered as early as 1978. Navy sources told my associates John Dillon and Donald Goldberg that the ledgers at the printing-service headquarters were in such hopeless disarray that branch offices maintained their own sets of books in hopes of keeping the accounts straight.

Printing-service management director James Cherny and program-management boss Ray Vandemark aren't sticking around to face the music. They're taking off on wide-ranging "inspection" trips that uncharitable observers might call junkets.

Cherny's grand European tour includes stops at such important naval facilities as Frankfurt, Heidelberg and Munich (where Oktoberfest is in full swing). The schedule also includes Naples, Rome, Madrid and London.

Government Printing Office chief Danforth Sawyer, incidentally, declined an invitation to take an earlier version of the trip on grounds that it was a waste of taxpayers' money.

Cost is evidently of no concern to Cherny, though. Internal Navy cables show he is traveling first-cabin all the way. One cable sets the tone: "Request Strand Palace Hotel in London. Request special service car and driver while in Germany ... All arrangements are for VIP and Diplomatic personnel."

And while Cherny ordered double rooms for himself at the various stopovers, staffers from the Joint Committee on Printing who are accompanying him are making do with single rooms.

Meanwhile, Vandemark's schedule is taking him to the far reaches of the Pacific to inspect printing facilities on board ships. The stopovers include San Diego, Honolulu, Tokyo and Yokosuka, the Philippines city of San Miguel and Guam. He took similar junkets, incidentally, in 1980 and 1981.

In an internal memo, Vandemark gave as one of the primary purposes of his current trip an inspection of the deteriorating print shop aboard the USS Midway. Vandemark described the carrier's printing facility as "in shambles."

But he also noted, "Unfortunately, the Midway will be deployed during my visit to Yokosuka." In other words, the ship and its crumbling print shop will be far out to sea when Vandemark swings by. He reportedly plans to brief another printing specialist, who will make the inspection when the Midway returns to port.

In the memo justifying the trip, Vandemark noted that the Midway "has not been visited by (printing service officials) for in excess of eight years and it's time that we get aboard." Yet other internal documents show that Vandemark was authorized to visit the Midway for a "director's conference" in December 1980.

Was the carrier out to sea that time, too? Vandemark is clearly having trouble making connections with the Midway. Maybe he should try to get the skipper to hang around by offering him an oil portrait of a belly dancer.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: When Labor Secretary Ray Donovan's old construction company hired a private eye named Robert Shortley to find out who was leaking stories about Donovan to the press, the White House took pains to disassociate itself from the investigation — even though Shortley's wife, Maiselle, is a confidential assistant to White House aide Morton Blackwell. But last night, Maiselle Shortley was on the host committee of a lavish tribute to Donovan at the Mayflower Hotel. "I happen to support Ray Donovan and all he's doing at the Labor Department," she explained, adding that her husband's detective work is strictly his business, not hers.

— When Wendy Borcherdt, a "New Right" California crony of President Reagan, was bounced from the White House Public Liaison Office last summer in a personality clash with Elizabeth Dole, she promptly found a job as acting deputy under secretary of education. One of her first steps was to order her large staff to report to her all travel plans, mailings of more than 10 letters or meetings with outside organizations — matters usually handled at a much less exalted level. Education Department officials are grumbling that the White House's gain was their loss.

WATCH ON WASTE: The much-criticized General Services Administration continues its profligate habits. So far this year it has spent more than $115,000 on new locks and keys for federal office doors in the Washington area, and it obviously didn't do much shopping around. For example, GSA billed the Commerce Department $2.53 per key on one order; a survey of local locksmiths showed they could have provided the keys for as little as 75 cents each and no more than $1.40 apiece.

GEORGE F. WILL

Keynesian economics: Voice from the grave

George F. Will

In America, more people denounce him than read him. The denouncers are conservatives — although few are as truly conservative as he was. They hold him responsible for FDR's economic interventionism — although it is hard to believe FDR curled up with "The General Theory of Employment, Interest, and Money" (1936).

Keynes argued that a flattened economy tends to stay flat, absent government stimulation. Of course, Keynes wrote when there was no problem of a powerful underlying inflationary pressure. But in a loose sense, we are all Keynesians now — all of us, at any rate, who reject the notion that a sick economy heals itself by "natural" recuperative powers, without government action.

President Reagan has tried bold fiscal and monetary actions to stimulate consumer and capital-goods spending to power the economy upward. It has not worked in 19 months but, then, FDR's Keynesianism did not really work in 8 years. Tojo and Hitler ended the Depression.

Today, Republicans' supply-side theories are being challenged by Democrats' equally implausible investment-side theories. Both sides are suffering failure of nerve.

The Republican theory is — or was — that large tax cuts would be self-financing: They would be so stimulative that there would be a gusher of revenues to the government — higher yields from lower rates. This theory was a means of blinking away a political problem: No one likes tax increases, and there was not — and Reagan did not try to shape — a consensus for substantial budget cuts. (He foreshadowed cuts, but not in specific programs — only in "waste, fraud and abuse.")

Today, Democrats are engaging in a similar sort of wishful thinking about self-financing panaceas. Pointing to the nation's crumbling physical infrastructure of roads, bridges and water systems, Democrats argue, plausibly, that with so much work to be done and so many idle workers, it should not be beyond the wit of man to get the work and the workers together.

But how will the government, which is out of money, pay for this — by printing money? By borrowing it? By raising taxes? The lame answer Democrats too often offer is that putting people to work will generate so much in income taxes, and save so much in welfare costs, that public works spending will be — you guessed it — self-financing. To the extent that Democrats address the revenue side of the problem, they talk vaguely about taxing "corporations" (actually, corporations do not pay taxes, they collect taxes) or taxing "the rich" (as though the middle class does not have most of America's wealth).

Two kinds of private-sector spending can drive the economy — consumer spending and capital goods spending. But capital spending will lag as long as 30 percent of existing industrial capacity is idle. And consumer credit and retail-sales figures are so bad that some merchants are already guilty of the sin of despair regarding Christmas sales. The 89.9 percent of the work force that is employed seems to be saving (anti-social behavior, in the circumstances) against a rainy day.

And how can government prime the pump without making matters worse? It already is borrowing too much, and there are risks in raising new revenues during a deep recession. When you canvas the available choices, the choice the president has made seems as defensible as the others. He has chosen to trust the slowing of inflation, and the slowing of the growth of government claims on private-sector wealth, to stir the nation's economic energies.

Because all the choices are so dicey, there is a temptation to vent frustrations against foreign devils. Japan-bashing seems to be gaining favor, even with Walter Mondale who, regarding humanity generally, has a heart the size of a hotel. I take a lenient view of what candidates say when intoxicated by presidential ambitions, but Mondale overdid it when he recently told some steelworkers: "Today, when you go around the world, you need an FBI investigator to find a product made in the United States."

But Mondale is right to say that Japan's trade policies are often predatory, and America's response should be, as Mondale says, "tough." However, the toughness required of presidents is not shown by persons who will not disabuse steelworkers of the idea that the future will be like the past, or the idea that present problems are in significant measure the fault of foreigners.

Midland suffers faulty image

To The Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to correct a bad misconception concerning Midland's alleged inability to properly accommodate a convention. The Fall Meeting of the Texas Section of the American Society of Civil Engineers was held in Midland, Sept. 23-25, 1982. The headquarters was the Hilton Hotel and most of the meetings, including an exhibit area for manufacturers' representatives, were held in Midland Center. The director, Mr. Tom Moore, and his staff at Midland Center did a fine job taking care of our every requirement.

We tried something different by using the WATS line for reservations from all over the state of Texas, and the Hilton staff handled it all without a hitch. Anita Rogers, director of sales, and Linda Kenagy, banquet sales director, both went well beyond the call of duty to see that all our functions held at the Hilton ran smoothly and well.

The crew at the Chamber of Commerce, particularly Dodie Devore, director of Convention and Visitors Bureau, and Jimmy Dyke, director of Marketing and Facilities, all performed a job well done. The pre-planning and coordination of people and facilities could not have occurred without their help and assistance.

Mr. Charles Scott, the Ranchland Hills Country Club Manager, and his staff took fabulous care of our Spouses' Luncheon on Friday and our Membership Banquet Friday night. We all certainly appreciated the use of the outstanding facilities at the Ranchland Hills Country Club, including the use of the golf course on Wednesday afternoon.

In summary, the 250 plus folks at our meeting join me in assuring any other group contemplating a meeting or convention in the "Tall City" that they can rest easy. Midland can handle the assignment!

Editorial praise

To The Editor:

The recent editorial, "Misdirected decision," deserves commendation for a number of reasons:

— It is an excellent, precise, unbiased account of the internal workings of City Council

— It carried a message to the people to "wake up;" for the city government's legislative process, designed for their protection, is not being adhered to; the peoples' voices should be heard.

To the statement that the failure of traffic safety, congestion and flow were ignored, may I add the following:

Fire Station P5 at Garfield and Golf Course, responsible for protecting our businesses and residences in an area from Garfield to Midkiff beginning with the northside of Cuthbert and extending to Neely, uses Cuthbert's current westbound traffic for rapid access to the above; likewise ambulances, and traffic officers.

If Cuthbert is changed to two-way traffic with no left turns onto Garfield, ambulances bringing patients from east of Garfield would be denied a direct southbound route to the hospital.

All of these statements seem to outweigh any individual needs; therefore, for the safety of many, let's keep Cuthbert's traffic one-way westbound!

Confused rights

To The Editor:

Marko's attitude in her letter to the editor (Oct. 7, 1982) is indicative of her confusion of civil rights with social rights. Private clubs such as she mentions (the Petroleum Club and the Greentree Country Club) are based on the rights of individuals to associate freely with whomsoever they choose, and on the right of elective privacy.

There are clubs in other areas, and possibly in this area, which restrict membership and attendance to women only. There is a private club in Midland which has an age-limitation requirement for membership. This is the prerogative of each group. It is also the prerogative of individuals to refuse to join such groups. For someone to criticize another's right of free association is effrontery, indeed.

To play dog in the manger is unseemly. Decrying individual preferences by accusations of discrimination is moral bigotry. I've no doubt that Marko would support clubs for women. I do.

Salvadoran rebels vow to intensify efforts to topple rightist government

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Leftist rebels who commandeered four towns, dynamited utilities and blocked highways in vicious fighting vowed today to intensify their bid to topple the U.S.-backed rightist government.

Guerrilla and government reports gave conflicting casualty figures in the latest fighting in the 3-year-old civil war, but observers called it the heaviest in six months.

Military reports said 74 people were killed this week, including 33 soldiers and 34 guerrillas. They said more than 100 were wounded, included 27 soldiers.

Rebel underground radio broadcasts claimed guerrillas killed or wounded 83 soldiers and captured 116 in two days of fighting. The rebels claimed they seized 182 weapons, including a 90mm cannon and 30,000 rounds of automatic rifle ammunition. The broadcasts gave no rebel casualties.

On Wednesday, two clandestine broadcasting stations, Radio Venceremos and Radio Farabundo Marti, warned people to stay off highways between today and Sunday and said more utilities will be sabotaged, a favorite guerrilla tactic.

"Within the framework of our campaign against the rightist and fascist armed forces high command, we will continue to cut electric power and we call on people to take the necessary measures when electricity is off," one rebel broadcast said. It did not say what these measures were.

About 1.3 million of the country's 4.8 million residents were without water, electricity and telephone service in eastern El Salvador after rebels dynamited power lines early Wednesday. Phone service to the area has been disrupted since Tuesday when three microwave antennas were blown up.

Four bombs wrecked telephone switch boxes in the capital Wednesday night, affecting service in the southside. One explosion blew a huge hole in the street pavement two blocks from the presidential residence.

In the countryside, vicious firefights erupted between rebels and soldiers after guerrillas blocked several major roads Wednesday, including the Panamerican and Coastal highways along the eastern part of the country.

The guerrillas began their renwed campaign Sunday night after a long lull, overrunning a 100-man military post and seizing Las Vueltas, 50 miles north of the capital.

On Tuesday, they retook Torola, Perquin and San Fernando, 105 miles north of here near the Honduran border, where guerrilla legions have long been strong.

The three towns had been held by the guerrillas for almost a year, until the army took them in a massive anti-rebel sweep in June when 200 people were reported killed.

The leftists have not been successful in past efforts to overthrow the government. They lost one bid to seize power when a January 1980 offensive collapsed for lack of popular support.

A second offensive, lasting one week, failed to prevent Constituent Assembly elections on March 28, which leftists boycotted.

U.S. will retaliate if Israel ousted from U.N.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick threatened to slash the economic lifeblood of the United Nations if Arab hard-liners succeed in ousting Israel from the General Assembly.

She told reporters Wednesday that such a move would provoke an American walkout from the 157-member assembly.

It would "clearly threaten the very lifeblood of the United Nations" because other major countries would join the United States and cause an "unraveling" of the world body, she said.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick spoke of Reagan administration cutbacks in the U.S. contribution to the U.N. budget if Israel were unseated. The United States contributes 25 percent of the annual U.N. budget.

She said U.S. diplomats worldwide were using a "full-court press" in lobbying against the ouster campaign, spearheaded by Libya and Iraq in response to the Sept. 16-18 massacre of at least 300 Palestinian refugees in Beirut.

The Arab nations blame Israeli forces who invaded Lebanon June 6 for the massacre, carried out by rightist Lebanese Christian militias in the Israeli-guarded Sabra and Chatilla camps. The Arabs say the bloodbath makes Israel unfit to sit in the General Assembly.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick predicted the Arabs would not push their challenge of Israel's credentials to a floor fight.

But she noted that the hard-liners succeeded in getting Imre Hollai, the Hungarian president of the Assembly's 37th session, to postpone a vote on credentials by a week, until Oct. 25, to allow them more time to swing African, Asian and other Third World countries behind the ouster drive.

Because of this, she said, the Reagan administration was giving fair warning that it will abide by recent resolutions in Congress calling for an American walkout if Israel is denied the right to participate in any U.N. body.

"This administration considers itself constrained by and bound by those resolutions," Mrs. Kirkpatrick told reporters.

"I cannot imagine that the United States would, in fact, continue its normal schedule of payments to the United Nations under such circumstances (as Israel's ouster) since the Congress of the United States has expressed itself by such overwhelming majorities."

Dutch squatters smash windows at banks, police posts in riots

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Squatters shattered windows at 16 banks and two unmanned police posts in a surge of vandalism following two days of major street clashes, police said.

The new disturbances Wednesday came as Premier Andries van Agt announced at the Hague that he will not serve in the new coalition government his centrist party is trying to form. At 51, he said he is too fatigued to continue in politics.

Amsterdam police spokesman Bob Hoornstra said the roving bands of squatters struck early Wednesday in apparently random raids around Amsterdam. No arrests were reported.

The disturbances ended by mid-day and there were no reports of later problems.

The vandalism came after two days of street riots here that began Monday when police repossessed three buildings occupied by squatters, who are demanding the government provide additional housing.

Renaldo Franceschi, 40-year-old supervisor of a Houston drilling and construction company, is welcomed home by his family after being held hostage for 155 days in Iraq. Franceschi says he never feared for his life during the ordeal but did resent being taken captive.

Wood's widow tells of shooting

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Kathryn Wood was talking to her daughter on the telephone when she heard a single shot, dropped the phone and ran outside to find her husband, U.S. District Judge John H. Wood, lying near his car.

"I looked down, picked up his head and said, 'John H., who shot you?' " Mrs. Wood testified Wednesday in a choked voice at the trial of three people accused of conspiring to kill Wood on May 29, 1979. "I undid his tie and ran back into the house" to phone for help.

The government has called an associate of convicted hitman Charles V. Harrelson to testify today against Harrelson, his wife, Jo Ann Starr Harrelson, 41, and Elizabeth Chagra, 28.

Hampton Robinson III, scion of a wealthy South Texas family, also was was expected to testify today about how he avoided becoming involved in a conspiracy to kill Wood by feigning illness.

Prosecutor Ray Jahn told jurors in his opening statement he would prove Harrelson and Robinson traveled to Las Vegas, Nev., in April 1979 "to offer their services to Jimmy Chagra as contract killers."

Robinson served a one-year sentence for negligent homicide in the 1970s in Victoria, Texas, and now has another murder charge pending against him. He appeared last year before the federal grand jury investigating Wood's death.

In late April or early May 1979, Chagra "asked Charles Harrelson to kill Judge Wood," Jahn said. Harrelson then asked Robinson in a coded telephone call to purchase a weapon to kill Wood, but Robinson begged off by feigning sickness, the prosecutor said.

Instead, Jahn said, Mrs. Harrelson bought a Weatherby deer rifle in Dallas 12 days before Wood was shot, using the fictitious name Fay King. She was convicted by a federal jury in Dallas last year and sentenced to three years on the firearms charge.

The murder-conspiracy trial began Sept. 28 and could last eight weeks.

After breaking down on the witness stand Wednesday, Mrs. Wood regained her composure and read in a strong voice a letter Mrs. Chagra wrote to her on Sept. 1, claiming she was a "newly born Christian" and asking forgiveness.

Mrs. Chagra is the wife of Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, the man accused of hiring Harrelson to shoot Wood for $250,000. Chagra will be tried separately.

"I felt she found Christ too late," Mrs. Wood said when Jahn asked whether she could forgive Mrs. Chagra. "No, I can't forgive her."

In the letter, Mrs. Chagra said her husband told her he had Wood killed and then sent her to deliver the "payoff" in Las Vegas.

"I was not involved in a plot or plan for I never sat down and conspired to have your husband murdered," Mrs. Chagra said in the letter. "God knows that I am guilt-free of that crime."

Yellow ribbons greet 155-day Texan hostage

KATY, Texas (AP) — An American construction supervisor held captive for 155 days by Kurdish rebels in northern Iraq was greeted by cheering neighbors, yellow ribbons tied around trees and hand-painted "Welcome Back" signs upon his return home.

Renaldo Franceschi said he was returning to his suburban home 25 pounds lighter than when he left.

Franceschi, 40, works as a supervisor in the Houston office of Atco International, a drilling and construction company and manfacturer of pre-fabricated buildings.

Franceschi and Atco employee Guy Boisvert, 23, of Montreal, were kidnapped May 2 while working on the installation of a maternity hospital in northern Iraq.

He said his captors never harmed him and he never feared for his life. However, he said he resents being taken hostage.

"They have their causes," Franceschi said Wednesday afternoon. "But why must they take innocent foreigners who are only trying to do their jobs and not hurt anyone?"

Franceschi left Iran on Saturday after he was released the week before to the Swiss Embassy in Tehran. Boisvert was released Sept. 27 through the Danish embassy in Tehran, which represents the Canadian government.

The two men were driving between the cities of Erbil and Kirkuk when their truck broke down and a passing car bearing three men stopped to help, said Atco vice president Cam Richardson.

One of the three pulled a gun, and Franceschi and Boisvert were ordered to drive into the mountains, Richardson said.

Franceschi said he might want to work overseas again, but his wife, Millie, said it's going to be awhile before he goes anywhere.

"We're going to hold him hostage here for a while," Mrs. Franceschi said.

Proposed pay hike could aid economy

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The proposed four percent pay hike next year for military personnel could mean a boost to the economy of Texas, which has more service people than any other state in the nation except California.

The House last month passed the pay increase bill, which calls for an across-the-board four percent raise next year for all military personnel. The Senate is expected to vote on the legislation in late November when Congress returns for its lame duck session.

Texas has 142,000 service people, who receive a net yearly income of $2.2 billion, according to the Pentagon. They would get an additional $80 million if the bill passes and officials estimate that that could mean as much as $240 million in new business.

"For every dollar a soldier gets, we expect it to create three more dollars in business," says Elliot Johnson, a spokesman for the Chamber of Commerce in San Antonio, which has five military installations. "For example, if a soldier spends a new dollar on gas, the gas station owner then may spend that dollar on new uniforms for his staff. The company who makes the uniforms will then be encouraged to spend the dollar on something...it's the ripple effect."

Representative indicted in relation to cattle theft

SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas (AP) — A Hopkins County grand jury has indicted State Rep. David London on felony charges in connection with the theft of cattle from a ranch near Wills Point.

London, 29, was named in the indictment Wednesday charging him with stealing three cows and two steers from the ranch.

District Attorney James L. Chapman said London allegedly cashed checks for four of the animals from the Sulphur Springs Cattle Sale Barn at a Commerce bank.

Ed Furrh reported the animals missing from his Route 3 Wills Point ranch about June 1. The cattle had been chute-loaded into a vehicle that was driven onto the ranch without Furrh's consent, authorities said.

London, of Leonard in Fannin County, was elected to the Legislature in 1980 but defeated in the May Democratic primary this year.

'Deenie' controversial novel

By JENNIFER FOOTE
Hearst Feature Service

ROHNERT PARK, Calif. — When fifth-grader Willow Podchernikoff came home from school with a book called "Deenie" in her tote, she didn't know that 13 sentences on five pages of the 159-page novel dealt with masturbation.

She found out later, but not by reading the passages. Her mother inadvertently discovered the pages before Willow could see them.

The next day, Joan Podchernikoff told school principal Paul Percy that she was "shocked and sickened" by what she had read. She wanted the book off the shelves of every library in the Cotati-Rohnert Park school district north of San Francisco, she said, because "this kind of reading material undermines the moral upbringing I and other parents like me are trying to instill in our children."

Perhaps the worst part, she said later, was that if she hadn't casually leafed through the book, Willow might have read it.

"This situation is something that hs crept in slowly through the years, and all of a sudden it hits us in the face," said Peter Podchernikoff, a machinist who also has an 11-year-old son in a Rohnert Park School. "It is imperative that the state returns to us control over our children's lives."

PODCHERNIKOFF AND nearly 100 parents, most of them sympathetic to his demands, have challenged the school board to remove "Deenie" from the libraries and come up with a strict screening process for all distict books. And though most haven't read them, some parents have asked for the removal of all books by Judy Blume from district libraries.

One of the most popular writers of children's books, Blume is known for her frank parables about subjects like menstruation, homosexuality, divorce and puberty. At least one of the author's books has been banned in Montgomery County, Md.; others are restricted reading in some public libraries with separate adult and juvenile sections.

Facing off in Rancho Cotati High School library Tuesday, parents and school board members wrestled with trustee Andy Camozzi's request to ban Blume books from the libraries until the board could review them. Several ministers from local churches argued that the "sensuous nature" of the books conflicts with their teachings; parents insisted that the books constituted sex education materials, which they are entitled to review.

" 'Deenie' is a technical how-to on sex, not a novel," insisted one parent. "Sex has its place in the home, not in the school."

Parents who fear censorship of the book and others by Blume pointed out that "Deenie" is primarily a book about a girl with back problems that force her to wear an embarrassing brace to school. "This book teaches compassion," said a mother of three daughters. "It would be the greatest injustice to take it off the shelves."

BUT AFTER NEARLY four hours of discussion, punctuated by argument among opposing groups of parents and an obviously divided board, there was little progress toward an agreement on what was best for "the children."

While they neared agreement on one trustee's suggestion that the books be restricted reading "for children whose parents let them read that kind of thing," the idea was rejected by the board.

Reluctant to confiscate or restrict library books without legal advice, the weary trustees finally voted to discuss the matter for the third time on Oct. 5.

"They're trying to slow it down on the basis of opinion rather than policy," Podchernikoff said. "We have guidelines; they just haven't been applied," he said, referring to the American Library Bill of Rights criteria by the American Library Association for selecting books.

Few of those present could find anything wrong with the policy, but there were several interpretations of the obviously subjective standards. "The policy don't say nothing about reviewing controversial books," asserted Camozzi. "Some of these books are pornography," he added in reference to Blume's 12 titles. "We might as well put Playgirl and Playboy magazine in the library."

AS AN INTERIM compromise for angry parents, trustee Jim Fisher suggested the library require parental consent for elementary students who wanted to check out the Blume book. Camozzi backed away from his original demand and supported Fisher, but the three other trustees voted against the pair. The majority favored waiting for the committee report.

Although critics of "Deenie" have been the most visible at board meetings, calls on the issue have run overwhelmingly in favor of keeping the book on the shelf, Superintendent Bob McConnell said. "There are quite a few parents who are outraged to think that there would be any restriction on what children should or shouldn't read," he said.

Healing powers of plant questioned

By FREDERICK P. SZYDLIK
Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY — Every day for the past five years, Bart Longway has been downing two shot-glass-size slugs of a potion he says has relieved the pain of his chronic arthritis. The potion is a commercially made substance that comes from a very basic source: the inside of a houseplant called aloe vera.

Before Longway discovered the aloe vera potion, he used to receive cortisone treatment to relieve his pain and occasionally took as many as 20 aspirin a day. Now he says he doesn't need anything but his aloe vera drink and hasn't taken injections or aspirin for his arthritis since he started drinking the liquid five years ago.

Longway has found relief for his arthritis, but many in the medical community are skeptical about the benefits of aloe vera when taken internally. There is a large body of opinion that aloe vera — known as "the first aid plant" or "the burn plant" — is beneficial for healing burns and small cuts, but its usefulness as an internal cure-all is still being questioned.

Aloe vera is a common houseplant in United States homes. It is a member of the lily family. Although there are more than 200 species of aloe, the species with medicinal properties is aloe barbadensis, a perennial succulent believed to have originated in South Africa.

THE GEL FROM inside the plant's long, spikey leaves has recognized healing properties. Some of the conditions for which its effectiveness has been documented (but not necessarily proven through controlled testing) in scientific literature include thermal and radiation burns, wounds and chapped and dry skin.

The list of ailments aloe vera is supposed to have cured — but for which there is only anecdotal documentation — includes ringworm, venereal sores, boils, sunburn, dermitatis, eczema, hemorrhoids, chronic conjunctivitis and other eye ailments, baldness, tumors, colds, dysentery and kidney pains. It has also been used as a deodorant, a poultice for beriberi sufferers, a salve for insect bites and an insect repellent.

Several commercial products are made from the aloe vera plant. One is a drug which is the dried juice obtained from a layer of cells beneath the plant's rind. The drug is used by the pharmaceutical and cosmetic industries to make aloin and aloe extracts which are used in laxatives and sunscreens.

The inner part of the plant leaf produces aloe gel used in tonics and cosmetics. It is the gel that has emollient and moisturizing properties and is supposed to have healing properties.

The scientific community has serious doubts about some of the supposed beneficial effects of aloe vera. Ann Paasch, a clinical pharmacy instructor at the Albany College of Pharmacy, says that many plants, including fruits and vegetables, contain amino acids as well as vitamins, minerals and polysaccharides which also are found in aloe vera, and which may be what make tonics made from the plant's gel beneficial to some users.

PAASCH ADDS that there has not been enough research done on the plant to determine if it is beneficial when taken internally. "Externally, yes," she says. "It's good for burns and ulcerations. But for internal use, I can't say it won't work, but I wouldn't recommend it because I just don't know."

Paasch uses aloe vera herself as a skin cream. She doesn't buy a commercial product, but uses the gel from a live plant. To get the gel, she breaks off a leaf from the bottom of the plant, splits it open and rubs the gel on her hands and face. "It's a good cream because it's not greasy or sticky and it softens the skin."

Pharmacy professor Gary Hall at the Albany College of Pharmacy says he has been studying the use of aloe vera in cosmetics and has found that the products do have emollient properties that keep skin smooth and soft. However, the emollient effect may be caused by other ingredients in the cosmetics such as oils, rather than any special qualities of the aloe vera.

Hall said that one of the problems with buying aloe vera products is determining how much aloe is in the product. He said that few labels indicate the quantity of aloe vera used.

Use health insurance wisely

By JOANN RODGERS
Science Writer
Hearst Feature Service

It is no longer news that economic troubles signal health troubles. A Johns Hopkins University scientist, Harvey Brenner, proved more than 10 years ago that when inflation rises, the human fallout includes increased admissions to hospitals and mental institutions.

Among the jobless and financially squeezed, stress and all the biological consequences aggravate existing illnesses and increase susceptibility to new ones.

When money is tight, health checkups, immunizations, dental work and "little illnesses" are more often ignored. That could mean bigger problems that cost even more to fix.

Some 185 million Americans are covered by some kind of insurance — but only when they are employed, in most cases. And even with Blue Cross, Medicare and Medicaid paying more than 90 per cent of hospital bills, many expenses are out of pocket.

The questions today are what to do about all this and how to get the most for your dwindling health care dollar in a health care system that costs an estimated $220 billion a year.

A CHECK OF health economists and physicians turned up several tactics designed not only to save your health, but your pocketbook.

Among them:

— Evaluate health risks for you and your family realistically. Dr. Caroline Bedell Thomas, whose study of the "precursors" of illness at Johns Hopkins University is a classic in its field, says some individuals have a built-in tendency for long life and good health that she calls "stamina."

"It's difficult to define," she admits. But most people know if there is a family tendency to sickness or health, or certain types of sickness.

If you have a history in the past or present of heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, breathing problems, intestinal or stomach troubles, cancer, eye disease or physical handicaps, your risk of future problems is higher than normal.

If you are very young, very old or pregnant, your risk of illness and injury are higher than usual. And if you drink heavily, smoke, or are exposed to dangerous chemicals or conditions at work, pay special attention to your health care needs.

— Delay those aspects of medical and dental care that are genuinely "elective." These include cosmetic surgery, orthodontia (in some cases), contact lenses, tooth capping and the like.

WITH YOUR doctor's okay, try medical treatment for disorders that can also be treated surgically. Among them, skin infections, some hysterectomies, appendectomies.

For those who are already in the health care system, with membership in a pre-paid health care system, or experience with private practitioners or clinics, let the providers of care know about your financial problems.

— Don't worry about having an annual checkup if you are a reasonably healthy adult in the prime of life. Studies show that annual examinations yield very little benefit between the ages of 20 and 40 unless there is an illness or injury that needs periodic attention.

The Kaiser-Permanente Medical Group in California, one of the largest in the United States, recommends checkups every five years during the 20s, every three during the 30s, every two and a half in the 40s and every two years in the 50s.

"But if you do have a complaint, at least go and have an initial evaluation," warns Jakobovits. "Don't put it off until better times."

— PAY ATTENTION TO the habits of good health, things you can do to avoid illness. Research indicates that while doctors can treat some forms of disease, the factors that determine health are largely social, behavioral and environmental. They relate to such things as sanitation, nutrition, exercise, pollution, home and job safety, careful driving, hygiene and care in the use of medicines.

— Cut back on over-the-counter medicines whose benefits are doubtful. These include vitamins (if you eat a balanced diet), sleep aids and combination-ingredient cold pills. Also, buy generic drugs whenever possible, rather than brand name. As long as they say "U.S.P." on the container, they are quality graded, and much cheaper than well-known brands.

— Pay close attention to immunization schedules. That ounce of prevention, in these times of inflation, is worth two pounds of cure. "When the financial screws tighten," says Jakobovits, "vaccines are more important than ever, especially for children. They are cheap investments."

— Have your family doctor check your mouth for sores and obvious dental problems. Have a dentist check you out no less often than every two or three years, more often if you are very young or very old. Good dental health influences nutrition and overall health as well.

— ECONOMIC STRESS often leads to decisions about restricting family growth. If you are using oral contraceptives, be sure to insist on careful monitoring of your blood pressure and general health, since these drugs can be dangerous in some women.

— Take advantage of legitimate free clinics and screening programs. Most city, county and state health departments, and both university and community hospitals, offer Pap smears, breast cancer checks, and hearing and vision screening for little or no charge. Some also offer diagnosis and treatment for allergies and other disorders as part of research projects.

Al Seely, "The Hermit of Dismal Key," is pictured in his home on Dismal Key, an island in the maze of 10,000 islands off the coast of South Florida. He left civilization 15 years ago and has been living as a hermit on the islands ever since.

He's hermit of Dismal Key

By JOHN PLATERO

DISMAL KEY, Fla. (AP) — In this maze of 10,000 islands hugging the southwestern coast of Florida, there is only one permanent resident. He's called "the hermit of Dismal Key."

Finding Al Seely's ramshackle house isn't easy. The best way is by small boat, with fishing guides from the Port of the Islands resort at Marco.

The water route, through often shallow channels and bayous, is twisty, risky and confusing; every island is covered with thick mangrove trees and looks alike.

Six miles south and around an unmarked turn between two islands, Seely's makeshift dock comes into view. By the time one ties up, the white-haired and bearded "hermit" will be at dockside with "Digger," a scraggly mongrel he picked up on the mainland nine years ago.

The 65-year-old Seely provides a history of his 16-acre island during the short walk across a clearing to his home 100 yards from the water's edge.

"Dismal Key is about 2,000 years old and consists of 90 percent oyster shells put here by the Indians," says Seely. The island has an altitude of 17 feet, making it the highest in the chain.

"That's a Royal Poinciana, but notice the native orchids growing from the branches," he says, describing the trees. "And that one is a Gumbo Limbo. I call it a 'tourist tree' — It's always red and peeling."

His front door barely hangs together — torn screening flapping in the warm breeze and doing little to keep bugs out. Painted over the entrance are the words of naturalist John Burroughs: "I came here to find myself; it's so easy to get lost in the world."

There are two large rooms to Seely's house. "There was another one in back, but it sort of collapsed," he chuckles.

The main room in the 75-year-old structure serves as living room, kitchen and the studio where he paints. It includes a three-burner gas stove, desk, several chairs, pots and pans, a sink without running water and shelves stuffed with paperback books and a set of encyclopedias. A single kerosene lamp provides the only light he has at night. A portable radio keeps him in touch with the world and a wind-up clock paces time for him.

The other room is his bedroom. Neatly folded on an extra bed are his clothes, which he washes by hand. The warped wooden floors are swept clean.

Seely, who doesn't have a television set or a CB radio, is not too concerned with what goes on outside his island.

"To hell with it," he says, admitting he left "civilization" 15 years ago because of a drinking problem.

"I figured if I lived on an island I wouldn't be able to get it," he says.

Born in Athol, Mass., Seely was a musician during his early years and served in Europe with the U.S. Army in World War II. His first wife died and his second marriage ended in divorce after he came to Florida in 1953.

He was a music therapist at a state mental hospital and drove cabs before moving to the Ten Thousand Islands.

"I got so bored at first, I started painting," he says. His art supplements his small military disability pension.

Seely's paintings are mostly island scenes and movie stars he copies from magazines given him by visiting fishermen and boaters, who sometimes purchase a canvas before leaving his island.

Olympics keeps seniors running

By DWIGHT CHAPIN
Hearst Feature Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Warren Blaney came up with the idea 13 years ago that athletes and athletics should be ageless.

"No one wants to be a fossil," he says. "Any activity — physical or non-physical — is good, because doing anything is better than doing nothing."

So Blaney, a lifelong sports enthusiast and student of human nature, started the Senior Olympics, with 175 participants in track, field, swimming and diving at the Los Angeles Coliseum. It went well, but Blaney wasn't sure where it would go next.

"Every step was crucial in those early days," he says. "We didn't know what to expect, how much people would enjoy it or if we'd ever be able to do it again. I asked the athletes after that first try whether we should have a competition every four years, like the regular Olympics bigshots, and they said, 'We want it every year, not just every two, three or four years.' "

Blaney went globetrotting in search of support. One of his stops was to see Avery Brundage, the curmudgeon who then headed the International Olympic Committee. Brundage spent a lifetime disliking myriad things, but he told Blaney, "The Senior Olympics should have been started 50 years ago."

It wasn't easy. At the beginning of his Olympian odyssey, Blaney shouldered most of the workload himself. "Nobody realizes how much responsibility there was in putting it together every year. But we stood on our own two feet without a crutch. We don't want and have never asked for government or tax money."

There are 8,000 to 10,000 athletes now, competing in about 50 events at sites all over the country every year, and the numbers are growing almost daily. "We're even getting into other countries," Blaney says, "from the Far East to South America, from Canada to India to Australia. There's no limit to the number of sports we can add, either. We'll continue as long as someone is willing to write in and suggest one — and put everything together."

Many of the sports are the kind you see in the "regular" Olympics, but more than a handful are not. In addition to traditional offerings like basketball, cycling and ice hockey, there is rope skipping, photography and harmonica playing.

Harmonica playing?

"It's an extremely healthy pursuit," Blaney says. "We have one of the greatest players in the world involved with us, and he says a workout on the harmonica helps build a strong set of lungs, a healthy respiratory system and improves your heart action, while gently massaging the eustachian tubes in the ear to help prevent hearing loss.

"As far as age goes, we start at 20, but don't have a stopping point," Blaney says. "We've had people up to 92 out there speed skating at Lake Placid when it was 30 below zero. A lot of them improve every year, regardless of their chronological ages. People who compete in activities don't feel old. They are more disciplined in the way they eat, sleep and take care of themselves."

Blaney just turned 79, and up to now he's been organizer, overseer and spectator rather than competitor. But that's going to change.

"I haven't had time for any of the events," he says, "but I'm getting ready to try track and field, skin diving, cross country and ocean aquatics in 1983."

The key word here is try. Blaney looks upon the Senior Olympics as preventive medicine as much as competition — and he always has.

"We're all in the same boat, just enjoying life," he says.

Salvation Army is planning campaign

Plans are already underway at The Salvation Army for the organization's annual Christmas Cheer campaign, which provides material and spiritual assistance to the area's needy.

Major Pete Costas announced recently the Midlanders who will be heading up the various Christmas committees for this year's campaign.

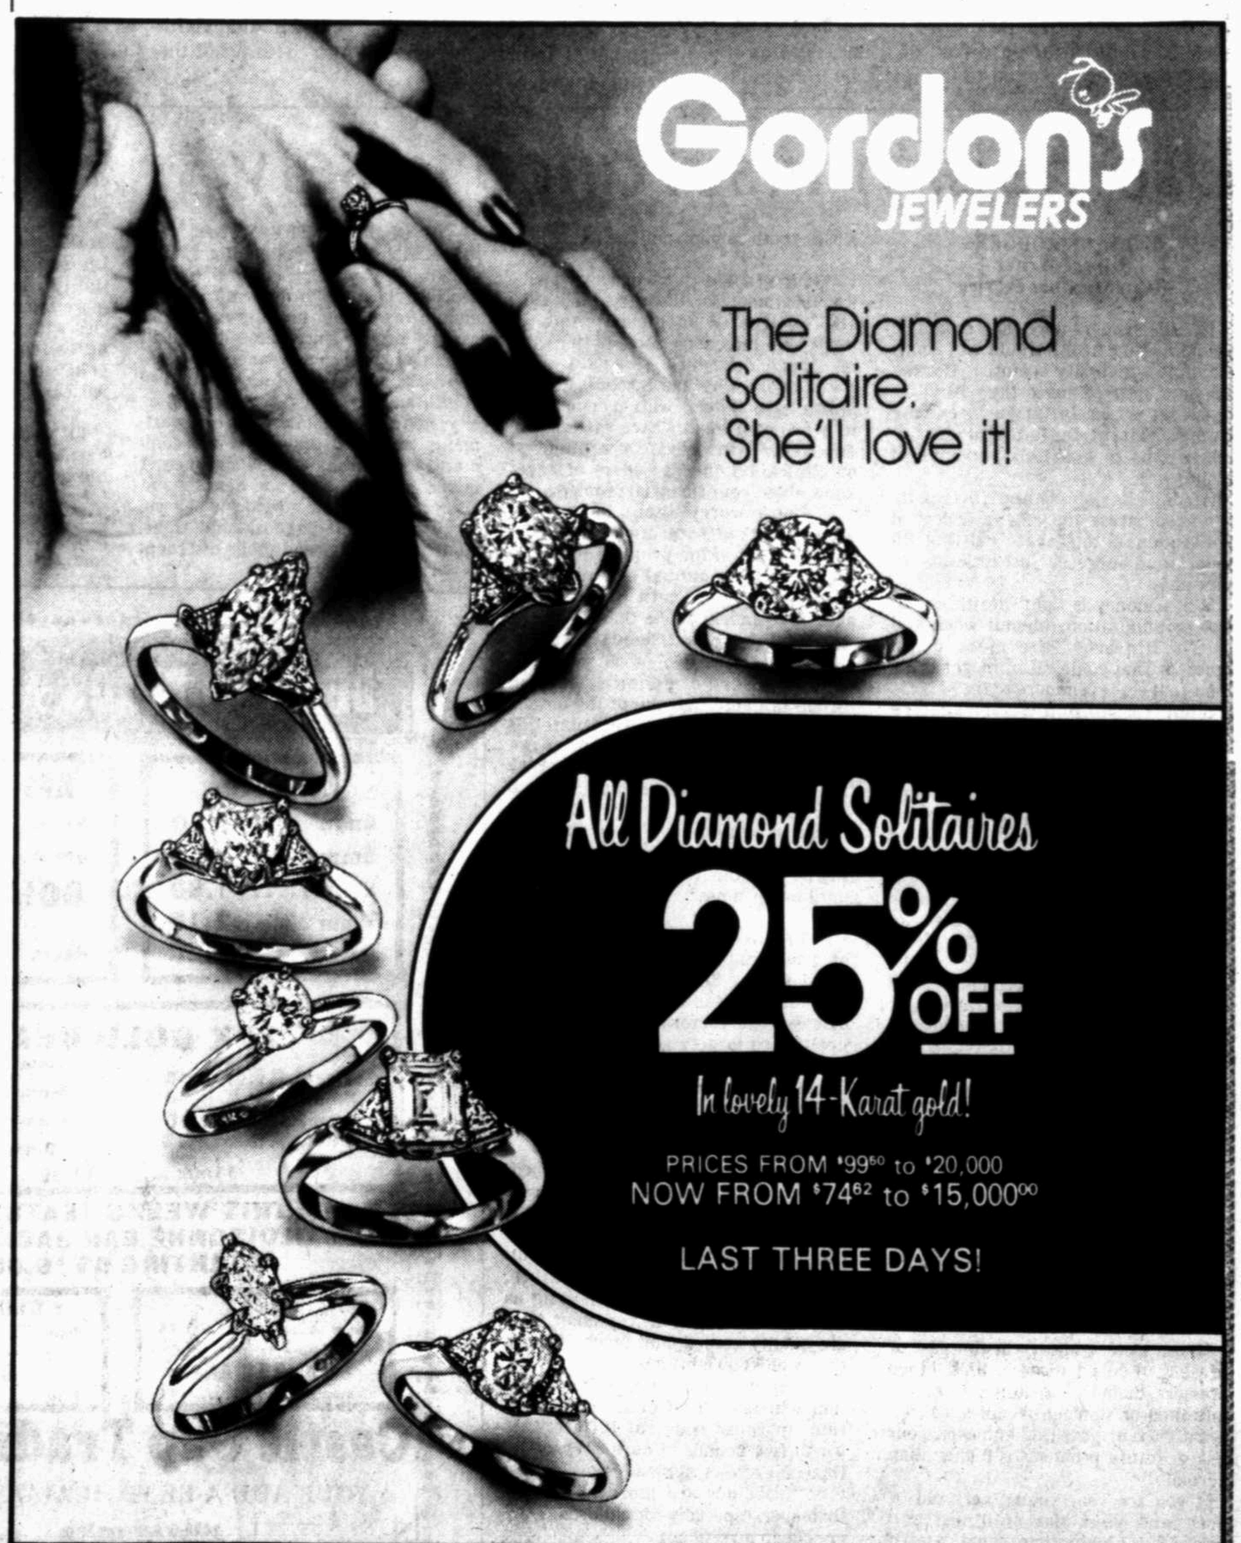

Donald Jones will chair the Christmas Fund Committee. Mrs. Robert Duke and Mrs. J.W. Starr will head the Doll Program and Tea to be held on Dec. 19. Mrs. A.J. Cain will be in charge of the Toy Program and the Toy Distribution on Dec. 21 — 22 at the County Exhibit Building. Mrs. R.C. Thomas will chair the "Dress-A-Live-Doll" Santa Pal program, Mrs. J. Paul Karcher and Mrs. Cyril Wagner will head up an Ad Hoc Christmas Committee.

Call The Salvation Army office, 683-3614, for information about participation in any area of this traditional community program.

DEAR ABBY

Office-supply pipeline on verge of decontrol

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a secretary for a small consulting firm. My boss is real cheap. We're always running out of office supplies, but whenever I remind him to order, he says, "Not now, honey."

I'm dating a guy who works in the supply room of a larger firm downstairs. (I'll call him Ed.) Ed and I usually have lunch together in the park.

A few weeks ago I told Ed that we couldn't have lunch together that day because I had to go buy a typewriter ribbon and some carbon paper. Ed told me not to bother — he'd bring some up to me from the supply room. Well, he did, and we had lunch together.

Now my boss expects Ed to continue stealing supplies for us. He never asks Ed, he asks ME to ask him. I hate the idea of Ed's stealing and risking his job for my boss who's too cheap to buy what we need. What should I do? — IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: Inform your boss that you deeply regret accepting stolen supplies in the first place, and you absolutely refuse to ask Ed for anything else.

In the meantime, keep your eyes open for another job. You could hardly do worse.

DEAR ABBY: I am 65 and a widow. My problem is that I have never learned how to drive a car. My husband always drove me everywhere. When we were first married, I asked him to teach me how to drive, but he said it would take more patience than he had, so I never learned. Well, my husband is gone now, and although there are plenty of people who would take me shopping, to the beauty parlor or anywhere else I want to go, I'd like to do part-time volunteer work and be free to pick up on the spur of the moment and go somewhere on my own. Taxis cost a fortune, and taking a bus would mean changing buses two and three times, and I just couldn't do that.

Do you think it's too late for me to learn? It's the only way to be totally independent. — WANTS TO DRIVE

DEAR WANTS: If your vision and hearing are OK and your reflexes check out, forget about your age ... you're as old as you feel. So step on the gas and sign up for driving lessons.

DEAR ABBY: I have read several times in your column about couples considering artificial insemination. I have never married (I am a clergyman) and I come from very good "stock" and have enjoyed excellent health.

I would consider it a privilege to be a donor to a sperm bank. Do such banks need donors, or do they have all they need? — WITHHOLD MY NAME

DEAR WITHHOLD: It depends on where you live. Your county medical association can provide you with the information.

DEAR ABBY: This may cost me a dinner, but I contend that when a lady and gentleman meet, it's improper for the gentleman to extend his hand for a handshake unless the lady offers her hand first. — M.J., COLUMBUS, OHIO

DEAR M.J.: Congratulations. You just won a dinner.

LIVING TODAY

The cold facts...

By SHARON HILLIS

HARD COLD FACTS

Americans will suffer through an estimated 70 million colds this year. This means that we'll be missing work, falling behind in school and — worst of all — spending a lot of time feeling just plain miserable.

Contrary to popular belief, colds are caused by viruses, not by exposure to rain,cold or drafts, although these lower our resistance and make us more susceptible to viruses. By nature, viruses are highly contagious, and they're spread more rapidly in the fall and winter when people are in closer contact and spend more time indoors.

1. Stay away from cold sufferers and from surfaces they've touched. If a member of your family is sick, let him or her use disposable plates and utensils to prevent the spread of the infection.

2. Don't allow the air in your home to become excessively dry. A humidity level of 35 to 40 percent will keep the mucus membranes of the nose and throat moist and thus serve more effectively in trapping germs before they can infect the body.

3. If you do come down with a cold, follow the time-honored guidelines of staying in bed, drinking plenty of liquids and taking medication to bring down your temperature. This will probably be more effective than any cold remedy you can buy. A study by the Food and Drug Administration reports that cold medicines may temporarily relieve the symptoms of a cold, but none can cure it or alter its course. Even Vitamin C has yet to be proved effective in preventing or curing colds.

4. Be patient. A cold needs to run its seven-to-10 day course, and if you attempt to carry on with business as usual you will probably wear down your strength and prolong the infection. Be good to yourself and remain in bed for at least a day, covering with a warm blanket. By resting and relaxing, your body will have a chance to fight the cold without everyday stress.

FOOT NOTES

Proper foot care can pay big dividends in how you feel.

Good care of the feet is particularly important for persons with special problems, such as being overweight. And by conservative estimate more than 30 percent of the adult population is overweight.

While we hear about numerous health problems associated with being overweight, few of us consider the consequences of those extra pounds to our feet.

Some ways that feet show the abuses of obesity include swelling, calluses, corns, ingrown toenails, heel pain and arthritis joints.

Overwieght people often tend to perspire more readily, and bacteria can thrive on this excess foot moisture trapped between the toes. This situation increases the risk of infection.

So take a load off your feet. Keep them and yourself fit, not fat. You can ward off a lot of foot frustrations by holding the line on extra pounds.

If you already have serious foot problems, ask your doctor about special treatment for these situations. Diabetes is a major cause of foot troubles and requires special attention.

Parents urged to beware Halloween sugar monster

NEW YORK (AP) — Halloween, among the most profitable holidays in the year for candy sales, can be a nightmare for parents and teachers of certain children, says the medical director of an institute for children with learning problems.

"Too many too-sweet treats can turn some usually agreeable children into monsters at home and in school," says Dr. Jerome Vogel, medical director of the New York Institute for Child Development.

"Many children simply cannot handle the over-large doses of sugar in Halloween candy," explains Vogel. "Too much sugar can cause irritability, disruptive behavior, decreased attention span and loss of concentration. Headaches and stomachaches are also very common to children the day after Halloween.

"Parents and teachers have told us they dread this post-Halloween period; there are arguments and fights at home, and classes the next day are virtually unmanageable, with children agitated and restless," he adds.

The institute, founded in 1968, is a non-profit, diagnostic and treatment facility that focuses on the physical factors that can interfere with learning and affect behavior.

In dealing with over 3,000 children with learning problems, the institute has found that nutrition can play a major role in many learning and behavioral problems.

Hawaiian activists struggle to protect culture

By AL MARTINEZ
The Los Angeles Times — Washington Post News Service

HONOLULU — When they talk about the Hawaiian movement on the beach at Waikiki, they don't necessarily mean the hula.

They're talking about the stirring of a new militancy among the native-born to recapture their culture and reinstate their heritage.

They're talking about kuokoa; independence.

The movement is a loose coalition of old-line tree-planting societies, latter-day ecologists, anti-nuclear activists and, more significant, bright, angry and articulate native Hawaiians who are redefining the art of confrontation in aloha land.

They have taken their militancy to court to demand an end to "alien" occupation of their homeland, and they have taken their militancy to the beaches to rail against naval bombardment practice on an island they consider sacred.

While the first rustle of new activism was dismissed patronizingly as a "cultural renaissance," it is now being viewed with some apprehension for what it truly seems to be: a serious voice of protest rising above the weepy strains of "Sweet Leilani" played for tourists.

One opponent calls the move racist, another a pipe dream. Some suspect it is downright subversive and others — including the governor and the state's two U.S. senators — won't talk about it at all.

The thrust of the activists is disturbingly simple. They just want to take Hawaii back from the United States.

HAYDEN BURGESS STANDS on the shores of Maui, staring angrily at the island of Kahoolawe, a blurred outline in the dawn mists.

"First America steals our land," he is saying, "and then they bomb our history. Who do they think they are? Who do they think we are?"

He is referring to the Navy-led, multinational Rim of the Pacific (RIMPAC) exercise that is bombarding Kahoolawe, just seven miles from Maui, with a roar the locals call "Maui thunder."

He is also referring to the U.S. annexation of the Hawaiian Islands almost a century ago.

"We were conquered by force and we are held by force," Burgess says. "It wasn't even by law that we were declared American territory, but by joint resolution of Congress. It is illegal, and we reject it!" Burgess, 35, is an Oahu lawyer. He, his wife, Puanani, who is a third-year law student, and Dr. Emmett Aluli, a young physician from Molokai — all native Hawaiians — lead the movement for sovereignty.

On this day, they have gathered about a hundred people on a Kihei beach to organize a flotilla that will sail to the edge of Kahoolawe to protest the bombardment.

It is at once a fist raised against the violence done to Kahoolawe and a recognition that the battered island has become a rallying point for those demanding self-determination.

"THIS IS JUST a small battle," Burgess says. "Kahoolawe is a symbol. Love of land is the issue: "aina aloha."

"What they do to Kahoolawe with bombs and shells, they have done to Waikiki with hotels and condominiums. Our destiny is in the hands of others."

Even the lopsided vote for statehood in 1959 was a subterfuge, Burgess insists.

"We were asked whether or not we wanted statehood, yes or no. The question of independence was never raised. We had no real chance to decide our fate."

The movement to establish the nation of Hawaii, according to Burgess, is not limited to native Hawaiians, but welcomes the "haoles" — whites or foreigners — to join in.

"We are looking for friends where we find them, and we will find them even if it means embarrassing the United States," he says.

Does that mean courting the Soviet Union? "Where we find them," he repeats.

A THIRD-GENERATION Hawaiian, Burgess says he became politicized 10 years ago after reading a history of the islands, and that at first only he and his wife spoke out for sovereignty.

He still is not certain how big the movement is, but he stirs the island peace like a drunk at a luau every opportunity he gets.

The first time was in 1978, in a criminal case unrelated to "kuokoa," Burgess challenged the jurisdiction of a "foreign" court over a Hawaiian citizen. The challenge was brushed aside.

A year later, he refused to fill out a jury-selection form "because I am a Hawaiian and not an American," a contention that got him a $100 fine for contempt.

To test his effectiveness, Burgess ran for a post in the state Office of Hawaiian Affairs in 1980 on a platform of national sovereignty and gathered a surprising 3,333 votes, running ninth in a field of 70 candidates.

Earlier this year, he called for a rally to observe Sovereignty Day on the 89th anniversary of Hawaiian annexation and it drew about 300 more protesters than the 500 he had expected.

IN RESPONSE TO his persistent agitating, an effort was made to remove Burgess from the State Bar. It failed.

"I keep asking myself," he says, scanning the white-capped sea off Maui, "how did we go from a proud race in 1893 to what we are today?

'How could we cast aside our language, culture and relgion to end up in the lowest economic and social strata? Our people sleep in cars and on the beach because they have no land, while condos are selling for a million dollars."

He turns suddenly from the ocean. "We went through a period where Hawaiians were ashamed to be called Hawaiian. We recycled that into thinking the nation was dead and we were Americans.

"That has changed. Now the only question is, how do we take back what was once ours?"

"They're right in a way," Abraham Piianaia says. Honolulu-born, he is director of Hawaiian studies at the University of Hawaii.

"THE CITIZENS OF the kingdom were never given the right to say whether or not they wanted to give up their sovereignty.

"But that's all past. This is a new world. And if the United States, by some miracle, ever did give us back Hawaii, our real problems would just begin."

Though somewhat sympathetic to the activities, the 67-year-old Piianaia believes, as do many others, that there is no way to return to what the kingdom once was.

Camera 'lens' itself to confusion, difficulties

By ERMA BOMBECK

I am one of a dozen or so people in this country who does not own a camera.

I considered buying one once in 1971, the year our daughter graduated from high school. Between the 15 minutes I picked one out and brought my husband back to look at it, it had become obsolete. A camera has become obsolete every 15 minutes since then.

In all of those years, I have never heard one amateur photographer say to another, "Here, give me your camera and I'll take your picture. I know how it works. I've got one just like it." There is a reason for this.

NO OTHER PERSON IN THE WORLD HAS A CAMERA LIKE YOURS.

I have seen a professional photographer examine another person's camera, receive explicit instructions from the owner, and then take the picture with his finger over the lens cap. Embarrassed, he will say, "Oh, I see, you've got the one that came out three weeks after mine did and the viewfinder was repositioned."

We have 18 shoe boxes of slides. They could belong to a widow. There is not one single picture of my husband in them. There are only the kids and me waving to him from the top of the Grand Canyon, a buggy in New Orleans, and a whirling teacup in Disneyworld.

Back in 1978, I volunteered to take his picture. He agreed and proceeded to tell me how to use his camera. There was the lens to change, the light meter to set, the time and distance to judge, and of course the final setting of the focus.

By the time I had accomplished all this to his satisfaction, we had not only lost our light, but our 29-year-old marriage was in deep trouble.

Our first and last family Christmas card picture was attempted three years ago. I got clean shirts on the boys and a comb through their hair, gave my daughter a blank check to stay at home, and got the dog hairs off the white sofa. It must have taken my husband an hour and a half to set up his camera so that he could set it and join us in a group picture.

The picture shows four people with teeth clenched into fake grins with eight eyes looking at a blur on the lefthand side of the picture.

My mother said, "If that's Bill, he looked a lot taller at the wedding."

Serve up Farmer Aspic

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

FARMER ASPIC

1 envelope unflavored gelatin
½ cup water
Two 6-ounce cans tomato-base vegetable juice (1½ cups)
Lettuce
Farmer Salad, see Note

In a medium bowl sprinkle gelatin over cold water; if any dry gelatin remains on top, swirl bowl so gelatin is moistened; let stand to soften gelatin — about 5 minutes. Bring vegetable juice to boiling; pour over gelatin mixture and stir until gelatin dissolves. Makes about 2 cups. Pour into 4 to 6 individual molds or custard cups. Chill to set. At serving time, unmold. Garnish with lettuce and Farmer's Salad. Makes four ½-cup or six 1-3rd cup servings.

Note: Mix sour cream with sliced radish, diced cucumber and green pepper to make Farmer Salad.

PAINLESS PERMANENT HAIR REMOVAL
You don't have to take our word for it! Read what medical experts have to say about the "no needle" electronic tweezer method of hair removal.
From Iris M. Krupp, Ph.D., M.D., Dermatology and Allergy:
"Epilation using a fine platinium needle is a painful and very time-consuming process. Patients find it difficult to tolerate more than thirty minutes of treatment and it requires a skilled, experienced operator.
When this technique is contrasted to epilation with the Removatron, there is a striking difference . The Removatron technique requires minimal training for the oprator and is painless for the patient . It is more rapid technique , in that a larger area can be treated in a given time. Delicate areas, such as the aerola of the breast can be treated without discomfort to the patient. Patient acceptance is striking and they are enthusiastic with the results.
I am quite pleased with the instrument and have only positive feelings about it".
from Melvin A. Shiffman, M.D.
"I have studied the method as a medical doctor, both clinically and with biopsy means. The evidence that the machine does work is clearly available and proven.
Biopsy specimens following removal of hair by the method show incontrovertible proof of thermal damage to the hair follicle. This refutes all previous claims by various individuals and associations that removal of hair by the electronic tweezer method shows no evidence of thermal damage and is no more than simple plucking of the hair".
If you have any questions about removing your unwanted hair painlessly and permanently, call us for FREE consultation and demonstration. It is the intelligent thing to do.

Consumers and retailers trying to fill hole left by Tylenol

NEW YORK (AP) — In the week after seven people died from taking cyanide-laced Tylenol capsules, sales of other over-the-counter pain relievers jumped 10 percent. And for many consumers, an aspirin-free product was hard to find.

"There's a lot of empty space on the shelves," says Howard Diener of Rite Aid Corp., which has 1,020 drug stores in 18 states. Until 12 days ago, one of every three dollars spent on non-prescription pain relievers went to Tylenol.

American Home Products Corp. is one company rushing to fill the void left by the withdrawal of Tylenol capsules from the market. It has boosted production of Anacin 3, an aspirin-free pain reliever that had been a distant second to Tylenol in sales. Plants in New Jersey and Indiana that normally operate two shifts are now working around the clock, the company says, to meet an "unprecedented" demand.

The company is continuing a series of television advertisements in which Tylenol is mentioned by name. In one ad, a woman complaining of a headache says, "My doctor said no aspirin. With this headache, I guess I'll take Tylenol."

A companion advises her to take Anacin 3 instead. "Right," chimes in an anouncer, "like Tylenol, Anacin 3 is 100 percent aspirin free." Both Tylenol and Anacin 3 contain acetaminophen instead of aspirin.,

John Wood, spokesman for American Home Products in New York, says similar ads have been broadcast since January and the company has not changed its advertising to capitalize on the troubles of Tylenol.

"No change is planned," Wood added.

Tylenol is still sold in tablet and liquid forms, and its manufacturer has offered to exchange any capsules for tablets or cash.

The potential for Anacin 3 to claim a larger share of the market for over-the-counter pain relievers has not escaped notice on Wall Street. From Sept. 29 — a day before it became known that Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules had been contaminated with cyanide — until Monday, the stock of American Home Products climbed 13.8 percent to a one-year high of 47⅜.

In the period, the Dow Jones Industrial Average was up 11.8 percent.

"Investors in a bull market will seize on anything, and here you have a huge void left by Tylenol," says David Paisley, a drug company analyst with Merrill Lynch.

"I think in the wake of the Tylenol scare, most consumers would want a recognizable brand name. The name 'Anacin' is as prestigious as just about any. Anacin 3 is the only available nationwide (aspirin-free) competitor to Tylenol," Paisley says.

All Anacin products, including those with aspirin, made up 12.3 percent of the $1.2 billion U.S. market for over-the-counter pain relievers, the so-called analgesics, according to Advertising Age magazine. That's about a third of Tylenol's previous market share.

Figures for the market share of aspirin-free Anacin 3, introduced in 1977, were not available.

The Marketing Fact Book, published by Information Resources of Chicago, reports that sales of all over-the-counter pain relievers jumped 10 percent in the week after the discovery of the tainted Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules.

"Regular aspirin products picked up most of the share," says George Garrick of Information Resources. "The week before, they represented 63 percent of analgesics; the week after they went up to 89 percent."

"We're hypothesizing that people who had Tylenol at home and threw it out had to buy some type of pain reliever," says Garrick. "Aside from Tylenol, there really weren't a lot of non-aspirin pain relievers out there."

According to the Marketing Fact Book, Tylenol's share of the market dropped from 34 percent the week before the poisonings to 4 percent the week after.

Some drug stores report they have boosted orders for substitute pain relievers containing acetaminophen, but they are moving cautiously. "We don't know if the substitutions are going to sell," says Diener, Rite Aid's vice president in charge of purchasing. "We don't know if the fear pervades the entire category (of aspirin-free pain relievers) or just pertains to Tylenol."

Will poisoned drug ever recover its position?

Cyanide may have done permanent damage

CHICAGO (AP) — The Tylenol Murders.

After more than a week, that was all that was certain about the deaths of seven people around Chicago.

Someone wanted to kill. The killer chose cyanide and put it in capsules of Extra-Strength Tylenol. And left it on a shelf somewhere to let others play a deadly game of drawing straws.

Seven people were dead because they felt sick. Because they did what millions of people do every day — they trusted what they found on store shelves.

Tylenol — the "non-human victim" — may never recover.

Despite last week's disclosures that strychnine had been found in some Tylenol capsules in California and that cyanide had been found in a Tylenol bottle involved in a suicide in Philadelphia last April, authorities here were convinced that their killer had stayed within a 30-mile-long stretch between downtown Chicago and the western suburb of Winfield.

THERE HAS BEEN no ransom demand, no political statement, no contact with the killer.

Death, each time, came in a 500-milligram capsule of Extra-Strength Tylenol. The medicine had been dumped out, replaced with deadly potassium cyanide.

In each case the lethal capsule was selected from a bottle containing more harmless than tainted ones.

In each case the capsule was swallowed on Wednesday, Sept. 29, probably purchased in the previous 24 hours by the victims or members of their families.

One tainted bottle was found unsold.

On Sept. 29, Mary Kellerman awoke complaining of a cold and sore throat. At age 12, she should have taken children's Tylenol, according to the manufacturer's labeling. Her father gave her an Extra-Strength Tylenol capsule.

She was the first to die.

THE KELLERMAN family's bottle was purchased at a Jewel Foods supermarket in the Grove Shopping Center in Elk Grove Village. There is a Walgreens right across the plaza, about 25 feet away.

The killer could have gone left or right — or past a barber shop and a couple of clothing stores to two other stores that sell non-prescription pain relievers.

That same Wednesday morning, Adam Janus picked up his daughter at pre-school, then went to a different Jewel store to buy meat, cut flowers and Extra-Strength Tylenol.

He went home and felt a chest pain. He took a Tylenol. He quickly died.

Stanley Janus died that night, his widow two days later after being taken off life-support systems.

"IMAGINE, ONE of the bottles came from that shelf," said Paul Sampson, a shopper who talked with a reporter last week in Aisle 13. "I think it's frightening."

The signs outside the store read: "Pleasant Family Shopping" and "Friend of the Family for 50 Years."

Mary S. McFarland was working that Wednesday at a telephone store in a suburban mall when she reached into her purse for her Tylenol bottle. Police found a second bottle of Tylenol, untainted, at her home.

Out in Winfield, 30 miles west of Chicago, someone in the family of Mary "Lynn" Reiner bought a bottle of Tylenol at Frank's Finer Foods. Though marked Regular-Strength, police say the bottle contained cyanide-laced Extra-Strength capsules.

The bottle had been picked off a shelf clearly in view of the express checkout counter. Late last week, that shelf space was filled with Bugs Bunny and Flintstones chewable vitamins in sealed boxes with child-resistant caps.

The store is across the street from Central DuPage Hospital, where Mrs. Reiner had given birth to her fourth child earlier in the week. The capsule that killed her was probably purchased on the trip home.

Tylenol is Johnson & Johnson's brand name for acetaminophen, a drug which acts much like aspirin. The selling point was that the drug was "safe" — it didn't upset your stomach.

PAULA PRINCE, a flight attendant whose body was not found for two days, was the only victim from downtown Chicago. Like most urban dwellers, she shopped near her home at a busy drugstore.

Seven dead people, Tylenol capsules and cyanide. From there, the search for a common thread enters the realm of speculation.

One theory discussed by observers is the proximity of hospitals to the places where the Tylenol was purchased.

In the Kellerman case, a hospital was half a mile from the store. In Miss Prince's case, it was five blocks away. The capsule which killed Mrs. Reiner came from a store across the street from the hospital where her baby was born. In the other stores with cyanide — all bunched in the same suburban area about 18 miles outside of town — the distances to hospitals are a mile or two.

A connection? Investigators aren't commenting.

In the Kellerman and Reiner cases, the stores where the fatal capsules were bought are adjacent to police stations. In the other cases, police stations are within a short car ride.

JUST A coincidence? Again, investigators aren't commenting.

In the absence of answers, all Tylenol capsules were suspect. The search for connections spanned the country.

New tests detected cyanide in the container. There were rumors, broadcast in one instance, that a friend of the dead man had been in Chicago before or after the death.

In Oroville, Calif., the angle was Tylenol and strychnine. Gregg Blagg, 27, said he suffered convulsions after taking a Tylenol capsule. Later, strychnine was found in capsules from his bottle, and in another his wife later bought at the same store as the first.

There were scares in places like Cleveland, Memphis and Wichita, Kan.

NONE UNLOCKED the mystery in Chicago. But each incident heightened the fear that another victim had drawn the wrong straw.

"They'll be looking for Tylenol in every heart attack from now until this thing is solved," said one investigator.

After the deaths in Chicago, Tylenol's maker, McNeil Consumer Products Corp., recalled the lots from which the tainted bottles came. But after strychnine was found in some Tylenol capsules in California, McNeil and its parent company, Johnson & Johnson, urged all retailers to pull every Tylenol capsule off the shelves.

J&J now says it will destroy all Tylenol capsules — wholesale, retail and those turned in by consumers. The total retail value could exceed $79 million.

Beginning a costly and difficult campaign to restore confidence in the product, McNeil offered to swap Tylenol capsules for a coupon good for Tylenol tablets, which had not been implicated in any deaths.

Tylenol is Johnson & Johnson's brand name for acetaminophen, a drug which acts much like aspirin. The selling point was that the drug was "safe" — it didn't upset your stomach.

IN ALL forms, Tylenol had dominated the pain-reliever market, selling more than Bayer aspirin, Bufferin, Excedrin and Anacin combined. Americans had been spending about $1 million a day on Tylenol products.

At the moment the fatal capsules were bought, there were 11 million bottles of Tylenol capsules available across America at the wholesale and retail level. Another 11 million bottles of capsules were in the hands of consumers.

A few of them contained cyanide, and every one was suspect.

On Sept. 28, the day authorities believe the first of the tainted capsules may have been placed on store shelves, Johnson & Johnson stock hit 47⅞, a 52-week high. By Oct. 5, it was trading as low as 38¾, a drop of nearly 20 percent.

In the five trading days between Sept. 30 and last Wednesday, J&J was the most actively traded stock every day. About 10 percent of the firm's 187 million outstanding shares have been traded since the deaths surfaced.

WAS SOMEONE using cyanide to make a killing on the stock market?

Investigators pored through transaction records, looking for a clue. Perhaps coincidentally, the lone extortion attempt — said to be unconnected with the killings — was linked to a former stockbroker.

An intriguing question is why the killer chose Tylenol. Other products in drug stores would have worked as well, as the industry and government regulators quickly recognized.

In Washington, the Food and Drug Administration began meeting with manfacturers last week to agree on a means to make non-prescription drugs "tamper-resistant" — to find some means to reassure consumers that no one had tampered with their pain-reliever, vitamins, eyedrops or nasal spray.

There have been other financial implications.

The cost to Illinois taxpayers for the investigation is already "obviously in the millions," according to state Attorney General Tyrone Fahner, coordinator of the task force investigating the deaths.

'Do Mikes have more fun?' Definitely, say Mikes of America

Hearst Feature Service

There have been six Jameses, four Johns, two Andrews, a Millard, a Ulysses, a Grover, a Chester and even one Rutherford.

But as any elementary school student can point out, there's never been a U.S. president named Mike.

However, that may soon change, at least if one national club has its way.

"Mike is probably the oldest name known to mankind," argues Mike Nelson, founder and president of "Mikes of America," an elite organization of people who are, well, named "Mike."

"We'd like to get enough people to throw our influence into getting a Mike into the presidency," he added. "We could use a Mike there."

Lest anyone think Nelson is only joshing, take a look at the movement's potential power base. According to modest estimates, there are currently more than 1.5 million Mikes in the U.S. And the name is still the most popular for male newborns, added Nelson, a 34-year-old Minneapolis-based journalist.

According to Mikeology, the name dates back to the archangels.

"No one names their kid Lucifer, so we figure there was God, and then Mike," said Nelson. "We're proud of our heritage. If it's that popular, it must be a good name."

Since its humble beginnings three years ago, Mikes of America has blossomed to over 5,000 members nationwide, including such luminaries as Mike Wallace, actor Michael Landon and "Late Night" host David "Mike" Letterman, who was allowed to join, Nelson said, because of his middle name.

"In case there are still some Joes or Phils out there who doubt the superiority of Mikes," Mike Giannotti of Ontario is quoted in the club newsletter as saying, "I refer them to the Oxford English Dictionary, volume six, page 407, where the definition of Michael is given: 'One who is like God.'"

Now the club is planning its first "Mike Convention," scheduled for Minneapolis next summer, along with a "Mikeathon."

Department will offer tennis class

The class will meet from 12:15 to 1:15 p.m. Monday and Wednesday at Midland College. Dates for lessons are Nov. 1, 3, 8, 10, 15 and 17. Fee is $8 for the six lessons.

These lessons are designed for people who already have had some basic playing. They will concentrate on ball placement, position of players, serve, return of serve and volley, all in a playing position. This should be a help to the beginnner and intermediate player and should improve league play, according to a department news release.

Linda Atlee, who teaches at MC, will be the instructor. Registrations are being taken at the Parks and Recreation Office, 300 Baldwin.

Burton will emcee opera benefit to be attended by Princess Diana

Richard Burton

LONDON (AP) — Actor Richard Burton will be the emcee when Princess Diana attends a performance of the Welsh National Opera Company for the first time.

Burton, a native of Wales, will introduce excerpts from operas to be performed by the company at a charity gala Oct. 29, the Welsh National Opera Benevolent Fund announced Thursday.

The event at New Theater in Cardiff is to raise money for the fund.

The Princess of Wales is patron of the opera company, but this will be the first performance she has attended.

NEW YORK (AP) — Wright Morris, author of "The Field of Vision" and "Plains Song," has received the 1982 Common Wealth Award for Distinguished Service in Literature.

Morris, who has published 33 books since 1942, will receive $14,000 and a commemorative sculpture. He lives in Mill Valley, Calif.

"Whether his setting has been the emptier settlements of the plains or the settled estates of Philadelphia's Main Line, he has always astonished us with his ability to see us as we are — or were...," said Wayne Booth, president of the Modern Language Association.

Morris follows Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Robert Penn Warren, Milan Kundera and Nadine Gordimer as a winner of the award, which was established by the Common Wealth Trust, a foundation created under the will of Delaware businessman Ralph Hayes, who died in 1977.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Natalie Cole is unable to care for herself due to fatigue from overwork, so her mother is trying to take charge of the singer's affairs, according to an attorney.

Natalie Cole

Attorney Mary Burrell, representing Maria Cole, filed a conservatorship petition Oct. 4, saying the singer is "unable to properly provide for her personal needs for physical health, food, clothing or shelter" and seeking to give control to Mrs. Cole.

"There's nothing dramatically wrong with her. The (conservatorship) petition wasn't meant to convey that. She's suffering from stress and fatigue from overwork," Ms. Burrell said.

"She needs her mom right now...She's divorced and her closest living relative is her mother, and they are very close," the attorney said.

A hearing on the petition is set for Nov. 12 in Superior Court.

Epic Records, Miss Cole's recording company, said her new album will be released on schedule in February.

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher received a birthday cake from a computer company that plans to create 1,700 new jobs in Scotland.

M. Thatcher

Mrs. Thatcher, who quietly celebrated her 57th birthday Wednesday, thanked Wang UK Ltd. for the cake and the "splendid news."

"I am delighted to receive this splendid news on my birthday. Wang's investment will be a real shot in the arm for Britain and Scotland in particular," she said in a message cabled to the firm, a subsidiary of Wang Lowell of Boston.

Mrs. Thatcher observed her birthday without fanfare. "If she does make any celebrations, they will be private," said a spokesman at her 10 Downing St. office.

NEW YORK (AP) — Author J.D. Salinger has filed suit against a man he claims tried to sell a bogus interview to People magazine.

J.D. Salinger

Salinger, a recluse who lists his address as a post office box in Windsor, Vt., had the suit filed in U.S. District Court on Sept. 30 against Steven Kunes of Manhattan.

The complaint charged that Kunes "engaged in a variety of fraudulent activities" which included impersonating Salinger and passing off his own writings as those of Salinger.

The complaint said that Kunes offered to sell to People magazine "a completely fictitious interview with J.D. Salinger."

Kunes' Manhattan attorney, David Shuffman, declined to comment Thursday night, saying he needed time to study the case more closely. Kunes' telephone number is unlisted.

The author, whose works include "Catcher In The Rye," "Frannie and Zooey" and "Raise High the Roof Beam, Carpenter," contends that Kunes carried out the activities with "malice, wantonly and deceitfully."

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — In a glittering extravaganza recalling Hollywood's heyday, today's stars paraded in clothes from such film classics as "High Society," "Gypsy" and "My Fair Lady."

The gala Wednesday night was to benefit a local charity, but the organizer said he hoped the 42 resurrected gowns would form the core of a Hollywood costume museum.

Sequins and rhinestones glistened, feathers and fur whirled in the Beverly Hilton grand ballroom as actresses Lucille Ball, Ursula Andress and Shirley Jones and others modeled the fancy costumes.

The loudest applause was for Miss Ball, who danced on stage in the red velvet pants outfit designed by Theodora Van Runkle which Miss Ball wore herself in the 1974 movie musical "Mame."

There also were cheers for Miss Jones, who stepped out in the floor-length orange chiffon Dorothy Jeakins turn-of-the-century dress she had worn 20 years ago as the ingenue in "The Music Man."

Rev. Moon marries thousands in Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Thousands of veiled brides in white gowns and grooms sporting dark suits jammed a gymnasium today, married by Unification Church leader the Rev. Sun Myung Moon in what followers called the largest mass wedding in history.

The 5,837 couples from 83 countries — some of whom never met each other until Moon suggested they marry — recited vows while the solemn-faced Korean evangelist sprinkled them with perfume-scented water.

"Do you pledge, centering upon the ideal family, to become a center of love before the society, nation, world and cosmos?," the 62-year-old Moon, clad in white robes, intoned from the pulpit. The brides and grooms shouted in hearty unison: "Yes!"

After standing in line for more than four hours to get into the Chamsil Gymnasium, the couples filled lower tiers and stood in ranks across the floor while relatives, guests and spectators crammed balcony seats.

The couples remain celibate for 40 days in accordance with the church rules.

Most were paired in a matchmaking process overseen by Moon, who was said to have suggested more than 3,000 engagements in the past eight days.

THE PROCESS CONSISTS of Moon meeting, interviewing and talking with prospective brides and grooms, church officials said. Afterward, Moon decides on those he thinks would suit each other and "recommends" they marry. Such recommendations can be accepted or rejected, the church says.

The couples began lining up outside the gym in southern Seoul 4½ hours before the ceremony. Walking inside, they formed ranks of six couples to ascend a red-carpeted platform and file between Moon and his wife, Hak Ja Han.

Clad in flowing white robes with white, crown-like headgear, the Moons stood on pedestals sprinking the couples with water, which a church source said was scented with Chanel No. 5 perfume.

After the hourlong procession, the couples took the wedding vows, received Moon's invocation, exchanged rings, heard an offering of thanks, a congratulatory hymn and the traditional Korean cheer of "Mansei," meaning 10,000 years.

No couples were seen crying during the nearly three-hour ceremony and there were no signs of fatigue or impatience with the long wait and rituals. Several brides were seen in the corridors slipping out to the powder rooms.

Though there have been reports of some families being upset over their children belonging to the Unification Church, none of that sentiment was seen at the ceremony or among crowds assembled outside the church later.

ONE PARTICIPANT, TIM ELDER, an American raised in Japan and living in Korea, decribed the wedding as "very large, but very beautiful." He married a Korean woman.

A church announcement said 300 rented buses, thousands of taxis and private vehicles were used to transport the couples and others in the wedding. There was no reception but some relatives took snapshots outside afterward.

The church apparently paid for much of the wedding, although exact figures were unavailable. Church officials said the participants paid their own way to the wedding plus $300 each for other expenses such as wedding gowns and suits.

Mose Durst, president of the Unification Church of America, said the wedding was one of several that will unite 10,000 couples in mass weddings from July 1982 to July 1983.

The world's largest mass wedding took place in Seoul, South Korea, at the Chamsil Gymnasium Thursday. A total of 5,837 couples from 83 countries were married in Rev. Sun Myung Moon's unification church rites.

Asked why the church favors such mass weddings, Durst said they represent a "dramatic statement to the world."

MOON AND HIS WIFE ARE said to have officiated at more than 12 mass weddings worldwide. A 1975 a mass wedding in Seoul with 1,800 couples married by Moon was listed by the Guinness Book of World Records as the world's largest.

Church officials said 3,237 couples came from Japan, while there were 1,480 Korean couples, 700 European, 63 African, 148 American and nearly 200 from other areas. Ages of the paricipants ranged from 21 to 61.

Durst said the church has 3 million members worldwide, with about 40,000 members in the United States. He said the divorce rate among Unification members is 2 percent.

Moon, a Korean national who makes his home in the United States, came here last week to serve as host for the Fifth World Media Conference, a meeting sponsored by a media organization that he also founded.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Former White House counsel John Dean says his next book will reveal the identity of "Deep Throat," an anonymous source who provided key information to Washington Post reporters in the Watergate case.

In an interview Wednesday, Dean was asked if he actually reveals the name of Deep Throat.

"I tell...but you'll have to wait to read the book to know who it is," he said.

Dean said his new book, titled "Lost Honor," is nearly finished and picks up where "Blind Ambition" left off in describing his years as counsel to President Nixon.

"It puts Watergate in the background and tells a very personal story of putting my own life together again after it happened," Dean said at a gala Hollywood benefit where he was joined by his wife, Maureen.

"I talk about what it all meant to everyone involved — to the presidency, to the media, to Congress," he said.

"It's also the story of who was Deep Throat," he said, referring to the source credited by Post reporters Robert Woodward and Carl Bernstein. They wrote a book of their investigation, "All the President's Men," which was made into a movie.

Dean, who had his own radio talk show for a time after he served a Watergate prison sentence and moved to California, said he no longer has the show.

"But I'm still in the radio business," he explained, disclosing that he now has a production company which turns out special radio documentaries and music specials which are syndicated to various stations.

Dean said his new book would probably be published early next year.

His first book, "Blind Ambition," was the bases for a TV show. His wife also wrote a book about their Watergate experiences but she said she has no plans to do a sequel.

The Deans, who have become prominent figures in Beverly Hills society since they moved here eight years ago, participated in a star-studded evening in which Mrs. Dean was a model in a show of historical movie costumes.

Statue, flagpole to be at side of monument

WASHINGTON (AP) — Veterans who saw a "black gash of shame" in the monument that has been built to honor Americans who fought in Vietnam will get what they want — a flag and a traditional statue of three GIs in combat.

But the government's Fine Arts Commission decided to put the statue and flagpole off to the side of the block-long, V-shaped Vietnam memorial, and not in the center, where the critics said they belonged.

The commission made that decision Wednesday after hearing from both sides.

First came the veterans who disliked the original monument of black, granite walls bearing the names of 57,709 dead and missing Americans. Then the commission took testimony from the architectural community, which called the design perfect and said it would stimulate reflection.

Maya Ying Lin, the 22-year-old Yale architecture graduate whose abstract plan won the design competition for the memorial — the biggest design contest in architectural history — expressed satisfaction with the compromise.

She said she would view the results as two separate monuments.

She had pleaded with the commission "to protect the artistic integrity of the original design." Putting the flagpole and statue in the center would create "intrusions," she said.

And sculptor Frederick Hart, who designed the eight-foot statue, called the decision "Solomon-like" and satisfactory.

It remains to be seen whether the compromise will satisfy the original critics. James Webb, author of the best-selling novel of the war, "Fields of Fire," said he wanted to wait a while before deciding.

"It seems clear they rejected the idea of a single monument," he said.

Reaction was awaited, too, from Interior Secretary James Watt, who had given his approval to making centerpieces of the statue and the 50-foot flagpole. With that plan, Miss Lin's walls would have served as a backdrop.

Construction of the memorial is almost complete. It is situated on the mall, between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington Monument.

Miss Lin's design, selected from 1,421 entrees in the competition, provided for a monument of two polished black granite walls, each 200 feet long, descending 10 feet into the ground and meeting in a wide V.

Its selection stirred an uproar from a band of veterans and congressmen, who demanded the statue and flag as patriotic symbols of what they experienced and why they fought.

The protest started with Tom Carhart, a wounded infantry platoon leader in Vietnam, who went before the commission and denounced Miss Lin's plan as "a black gash of shame and sorrow."

Carhart said the memorial's V shape reminded him of the anti-war protest at home. He said veterans wanted a memorial that was white, above-ground and heroic, not black, submerged and funereal.

At Wednesday's commission session, veterans of Vietnam and earlier wars, a Gold Star mother, a congressman, the Vietnam Memorial Fund and a spokesman for Watt echoed those views. They said they wanted patriotic symbols, not abstract art.

Pitted against them was Miss Lin and the architectural establishment, as represented by Robert M. Lawrence, president of the American Institute of Architects, and Paul Spreiregen, artistic adviser to the design competition.

"We should not allow a patched-up, modified, compromised memorial to be built," Lawrence argued and Spreiregen called the proposed changes "very serious mischief" which would cheapen the work's meaning.

"A great work of art doesn't tell you what to think — it makes you think," he said.

Police shows more than cops 'n' robbers

Sgt. Joe Friday was strictly a meat-and-potatoes man. No levity. No loose lips ("Just the facts, ma'am."). No female companions. And no sex.

In the TV blotter for this new season, the approach sashays more to the relationships and suggestiveness of the co-educational detective shows. NBC's "Remington Steele" and CBS' "Tucker's Witch" feature winsome and whimsical crime-solving couples, both programs improving on the droll "Hart to Hart."

Although ABC's "Matt Houston" works alone, that doesn't mean he isn't surrounded by women. After all, the show comes from Aaron Spelling's stable. Spelling brought the world "Charlie's Angels," and, this season, he's executive producer of six ABC series: "Dynasty," "Hart to Hart," "T.J. Hooker," "Fantasy Island," "The Love Boat," and "Matt Houston."

The other gumshoe to get a shingle this season is Rock Hudson in the "Devlin Connection." This NBC program runs against the co-ed craze, with Hudson, who practically invented pillow-talk with Doris Day and, on TV, with Susan Saint James. This time, the approach is "McMillan and Son."

Perhaps it's only a coincidence, but, based on original episodes, "Devlin Connection," on Saturday night, is the least appealing of the new detective programs.

Hudson, who looks in fine fettle following his heart attack, plays a debonair city cultural director who sold his detective agency. But he gets back into the business when he meets his long-lost son, who happens to be a street-smart private eye. Former model Jack Scalia plays his son.

There's an artificiality about "Devlin Connection." Nick calls his father "Big Guy," and the relationship and plot seems too far-fetched.

"Matt Houston" is not selling believability, either. But that's never the point of Spelling's never-never-land view of the world. It's all beautiful people, beautiful scenery and beautiful action in, of course, one beautiful package.

Lee Horsley, who looks like Tom Selleck and sounds like Dennis Weaver from "McCloud," is good at folksy, self-deprecating humor. "I just ask questions. You see, that's how I know I'm a detective."

It's easy to be self-effacing when you have everything. Houston is a multimillionaire tycoon, originally from Texas, who now does private investigating as a sideline in Los Angeles. He helicopters to his office. He has a computer named "Baby" and other fancy James Bond gadgets.

He also has a Harvard-educated gal Friday named C.J., the classy Pamela Hensley, who also serves as the Greek chorus, moving the cotton-candy plot on its merry way. Since C.J. is brunette, Houston's garage attendant is blonde. And so it goes.

The first Sunday, "Matt Houston" bombed in the ratings. But, the second time out, it was the week's highest-rated new show.

"Remington Steele," on Friday night, has style of a different kind. It sells intrigue and subtlety. The Nick and Nora Charles here are Ireland's Pierce Brosnan ("Manions of America") and Stephanie Zimbalist. They're very good at the wink-wink, tongue-in-cheek game of TV chasin' and courtin'.

Laura Holt is the private detective and Remington Steele her dashing and conniving front man. He's necessary because clients are wary of female sleuths.

"You've seen too many movies, Miss Holt."

"Remington Steele" has potential, as does the sassy "Tucker's Witch," on Wednesday nights. The leads, recast since the pilot, are Tim Matheson and Catherine Hicks as a husband-and-wife detective team.

Amanda Tucker has special telepathic-telekinetic powers, which she can't always control. She uses them to thwart evil, or snap her husband into bed. When all else fails, she can also throw a good punch in the mouth.

Art show at MC McCormick Gallery

The Midland Arts Association fall show is currently hanging in the McCormick Gallery at the Allison Fine Arts Building at Midland College through Oct. 30.

Juror for the show was Harry Nadler, professor of art at the University of New Mexico. Nadler holds a master of arts degree from The University of California and has held positions at UCLA, New York University and Wesleyan University. He has had numerous one-man shows and group exhibitions around the United States and was named to Who's Who in American Art.

Schomberg sculpture at Jastrow Gallery

Schomberg, a sports sculptor, is perhaps best known for his 10-foot bronze statuary entitled "Rocky," used in the filming of "Rocky III." The Rocky statue is yet another in a continuing series of Schomberg's sculpture depicting the victorious and the defeated.

The gallery is also introducing two new artists, Dale Clark and James Rome.

Gallery hours are 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Friday.

'Deathtrap' opens Friday at Theater I

This comedy-thriller will be onstage in Theatre I for a nine-performance run. The cast includes Charles Dixon, Mary Lou Cassidy, Penny Taulman, Gary Swisher and Jerry Green. This production is being directed by Midland Community Theatre's assistant director, Ted Strickland. Jack Fox, Ruth Price and Jan Matthews are the stage managers.

Reviewers can't help generating rage, disappointment

By CHARLES CHAMPLIN
Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — A friend who moved from the top ranks of book publishing in New York to the upper-middle ranks of a film studio once told how, until he created an authentic box office hit, he felt as if he went about Hollywood wearing a leper's bell and preceded by a bearer crying, "Unclean! Unclean!," on grounds that lack of success may be contagious.

In trying times I have occasionally thought I traveled with a sort of inverse leper's bell, preceded by small persons crying, "Clean! Clean!" or "Fair!" or, unkindest cut of all, "Kind!," damaging accusations leveled in print by non-critics and, with only one exception who comes to mind, by graceless writers who could not safely be trusted to compose a laundry list.

The latest charge is that I managed to review films for 17 years without angering Hollywood, which is on the fatuous slope of nonsensical.

Who will forget the day Adolph Zukor tried to trip me as I passed his table in the Paramount commissary? Or the time Jack L. Warner sought to bar me from the executive dining room (I was lost, actually) for not laughing at one of his jokes? Or the anonymous hate letter that could only have come from a disgruntled former extra?

It is true that I am quoted as attacking only three of the recently identified 50 worst films of modern times. But it is also true that I'd seen only three of the 50. All but the really devout masochists among film reviewers can take suffering or leave it alone, and do not have to have had the experience to know that "Revenge of the Maggots" or "Flaming Thighs" is not their cup of hot salt water.

LIKE COPS busting a wagonful of winos, you can always run up your critical arrest record by flailing away at the defenseless, or by snarling that a dumb program picture that will be lucky to end its playing days in the salon of a listing cruise ship in the Dead Sea is actually a crime against civilization.

But it's essentially a sham, and dispiriting as well. The feeling that you are dribbling your life away in the long darkness between excitements gets to you after a while, as Burt Prelutsky and other early retirees, myself included, have reported.

The fact is that no one can review films or anything else without occasionally generating disappointment at a minimum and outrage at a maximum.

Please don't tell me that the proprietors of a long list of films, dating all the way back to "Riot on Sunset Strip" and "The Invincibles" and all the way forward to the recent unsuccessful "Success," by way of such conspicuous items as "A Place for Lovers," "Camelot," "1776," "The Serpent's Egg," "Song of Norway," "The Wiz," the imperishable "Moment by Moment" and a few hundred other laugh riots, were amused and unoffended by my blasts.

There is an etiquette of silence in Hollywood toward nearly all reviewers — a silence sometimes violated in the case of favorable notices but consistently observed when the reviews are mixed or blasts. The wisdom of silence is, I presume, "let's not make the s.o.b. any madder than he is."

Movies (unlike most books) being collaborative, the guilt is either diffused over many hands or concentrated on a few, not all. The retaliations in public or private generally occur when one ego feels disproportionately bruised. The fact is that unless a given review seems likely to hurt the box office (an event roughly as rare as a September snowfall in Los Angeles), the bruised or the corporate types reserve the murder in their hearts and silently hope the knots in their stomach untie quickly.

BUT WHETHER reviews cause outrage or only disappointment also derives from what the critic's underlying attitude toward his function and toward the medium is perceived to be. It is no secret that a lot of reviewing is itself undertaken as diverting entertainment, a means to other ends (including career ends for the writer), and not really serious.

It is also no secret that there is forever more mediocre and failed art than great art, in any form, the spread being more dramatic in films and television.

Record set in Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Twenty three companies, setting an Alaska lease-sale record, have bid $2.06 billion on 125 tracts for oil and gas exploration rights in the Beaufort Sea off the North Slope.

Although 1.8 million acres in the Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) Sale 71 were up for grabs, the frenzy Wednesday was focused on just 15 tracts covering about 85,000 acres in Harrison Bay. The high bids there alone totaled almost $1.6 billion.

The hotspot is off the Colville River delta, northwest of Oliktok Point and about 60 miles northwest of Prudhoe Bay, America's richest producing field.

Government geologists estimate there is a 99.3 percent chance of finding commercial quantities of oil or gas in the sale area, and Wednesday's bidding made it clear the industry agrees at least on that spot.

Sohio Alaska Petroleum Co., a Standard Oil Co. (Ohio) unit, Mobil Corp. and BP Alaska Explorations Inc., a British Petroleum Co. unit, joined in offering the highest bid of the day, $227 million for Tract 191.

Another consortium headed by Texaco Inc. wasn't far behind with $219 million on Tract 206, diagonally adjacent to 191 in the heart of the coveted region.

Sohio and its partners won six of the favored tracts; the Texaco group and a combine headed by Shell Oil Co. got three each.

The spirited sale wasn't a record for a federal OCS offering, but it got Interior Secretary James Watt's accelerated leasing program off to a rousing start.

In a telephone call from New Orleans, Watt said he was delighted with the outcome of the sale, thought to be the most lucrative of the 41 scheduled over the next five years.

Government geologists estimate the sale area's potential reserves at between 500 million and 4.7 billion barrels of oil, and 1.78 trillion cubic feet of gas.

Vern Wiggins, co-chairman of the Alaska Land Use Council, who conveyed Watt's remarks before and after the sale, said proceeds were about four times what congressional budget analysts predicted. But industry officials had forecast a total between $1 billion and $3 billion.

The record for an OCS sale is $2.7 billion for Gulf of Mexico tracts sold in September 1980.

Watt said if the sale drew more than $1 billion it would be a success. He said he was counting on strong industry interest to silence critics who maintain that accelerated leasing in the face of a worldwide oil glut is the equivalent of a bargain-basement fire sale.

Despite the intense competition on a few tracts, almost three-fifths of the tracts were won by lone bids.

There were 338 tracts up for sale, but only 125 received a total of 252 bids. Nearly one-third of the bids were received on the 15 Harrison Bay tracts.

The minumum acceptable bid was $150 an acre, or an average of $850,000 per tract. The expense generally limited the action to the giants of the industry, many bidding as partners with others.

A dizzying array of percentages on joint bids made it difficult to assess who spent the most, but Sohio, Shell and ARCO Alaska Inc., were among the most successful.

In addition to the geological prospects, the area's production potential is enhanced by its proximity to the trans-Alaska oil pipeline, providing transportation to the marine terminal at Valdez, 800 miles to the south.

On top of cash bonuses, winning bidders will pay the government a percentage of any oil and gas produced, ranging from 12.5 percent to 65 percent, depending on the tracts' potential and productivity.

Harvester plan approved

CHICAGO (AP) — International Harvester Co. says it won approval from 200 creditors for a new plan to reorganize its huge and mounting debt and to forestall the need to file for protection under federal bankruptcy laws.

However, industry analysts noted that the latest version of the debt reorganization plan hinges on concessions Harvester hopes to win from its suppliers, raising the possibility that further revisions might be necessary if the concessions do not materialize.

The cornerstone of the plan announced Wednesday was a provision allowing the truck, tractor and heavy equipment manufacturer to convert up to $350 million of its debt into equity that the lenders would own, at the rate of $3 for every $1 in concessions granted by suppliers. The concessions, which are now being negotiated, would include price cuts, easing of payment terms and inventory adjustments.

In addition, Harvester will not be required to pay any interest on its debt for the final quarter of fiscal 1982, and will enjoy interest reductions throughout fiscal 1983, beginning at 2 percent in the first quarter and rising to 11 percent in the fourth quarter.

Harvester said the plan would reduce interest payments on its debt by about $200 million over an 18-month period, asssuming a prime interest rate of 13 percent.

Banks go to 12-percent prime

NEW YORK (AP) — A 12 percent prime lending rate has been adopted across the banking industry, and consumer loan rates are beginning to fall faster.

Most major banks cut their prime rate by one point Wednesday, matching the level set a day earlier by Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. and three other big banks.

The prime rate is a base from which banks calculate interest charges on loans to corporations. Some top-rated companies pay less than the prime while smaller companies usually pay more, but virtually all businesses have complained for more than two years that high borrowing costs have stunted economic growth.

The prime rate has fallen four percentage points since July, but lenders have been slower to reduce rates on consumer loans, in part because consumer loans are generally for longer periods than business loans.

Crocker National Bank in San Francisco said it lowered its rate on certain home loans by one percentage point, to a range of 14 percent to 14.25 percent. And in San Diego, Great American Federal Savings & Loan Association cut its home loan rates by as much as three-quarters of a point, to as low as 12.75 percent.

Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co., a major New York City bank, reduced rates on new personal loans by as much as 1½ percentage points.

Glass trade picks up, workers back

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Chattanooga Glass Co. says that improved sales helped the company to reduce inventories and to recall almost all of the nearly 300 production workers laid off last month.

"We're at 100 percent operating capacity and at full employment at this time," Gene Watson, the company's manager of industrial relations, said Wednesday.

The Chattanooga-based company laid off the employees in early September at its Chattanooga plant as part of a production cutback aimed at reducing product inventories. Chattanooga Glass operates five plants around the country, but the layoffs only affected the Chattanooga plant, which makes bottles for the soft-drink industry.

The laid-off employees have been returning by groups during recent weeks, putting about 280 workers back on the job, Watson said.

The company had shut down two electrically powered glass-making furnaces in September, leaving just a gas-fired furnace operating, but has now restored all three furnaces to operation, Watson said.

Charles F. Casey, the company president, said last month that inventories had accumulated to a more than 60-day supply. He said the company prefers to keep its inventories in the 45-to-60-day range.

"The shipments, which relate directly to the sales, have been a little better than we anticipated. Can't knock that," Watson said.

Governor to seek protective legislation

AUSTIN BUREAU

AUSTIN — Gov. Bill Clements said Wednesday he will seek legislation to protect Texas petroleum royalty owners and independent producers from "harsh treatment" under federal bankruptcy laws.

In issuing his statement, Clements also commended Earnest Angelo, Midland, who Clements said had brought the issue to his attention on behalf of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association and Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association.

Clements also said he is looking at seeking similar aid for grain farmers who suffer losses in grain elevator bankruptcies.

Under current laws, Clements said, owners of oil royalties lose all claim of ownership to the oil once it is produced and delivered to buyers, and become "unsecured creditors."

"If the petroleum buyer goes into bankruptcy, the owner and investor are generally left with no compensation for their product," Clements said, "even if the oil has been refined and sold to the public."

"The problem has become acute in recent months with bankruptcy petitions of several oil purchasers, including Basin Inc. (of Midland); Brio Petroleum Inc.; Compton Petroleum Corp.; and Compton's subsidiary, Gatex Corp.

"In the case of Basin Inc., individuals and familes across Texas and throughout the country lost million in debts owed them by the purchaser," Clements said.

The governor said he will support legislation next session to allow royalty owners and independent producers to hold a lien against their oil, so that they are assured of payment.

"Our concern," he said, "is for the 75,000 royalty owners and independent producers across Texas who are left holding the bag by the federal bankruptcy laws."

"We are not talking about big oil companies here," Clements said.

"We must protect these people from the harsh teatment they receive under the present law."

The governor said he is looking at an Illinois statute adopted last June which provides that farmers, with written evidence of ownership of grain, will have first priority on the grain, proceeds from grain, commodity exchange accounts, future contracts or any funds which could be traced to sale of the grain by a bankrupt dealer.

Germany to deny U.S.S.R. cheap credit for exports

By John P. Wallach
Hearst Foreign Affairs Editor

WASHINGTON — West Germany's Chancellor Helmut Kohl has informed a Soviet trade commission headed by a member of the Kremlin's ruling Politburo that West Germany no longer will be extending cheap credit to finance Russian exports to the West, West German officials disclosed here today.

The development, which was reported to the White House Wednesday by U.S. Ambassador Arthur Burns but has not yet been made public, is a major breakthrough for President Reagan's campaign to deny the Soviet Union below market rates of interest on loans until martial law is lifted in Poland.

"It's happy news," State Department spokesman John Hughes said in commenting on the cable from Burns that was received after the U.S. envoy held his first meeeting with Kohl in Bonn Wednesday. The Soviet trade commission has been holding talks with the new government for the last three days.

If other European nations follow West Germany's example, it should also make it easier for Reagan to eventually lift U.S. trade sanctions that have caused new strains in the Western alliance. Secretary of State George Shultz has hinted that Reagan will lift them if new, tougher steps are agreed on.

As a first step in that direction, the 16 NATO nations last week sought to ease tensions over the Soviet natural gas pipeline by agreeing to coordinate their energy and security policies in the future. U.S. officials hope that they will agree to implement the new policies by the end of the year.

But no one in the Reagan administration expected such good news from West Germany so quickly. "This is in line with all our thinking - that you don't subsidize the Russians," Hughes said. "Why should they get credit at any less than the market rates ?," he asked.

The Soviet trade commission currently in Bonn is headed by Alexandrov Solomenzew, an alternate Politburo member. He also is prime minister of the largest of the Soviet republics, the Russian S.F.S.R.

Solomenzew is accompanied by the director of the Foreign Trade Ministry and several other high-ranking Soviet officials. The move by Kohl, who only Monday was sworn in as chancellor, is courageous for other reasons.

West Germany is in the midst of its most serious economic recession, with unemployment topping 7.5 per cent and a record 1.8 million Germans out of work. That means West Germany badly needs the business with the Soviet bloc, which already accounts for almost one-third of its overall trade.

But Kohl, who will pay his first visit as chancellor to the White House when he arrives here around November 15, is determined to toe a more pro-American line than his predecessor Helmut Schmidt, who envisaged West Germany playing more of a middleman's role with one foot in each Moscow and Washington.

Although the leader of the new Christian Democratic government supports the Soviet pipeline project, he was critical of the outgoing Social Democrats for importing too large a volume of natural gas and thus making West Germany more heavily dependent on Russia for its energy needs than necessary.

"There is determination on our side," a spokesman for the West German Embassy here said, in disclosing the new, tougher attitude of his government on East-West relations. But he linked it to eventual lifting of the ban on trade by U.S. subsidiaries abroad with the Soviet Union.

France and West Germany have been hardest hit by the U.S. sanctions and indeed have defied the ban by instructing the foreign subsidiaries to go ahead and make the sales of pipe-laying equipment, rotars and compressors that Moscow needs to complete the pipeline.

That has put giant companies such as the Illinois-based Caterpillar, already forced to lay off hundreds of employees,and John Brown technically in contempt of court orders to desist such trade. They have been blacklisted from supplying new products to their overseas subsidiaries.

But so far at least the Reagan administration has not sought fines or prison sentences against executives of the U.S. companies.endit

Edwards wants WPT done away with soon

DALLAS (AP) — U.S. Energy Secretary James Edwards says he will urge President Reagan to work to abolish the windfall profits tax on crude oil "as soon as possible."

"We've got to get the oil patch back to work again," he said. "We have got to do away with the windfall profits tax as soon as we can, so that domestic producers can be competitve."

The remark drew applause Wednesday from delegates at the Independent Petroleum Association of America here.

Edwards also said the White House probably would send a bill calling for accelerated decontrol of natural gas prices to Congress early next year.

"I think the president will come out early in the next session and push through the natural gas deregulation bill," he said.

Reagan declined to push for decontrol of natural gas prices last March after Edwards predicted that he would do so in 1981.

"It was one of our big disappointments," Edwards said. "I was a little afraid to recommend the deregulation of natural gas. Coming from the political side, I could see the dangers of it."

Congressmen from both parties had pleaded with Reagan to delay the move, arguing that consumers had just paid high home heating bills the previous winter.

He said the bill the White House probably will send to Congress will ask for accelerated decontrol of natural gas prices, the removal of restrictions on the use of natural gas, deregulation of "old gas," and allowances for gas prices to rise or fall in the marketplace.

In a convention sidelight, an Amarillo independent gas producer blamed major interstate pipeline companies for driving up natural gas prices.

Danny Conklin, the assocation's natural gas committee chairman, said the need for total decontrol of natural gas prices is more obvious than ever.

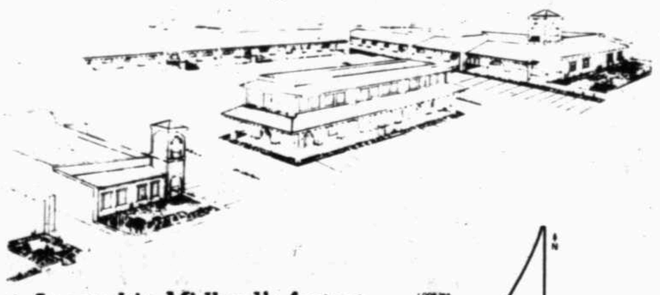

"Consumers naturally are angry about rising prices, but it is time they blamed the Natural Gas Act, Natural Gas Policy Act and all of the governmentally induced distortions that are causing the pipeline industry to do the things it is doing," he said.

Adobe Oil extends Oklahoma field

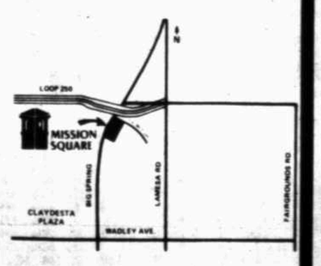

Adobe Oil & Gas Corp. reports completion of an important extension to the North Simon field in its Oakman 32-1A well in Love County, Okla. The well was drilled to total depth 11,775 feet and completed in the Viola formation through perforations from 11,048 to 11,229 feet. It tested 720 barrels of oil daily through a 20/64-inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 650 psi.

Adobe owns 27.6 percent working interst in the Oakman 32-1A. Conoco Inc. has 26.1 percent; CNR Resources Inc 14.9 percent; Moran Exploration Inc. 13.2 percent; Jones Exploration Co. 5.8 percent and various individuals and corporations have the remaining 12.4 percent of working interest. Adobe has a large acerage postion in the area of the well.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned mixed in heavy trading today, pausing from a rally that had propelled the Dow Jones industrials average to a 17-month high.

Four stocks rose in price for every three that fell in the midday tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

But the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which rose 11.40 points Wednesday, dropped back 7.63 points to 1,007.45 in the first two hours of trading.

Falling interest rates and rising expectations for a recovery triggered Wall Street's two-month rally, in which the blue-chip average climbed more than 30 percent prior to today's session.

At a bond market conference in New York, economist David Jones of Aubrey G. Lanston & Co. forecast a 7 percent prime rate by next fall. And economists W. Lee Hoskins of Pittsburgh National Bank and Alan Lerner of Bankers Trust predicted the rate would fall to 10 percent by the end of this year from the 12 percent level adopted this week.

But the highest unemployment rate in 42 years has raised concern over the prospects for a resurgence of consumer spending to lift the economy out of recession. The Labor Department reported today that 695,000 first-time claims for unemployment benefits were filed in the week ended Oct. 2, up from a revised 683,000 in the previous week.

President Reagan said Wednesday night that the stock market's surge represented "a strong vote of confidence in the foundation being laid for America's recovery." In a Democratic response to the president's address, Sen. Donald Riegle Jr. of Michigan said, "We're glad to see the Wall Street rally. The problem though is on Main Street. And on Main Street, the numbers are still heading down."

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stock fell .02 to 78.28. But at the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 4.08 at 318.87.

Big Board volume reached 51.48 million shares a third of the way through today's session, down from 55.19 million in the same period Wednesday. In an unprecedented trading spree, more than 100 million shares have changed hands in each of the past five NYSE sessions.

Teledyne stock's adding meaning to 'volatility'

By STEVEN P. ROSENFELD
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK — Amid the turbulent trading of a stock market in the throes of an explosive rally, one issue has been giving new meaning to the word volatile: Teledyne.

On any given day, Teledyne stock can undergo bigger changes than some issues experience in an entire year.

Because of its enormous price swings, Teledyne is "not for the investor, it's the one for the trader," said Lew Smith, a technical market analyst for the investment firm of Bear, Stearns & Co.

Over the past year, Teledyne's common stock has ranged in price from $69.50 a share to $157.75.

And in recent weeks, the high-priced glamour issue has provided enough action to warm the heart of even a seasoned riverboat gambler.

When the stock market fell to two-year lows in August, Teledyne had one of the more precipitious drops of any of the big-name action stocks, Smith noted. In a four-week period, it dropped from $100 a share to $69.50. But a week later, it was trading at over $100 and has gained more ground since then.

More evidence of the issue's wild gyrations is found in Teledyne's October options, which expire this week and grant holders the right to buy or sell the stock at a predetermined price. Those prices range from $65 to $140 a share.

Carol Neves, who follows the fate of Teledyne for Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., said the market has been ignoring the company's earnings, which she expects to continue falling for as much as another year. What has excited traders, she said, is Teledyne's own $3 billion portfolio.

The company has interests in industrial products, financial services, aviation, defense, electronics, specialty metals and consumer goods. On top of that, it holds a wide range of investments, including substantial holdings in Litton Industries Inc., Curtiss-Wright Corp., Reichhold Chemicals Inc. and Brockway Inc.

In other words, trading in Teledyne stock "is a way to play the market," said Miss Neves.

Smith said: "It has tended to give you a proxy for the market with extended volatility...Teledyne's market portfolio value tends to go up and down with the market."

Smith said some institutional investors, representing such large pools of funds as pensions and insurance companies, were "playing catch up and looking for action" after missing the early stages of the stock market rally that has been raging since mid-August. "They knew Teledyne is action," he added.

But for some professionals, keeping up with Teledyne is not worth the effort.

"I've given up following it," said one analyst at a major brokerage house who requested anonymity because he wants to maintain friendly relations with the company.

"It's so volatile," he complained. "It's very difficult to follow. It's time consuming."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

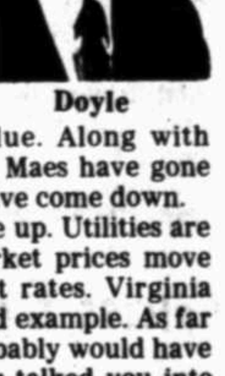

Ginnie Mae 'pass throughs' OK investment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I purchased 2,300 shares of Virginia Electric & Power Co. common stock in 1979 and received a dividend check every three months. On the advice of my broker, I sold that stock at profit and bought Government National Mortgage Association (GNMA) "pass-through" certificates, which provide a guaranteed check every month. Was this a wise move?

The broker seems to think the GNMAs will go up in value as interest rates come down. He has advised me to hold them for about a year and then see what is happening in other areas.

A. Assuming your aim was at higher current income, you made a good move. GNMA — nicknamed "Ginnie Mae" — pass-through certificates are backed by a pool of mortgages. Payment of interest and principal is guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the U.S. Treasury.

Doyle

Yields on Ginnie Maes are now higher than the dividend yields on utility common stocks such as you sold. So, on an income basis, you are now better off. And the broker was right about a potential gain in value. Along with other fixed-income securities, Ginnie Maes have gone up in market price as interest rates have come down.

But the stock you sold has also gone up. Utilities are "interest-sensitive" stocks. Their market prices move in the opposite direction of interest rates. Virginia Electric & Power happens to be a good example. As far as gain in value is concerned, you probably would have done better holding what the broker talked you into selling.

Also, you now hold a fixed-income investment. Your monthly interest from the Ginnie Mae certificates will never increase. Like many utilities, Virginia Electric & Power has been gradually raising the dividend payments on its common stock. Your dividend was hiked every year you held that stock. You gave up potential for future income increases when you made your investment switch.

I get suspicious of brokers who advise customers to change investments every so often. This generates commissions for the brokers, but not necessarily additional income for the customers.

* * *

Q. If the brokerage firm with which I leave my bonds goes bankrupt, do I become a creditor and get paid off at, say 20 cents on the dollar? The bonds are fully paid for and it's more convenient to have the brokerage house clip the interest coupons. However, I wouldn't want the bonds to be sold to pay off the broker's debts.

A. Don't fret. All brokerage firms doing a general business with the public are required to be members of the Securities Investor Protection Corp. SIPC was created by act of Congress in 1970 to protect investors when brokerage firms go bust.

SIPC insures everything you leave with a brokerage firm, up to $500,000 — including $100,000 in cash. It does not, of course, insure you against market losses if the values of your securities go down.

Nuclear power no longer as promising as 25 years ago

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The development of commercial nuclear power in the U.S. was impressive for many years but it is no longer as promising as it seemed 25 years ago when nuclear energy was generated for the first time to light up homes and factories in the Pittsburgh area.

Today, 73 commercial power reactors provide 12 percent of the nation's electrical energy.

Federal officials say nuclear power is now the second-largest source of electricity -after coal -in the U.S. By 1990, assuming an additional 64 nuclear power plants now under construction are completed, nuclear power will supply about 25 percent of energy requirements.

New nuclear power plants are beginning to come on line and the pace should pick up in the months ahead.

The Atomic Industrial Forum, a 600-member international association committed to a peaceful development of nuclear energy, reports five new reactors -one each in South Carolina, California, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Mississippi -have received the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's permission to start up so far during 1982.

An additional 22 reactors are scheduled for completion by the end of 1983.

By 1990, Deputy Secretary of Energy W. Kenneth Davis told a recent international symposium, the total investment by the industry in nuclear power will be on the order of $150 billion, even without orders for additional plants.

The industry today employs more than 300,000 people, a large proportion of them skilled.

But there are clouds on the horizon, Davis warned the International Conference On Nuclear Power Energy in Vienna.

"The promise of orderly further growth of nuclear power capacity - based on the history to date -is somewhat misleading in that the potential for rapid growth expected a few years ago has been dramatically modified," he said.

An Energy Department spokesman confirmed that since 1974 there have been no new nuclear plants ordered by U.S. utilities and, since 1972, 91 plants have been cancelled.

Davis said the prospects for additional orders in the next few years are uncertain because utilities are now projecting a lower growth in electricity needs than they had expected. Furthermore, utilities are reluctant to make long-term, capital-intensive construction commitments in the current economic situation.

The official said organized public opposition to nuclear power and complicated federal and state regulations have discouraged utilities from making new plans which include nuclear plants.

BUSINESS AND CONGRESS

A majority of small business chief executive officers would prefer to see the Republicans win control of both houses of Congress next month, according to the latest Roper Organization poll done for the Heller Small Business Institute.

In order to avoid question bias, half of the 1,004 executives polled were asked what would better serve the interest of "all diverse groups in our society" and half were asked what would best improve "the economic climate for businesses like your own." An identical proportion, 54 percent, supported Republican control of both houses in answer to both. Only 6 percent thought it would be best for the country if the Democrats won majorities and 7 percent felt a Democratic congressional victory would be most advantageous for them.

ENTERPRISE ZONES

Although the Senate Finance Committee approved the Reagan administration's enterprise zone proposal, do not expect final action in the "lame duck" session of Congress on the plan to create special incentives for companies to move into economically depressed areas. No matter what the Senate does with it, the House has no plans to even bring it up in the Ways and Means Committee.

The plan would allow these areas to compete for zone status. The bill would call for 75 zones, designated at a rate of 25 a year, with 24 of the zones located in rural areas.

ICC TO BITE THE DUST?

A newsletter published by the Regular Common Carrier Conference claims growing signs that, within a year, legislation will be drafted, passed by Congress and signed by the president to dismantle the Interstate Commerce Commission. The newsletter lists three ways in which this might happen: a process similar to that at the Civil Aeronautics Board, in which functions are being eliminated and or transferred to the Department of Transportation, simply closing down the place of combining the functions of various transportation agencies into one new super-agency.

CAR SAFETY

Sixteen states -nine this year -have so far mandated child restraint seats for small children in response to statistics showing car accidents to be the major cause of death for this age group. Another seven are considering similar measures.

At the same time, 10 states -two this year -have decided to repeal annual safety inspections for cars and trucks. The reasons: the contribution of the inpections to highway safety is not clear; motorists complain that garages are using the inspections to profit by making uncessary repairs, and a federal provision has been lifted which withheld highway funds from states that do not regularly inspect vehicles for safety.

While we're on car safety: the 55 mile-per-hour speed limit may again be a major issue in state legislative halls next year. Nevada, Arizona, and South Dakota have reduced penalties for driving between 55 and 70 and so far the lessened penalties have not been challenged as a violation of the federal limit. Supporters maintain that energy conservation and the savings in lives warrant the limit. But opponents argue that speed limits should be a state domain, that there are more significant methods to conserve energy and that speed limits are difficult to enforce in the sparsely populated West.

LEGISLATION IN TROUBLE

Small businesses that are forced to relocate because of federally-funded projects had hoped for speedy action on a Senate bill that would provide compensation for costs in addition to moving expenses. But the Uniform Relocation Act, which had won unanimous Senate approval, did not get out of the House Public Works Committee before Congress went home. The bill would provide up to $10,000 to each business displaced by federal projects. Currently, while homeowners are allowed up to $15,000 in relocation payments, businesses can only get moving expenses.

UNINFORMED

A recent Gallup poll suggests that the American public isn't very well informed about federal regulations. Consider this: half of those interviewed could not name even one federal regulation that affected them or their family; only 17 percent knew that the executive branch is responsible for making federal regulations while 47 percent thought Congress was, and more than half either could not name any difference between federal laws and federal regulations or else believed there was little or no difference between them.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Reagan administration has promised Sen. John W. Warner, R-Va., it will help get action during the "lame duck" congressionl session on port improvement legislation. There are at least 22 different port dredging bills before Congress . . . Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., has introduced legislation to create within the Defense Department an independent Office of Operational Testing which would be responsible for monitoring and passing independent judgment on new weapons long before they reach production stage. Critics claim that had such an office been in existence this country might have been spared the cost of building such weapons as the M-16 rifle used during the Vietnam War, the M-1 tank or the Maverick Missile, all of which have had serious operational problems . . . The Electronic Industries Association has asked the Senate Judiciary Committee to help enact legislation that would insure government contractors for catastrophic liability above that reasonably available on the market . . . The nation's largest 15 interstate moving companies have told the Interstate Commerce Commission revenues decreased 3.1 percent and income declined 7.4 percent during the second quarter of 1982, compared to the same period in 1981 . . . The Census Bureau reports that enrollment in private elementary and high schools dropped by nearly one-third from 1964 to 1979 . . . Government and industry officials will meet here Dec. 8 in a special one-day conference to work on the problems of paying for the clean-up of hazardous waste sites.

Fly now. Pay never.

Continental and Texas International Airlines announce TravelBank,℠ the frequent traveler bonus plan with the fastest take-off in the business: TravelAdvance.℠

Take your dream vacation now. Right now. If you're a frequent traveler with good credit, that's good enough for us. We'll fly you almost anywhere we go.

Leave anytime between now and November 15, next year; and you've got until then to accumulate enough mileage credits to square your account, and start you on your next free trip.

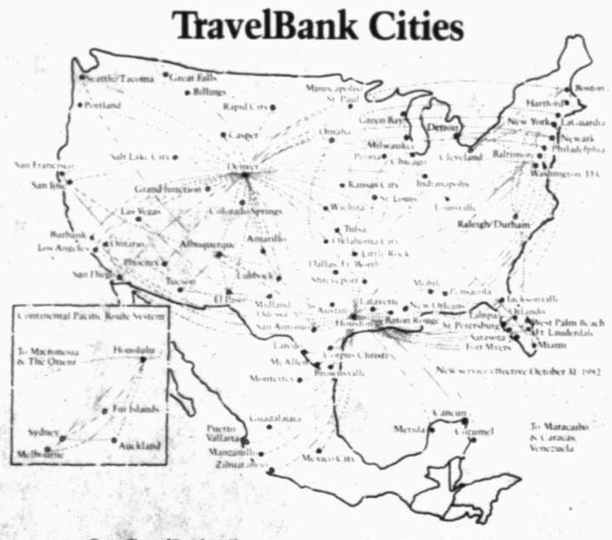

If you're short of mileage credits, you can pay us back in easy monthly cash installments.

But hurry. Memories last a lifetime, but this TravelAdvance offer ends November 30, 1982.

"Okay, I understand TravelAdvance. Now, tell me about TravelBank."

Most airlines' bonus programs are fine as far as they go; but they take forever to get anywhere. That's why we created TravelBank.

TravelBank Cities

Earn TravelBank miles on your next trip to New York City, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, D.C., Miami, Chicago, Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco. A total of 83 cities in the U.S., Mexico, Venezuela and the South Pacific.

Of course, you get mileage credits when you fly Continental and Texas International Airlines. (Any ticket, any fare, counts in TravelBank, with a 25% bonus for First Class.) But that's only the beginning.

The big difference is what happens when the plane stops.

Earn while you sleep.

Check into any participating Hilton Hotel or Inn and give yourself an extra thousand mile credit in your TravelBank account for every stay.

Drive to New Zealand.

Rent a National Rental Car at any participating location. No matter how far you drive it, each rental is worth a thousand miles in TravelBank.

New York and back is 5,700 miles.

Fly from Midland/Odessa to New York City and back. Rent a National Rental Car and stay at a Hilton.

Most airlines call that a 3,700 mile flight. TravelBank says it's 5,700 miles.

And leave the homework to us.

A lot of airlines' bonus plans make you do all the figuring and accounting. Not TravelBank. We'll do the posting and send your TravelBank statement along to you every month.

If you can't wait for TravelBank to start, don't.

We're open for business now, so start flying Continental and Texas International, saving your boarding passes, your ticket copies, your rental car receipts and hotel folios today.

AP Laserphoto

Milwaukee shortstop Robin Yount hurdles St. Louis runner Ken Oberkfell as Oberkfell steals second base in the sixth inning of Wednesday's World Series game in St. Louis. Yount wasn't able to put on the tag after taking the throw from catcher Ted Simmons. The Cardinals went on to win the game, 5-4.

Bases loaded walk lifts St. Louis to 5-4 victory

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Most pitchers shudder at the sight of the slugging Milwaukee Brewers.

Not Bruce Sutter.

Sutter marched out of the St. Louis bullpen Wednesday night and slammed the door on the Brewers as the Cardinals battled from behind for a vital 5-4 victory that tied the 1982 World Series at one win apiece.

The teams had a day off today as the Series moved to Milwaukee where Pete Vuckovich faces the Cardinals' Joaquin Andujar in Game Three Friday night.

The St. Louis victory was built on speed, a controversial walk that the Brewers thought was a strikeout and Sutter.

The relief ace had watched from the bullpen as the Brewers rattled 17 hits around Busch Stadium to capture the opening game of the Series, 10-0.

"I was impressed," the reliever said. "But I wasn't scared of them."

Very few teams frighten this master of the split-fingered fastball, whose scraggily beard makes him look like a mountain man when he comes lumbering out of the bullpen.

Manager Whitey Herzog never had a chance to go to his trump card in the opening game blowout. So he seized the opportunity when it presented itself in Game Two.

"I wanted to stay close and not get blown out," said Herzog. When middle-inning relievers Jim Kaat and Doug Bair accomplished that, Herzog called for his main man with two out in the seventh inning.

"I would hate to have a World Series and not have Sutter pitch," he said.

Sutter confounded Milwaukee's sluggers, allowing only two infield hits. And he got the boost he needed from batterymate Darrell Porter, the hitting star with a two-run double and a clutch single in the winning rally.

In the ninth, when pesky Paul Molitor opened with a bunt single, Porter gunned him down trying to steal second base. Then Sutter, whose 36 saves led the major leagues this season, mowed down the final two batters to complete the victory.

THIS GAME began like a another Brewer breeze. Milwaukee built a 3-0 lead in the first three innings against rookie John Stuper.

In the second, a walk, wild pitch and Charlie Moore's RBI-double made it 1-0. An inning later, Milwaukee added two more. Molitor singled, stole second, reached third on a wild pitch and scored on a groundout. Then ex-Cardinal Ted Simmons slammed his second home run of the Series, this one a shot into the second deck in right field.

With Willie McGee on first and one out in the third, the rookie swiped second. Running when you're three runs behind?

"Why not?" asked Herzog. "I'll run when I'm five runs ahead or five runs behind. If the other manager will promise not to get six runs, then I won't run."

The steal was followed by a run-scoring double by Tom Herr and an RBI single by Ken Oberkfell. Suddenly, the slumbering Cards were back in business.

In the fifth, Robin Yount doubled and scooted home on a single by Cecil Cooper, making it 4-2. Kaat and Bair prevented any more damage, but the Cards weren't making any progress against Sutton. He retired eight straight batters before Oberkfell singled with one out in the sixth.

Oberkfell stole second on the next pitch, took third on a long fly ball and marked time as George Hendrick walked.

That brought up Porter. The Brewers were playing him to pull, but he lined a double to left, chasing both runners home and tying the score.

"I was just trying to cover the plate," said Porter. "I know that Don Sutton has great control and he can get the corners on you."

Was the shift proper strategy? Porter smiled.

"That may be the first ball I've hit down the line in left field in three years," he said.

NOW, WITH the score tied in the seventh inning, Herzog knew it was Sutter's time. With two out, Cooper looped a double to right, the first hit off Bair.

Sutter started with an intentional walk to Simmons, and got Oglivie to ground out, ending the inning.

With the Cardinal relief ace on the mound, Brewer Manager Harvey Kuenn went to his bullpen. But instead of ailing Rollie Fingers, he brought in Bob McClure.

"Rollie was well enough to pitch," said Kuenn. "I didn't consider using him. I've used Rollie Fingers when we're ahead, not in tie situations or when we're behind."

McClure weaved his way out of a two-on, two-out jam in the seventh which included the Cardinals' third stolen base of the game. But he got into immediate trouble in the eighth when he walked leadoff man Keith Hernandez on four pitches.

Hendrick forced Hernandez but Porter delivered his second hit of the game and fourth of the Series, giving St. Louis runners at first and second. Kuenn came out to lift McClure and relieved with rookie Peter Ladd, a hulking prison guard who had been a bullpen hero in the playoffs against California.

THE FIRST batter he faced was Lonnie Smith and the count stretched to 3-2. Ball four was close, close enough for the Brewers to howl to plate umpire Bill Haller.

"The inside edge of the ball got the outside edge of the plate," said Ladd. "All umpires are basically the same. They call the pitches that are there and they don't call the pitches that aren't. It isn't the end of the world."

Simmons thought the pitch could have been a strike.

"We got a tough call," the catcher said.

Was it a strike?

"I'm not going to answer that question," said the catcher. "Obviously, it was a ball."

"You never think walk in that situation," said Braun. "When I got to the plate, I was certainly thinking about getting a hit to drive in a run. But I'll take a walk."

THE CARDS might have had more except for an oddity on the inning's last batter. After McGee lined to short, Ozzie Smith tagged a grounder that seemed headed for right field, but it struck Braun on the heel. Smith was credited with a single but the play went as the inning's final out. That left Sutter three outs away from the victory.

Molitor opened the ninth with a bunt single down the first base line. On the next pitch, he took off for second, playing the Brewer version of Whitey Ball on a hit and run. But Porter cut the runner down and Sutter finished the Brewers, retiring Yount and Cooper for the final outs.

The Cards finished the game with three steals to one for the Brewers. Herzog will tell you it was no coincidence that St. Louis also had more runs at the end.

"One thing you've got to remember," the manager explained. "Every time you steal a base, you generally only need one hit to score a run. If you don't steal, you need two hits. I think it's easier to steal a base than it is to get two hits."

IOC restores amateur status to Thorpe, will return medals

By JERRY COHEN
and
KEN REICH
(c) 1982, Los Angeles Times

"He is the only person who had to win those medals twice," said Gail Thorpe of her father Jim Thorpe, considered by many sports historians as the greatest athlete who ever lived.

Her remark Wednesday — 29 years after her father's death in the Los Angeles suburb of Lomita — came on a day the legendary Sac and Fox Indian achieved his crowning, if posthumous, triumph.

The achievement was 69 years in the making.

For it was in 1913, seven months after he won both the pentathlon and the decathlon in the 1912 Olympic Games in Stockholm, Sweden, that the International Olympic Committee stripped him of his trophies and medals and erased his name from its record books.

Wednesday, after nearly three-and-a-half decades, the IOC announced in its headquarters in Lausanne, Switzerland, that it was restoring Thorpe's championships and that he will be awarded medals posthumously.

AN INFORMANT had tipped committee members that Thorpe, 24 at the time of his incomparable feat in Sweden, had played minor league baseball for $2 a game in 1909 and 1910. Thorpe readily admitted receiving the money but he said he had no idea it wrecked his status as an amateur in track and field events in the eyes of athletic governing bodies of the time.

All he knew was that when he stood before King Gustav V to receive his awards seven months earlier the Swedish monarch had told him in a tremulous voice, "You are the greatest athlete in the world."

"Thanks, king," Thorpe had replied.

"This phone has been ringing off the hook ever since seven this morning," said a jubilant Gail Thorpe, 65, who lives with her sister Grace, 61, in Tahlequah in northeast Oklahoma. (The sisters use their maiden names.)

"I feel absolutely elated. It's been the longest strike in history. Almost 70 years long."

Her use of the word "strike" was a studied one. Jim Thorpe was the first president of the National Football League (1920-21) whose players are now on strike against the owners. He played in the league until he was in his 40s.

IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said in Lausanne he personally will present gold medals to Charlotte Thorpe, 63, of Phoenix, Ariz., a third sister, in Los Angeles in January at the committee's next meeting as a result of the organization's decision to "return to James Thorpe . . . his amateur status." She has been the most vocal of the athlete's offspring in demanding that his championships be restored.

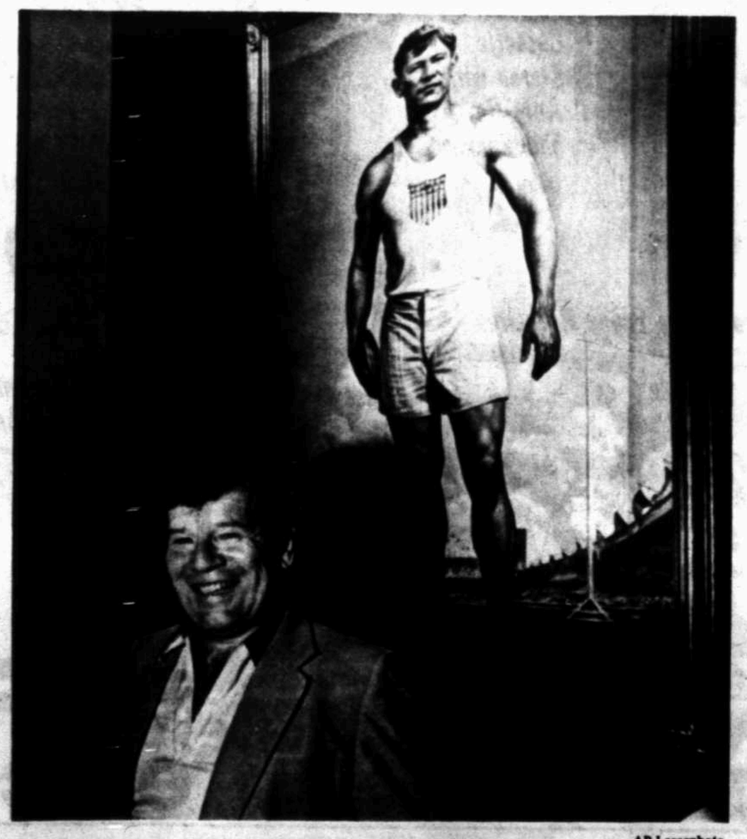

THE MEDALS will not be those originally given Jim Thorpe. Upon his disqualification, these were presented to the pentathlon and decathlon runners-up. The IOC, Samaranch said, felt it would be unfair to ask their survivors to return the awards.

Thorpe also received cups valued today at $7 million, according to Robert Wheeler, head of the Washington, D.C.-based Jim Thorpe Foundation, which lobbied vigorously for a decade-and-a-half to re-establish the all-around athlete in Olympic records.

Thorpe was required to return them also. But they never would have remained in his permanent possession anyway, said wheeler, since the winning athlete was required to relinquish them to his successor. The Olympic Games were not held in 1916 because of World War I and awarding them was discontinued in 1920.

It was not a coincidence that

No. 8 Sweetwater intrudes on Andrews' homecoming

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

After a rocky start the Andrews Mustangs settled on a starting lineup that lead the team to victories in its first two District 2-AAAA encounters.

But the Mustangs will face a new level of competition this week when Sweetwater intrudes on Andrews' homecoming party.

Undefeated Sweetwater is ranked eighth in the state and has posted four shutouts in five games while averaging 29 points per outing.

Andrews had a 1-2 pre-district record after losing to Midland High 16-2 and Monahans 30-20. Their lone victory was a 17-6 win over Seminole.

But the Mustangs got off on the right foot in conference play as they shutout Pecos 24-0 and beat a tough Fort Stockton team 21-7.

"We were moving people around a lot," Coach Bill Shipman said, "but we settled everything before our district opener against Pecos."

One of the key decisions was to move Brent Petross from quarterback back to the tailback position he played last year.

BEFORE THE season started Shipmann felt he had enough running backs so he could move his star athlete to the signal callers position. But things haven't worked out as planned so Bill Morrison was given the field general chores.

The scouting reports on the 5-foot-10, 140-pounder have left an imprint on Sweetwater coach William Stapler.

"Morrison has been very impressive, he's a super kid," Stapler said, "and he's the type of player that will put a lot of pressure on our defense."

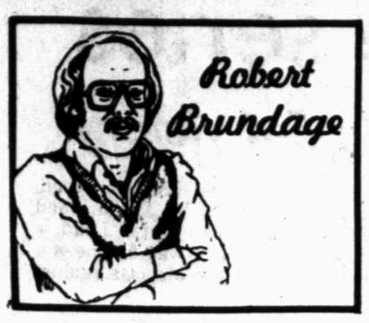

The Mustangs (Sweetwater) use a variation of the 4-3 defense that has the outside linebackers of the alignment moved up on the line of scrimmage in a standing position, much like the defensive ends in the Oklahoma 5-2. Add a middle linebacker, a rover and three defensive backs and you have Sweetwater's sweet 6-1.

"Defense has been the big change on our team," Stapler said. "Last year we couldn't stop anyone and had to try to out score people."

BUT THIS year has been a different

(See DEFENSE, Page 8C)

Stupidity is a hard habit to outgrow

As a kid growing up in Wyoming I had a lot of opportunities to climb mountains on camping trips, mostly in my Boy Scout days with Troop 221, Raven Patrol. We were pretty daring back then and, if my memory is correct, pretty stupid.

We all thought rock climbing was great and few of us knew the meaning of fear. We had a vague understanding of the word caution but were reluctant to let anybody else know we were thinking of it. Something called pride kept getting in the way. We'd work our way around, over and in between boulders in our quest for the top and fortunately nobody was ever hurt.

But there could have been some disasters. I remember one time when we were crossing a ledge that was no more than six inches wide, if that, with a vertical rock wall to press against. Looking down you could see the tops of Ponderosa Pines about 40 to 50 feet below.

For experienced free climbers, that might not sound too bad, but for a bunch of kids it isn't an ideal situation, especially since none of us had the benefit of ropes, harnesses and other such precautionary gear. One slip and it would have been good-bye. But we did it anyway.

NOW, THOUGH it's been years since I've gone on one of those trips, my interest in mountain climbing has been renewed and I'm looking forward to an upcoming trip to the Fort Davis Mountains to practice rappeling down a 280-foot cliff. I'm also hoping things will go a little smoother than my recent first attempt at rappeling down the side of the YMCA as part of a basic mountaineering class I'm taking.

That rappel, the only time I've ever had the benefit of being hooked to a rope, was broken into two sections, a 10-foot drop to a lower roof and then over the side for the big one, 25 to 30 feet. Not quite a mountain drop, but it's good for practice.

To rappel off a mountain, building or whatever, you wear a harness which is either specially made for the purpose of holding climbers or rigged up with a length of nylon (either will do for rappeling). The rope is anchored to something that won't give under any amount of weight (to climbers the term is bomb-proof) and is then looped through an eight-ring which is attached to the harness by carabiner rings.

After the rope goes through the eight-ring, you wrap it behind your back and hold on to it with your dominant hand (in my case my right) by your waist. The slightest grip on the rope will cause enough friction through the eight-ring to stop the descent. By loosening the grip on the rope, friction is released and you're on your way down, slow and safe.

THE FIRST stage went well, though far from the perfection shown by the course instructor. I leaned back into the rope and over the edge, something that my mind can't quite comprehend as safe, and started down. It was easy, a piece of cake.

With confidence building I went to the edge of the roof for the next and final descent. It looked a little high but I wasn't going to let that bother me. Again I leaned back, with the rope holding me tight, and started going over the edge. All was going well until my foot slipped and I started falling.

I was halfway down the side when I realized that I shouldn't have been moving at all. I'd taken a fall and I should still be at the top of the building, being held firm by the rope which was still in my hands above my head.

IN MY HANDS ABOVE MY HEAD!!!!

My right hand is supposed to be holding the rope by my waist. Yep, when I slipped, my right hand, which should have stopped the fall by simply gripping the rope, instinctively reached up where my left hand was hanging on and down I went.

My first thought was of death, or at least a severely broken body. I was looking straight into the wall as it flew past my face and then chanced a look down. The ground was coming close but not very fast. When I hit I buckled my knees and fell to my back. Totally unnecessary.

Other than rope burns and a temporary stopping of my heart, I was unhurt. Even though I fell the distance, the rigging was safe enough to protect me when I was dumb enough to let go.

I thought I'd learned a few things since the days of my youth, but stupidity is hard to lose. Letting go with my right hand wasn't very bright. I hope I get it right next time.

Houston Rockets center Caldwell Jones (27) uses both arms to shield himself from Philadelphia's Moses Malone during first period play Wednesday night in exhibition action.

Malone receives hero's welcome on return to town

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — It's only preseason in the National Basketball Association, so Houston Rockets fans can be forgiven if they cheer an opposing player.

Surely, they'll have their act together in the regular season when the Philadelphia 76ers and former Rockets star Moses Malone come to town.

But Wednesday night, it didn't seem to matter that Malone was wearing the red uniform of the 76ers.

Malone received a hero's welcome on his first return to the city after going to the Sixers last month in a high stakes trade.

"They just can't forget what a great player he was for this franchise," 76ers Coach Bill Cunningham said after Houston's last-second 89-88 victory. "Mo worked very hard on both ends of the court."

Everyone had something to say about the return — except Malone.

"I ain't got no comment, no comment at all," Malone said, after scoring 15 points and grabbing eight rebounds against his old teammates.

A Rockets preseason record crowd of 15,816 gave Malone a standing ovation when he was introduced with other 76ers starters.

Malone at first was stoic, but as the ovation started to crescendo, he slowly shook his head in approval and waved to the crowd.

Malone traded gibes with his former teammates as the two teams came onto the court for pregame warmups. Malone spotted Rockets guard Calvin Murphy and pointed to the new Rockets socks, bearing the team's name.

"Yeah, we can afford things like this now that we got rid of you," Murphy joked.

In the third quarter, the crowd was cheering both ends of the court. They wanted the Rockets to win, but they cheered Malone's slam dunk.

The Rockets won their first exhibition game with 22 seconds left on a jumper by Texas Tech rookie Jeff Taylor, dropping the Sixers to a 2-1 record.

Houston's Caldwell Jones, who came to the Rockets as part of the Malone trade, said he's not worrying about fans expecting him to step into Malone's shoes.

"I don't put extra pressure on myself. I just try to do what I can do," Jones said. "I came here as compensation for Mo, that's all. I'm not Moses Malone."

The man most concerned about Malone's return was Rockets Coach Del Harris.

"It was obvious Mo didn't have one of his vintage performances, but the chips were not on the line," Harris said. "But anyone who writes that he didn't do a good job is going to get us in a lot of trouble down the line.

"I don't want the big fella upset."

Bryan holds on to No. 1

By Associated Press

Bryan in Class 5A once again stood off the challenge by No. 2 Port Arthur Jefferson to join Fort Bend Willowridge in 4A, Post in 3A, Eastland in 2A and Bremond in A as the top-ranked teams in the Associated Press Schoolboy Football poll.

Bryan, which blasted Round Rock 46-0 last week while Jefferson pounded Beaumont Charlton-Pollard 43-6, retained its No. 1 rank by a 184-181 point total and a 10-5 margin in first place votes.

Plano, ranked fifth last week, played to a scoreless tie with Lewisville and dropped from the Top 10 along with No. 9 Dallas South Oak Cliff, a 10-9 loser to Dallas Samuell. They were replaced by two other North Texas teams, No. 9 Fort Worth Eastern Hills and No. 10 Euless Trinity.

All 4A ranked teams won last week's games but Brownwood, the defending state champion and preseason favorite, replaced Gainesville as the No. 2-ranked team after a 51-0 victory over Joshua. Gainesville defeated Azle 27-0 and dropped to third. Brownwood's only loss is to 5A San Angelo.

Luling, formerly ranked No. 1 in Class 3A, suffered its second loss of the season and dropped from the Top 10 and was replaced by Newton, 6-0, as the No. 10 team.

Kentucky's Bowie may miss entire 1982 basketball season

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Sam Bowie, on the eve of another college basketball season, says the unanswered questions about his future with the University of Kentucky are a nagging problem. But he's not going to rush his answers.

He missed the entire 1981 season with a fractured left shinbone, and his coach, Joe B. Hall, has acknowledged that the 7-foot-1 center may miss the coming season, too.

"I haven't made any decision because I don't know all my options yet," Bowie said, answering a question about whether he'll let the leg heal naturally or undergo surgery.

"I'm kind of frustrated by the whole thing, but I'm still optimistic about the situation."

Bowie returned to Lexington last week after 10 days of tests at the Campbell Clinic in Memphis, Tenn.

He said Tuesday he would "take as much time as I need to make a decision. He added that "nobody at UK is pressuring me into making a premature decision."

"We're in no great race because the decision is a big one," he said. "It's not a necessity for me to play at UK (before turning professional). College ball is amateur ball. It's preparation for pro ball, so we're talking about my future."

Doctors in Memphis have sent the latest X-rays of the leg to other doctors throughout the country, he said, adding that he has yet to receive results of lab tests taken during the stay.

"I was totally looked at from head to toe and I got the impression ... that maybe there was a little more healing of the fracture than (was) at first suspected."

Bowie said he might return to Memphis next week with his mother, Cathy, to "get together with the doctors to find out exactly what my options are." He said waiting for his surgeons' recommendation is "the toughest part" of being injured.

"As far as I've been able to learn, the latest set of X-rays still showed a fracture, but there was a little more healing than anticipated."

If surgery is recommended, "I would do it," Bowie said. "If I didn't, I might be back in the same situation next year as I am now."

Rebels should provide tough test for TCU's D

TCU (2-3) at MISSISSIPPI (2-30), 1:30 p.m. — The Rebels have shown flashes of top play under former Texas Tech coach Steve Sloan. Though last week's 33-10 loss to Georgia was marred by seven interceptions and one lost fumble, Mississippi gained almost 400 yards in first three quarters. Mississippi offense will provide another strong test for TCU defense that has played well enough to win, despite injuries to top linebackers Gary Spann and Joe Hines. Frog defense shut Rice down in final quarter last week as offense rallied for ten points and 24-16 victory. TCU averaging 4.5 yards per offensive play, even though ranking last in SWC. Ground game is improved behind Marcus Gilbert, Frogs average 6.6 yards per pass attempt with one of SWC's most balanced attacks. Frog pass defense fourth in SWC. Both teams are undefeated at home this year and winless on the road. Rebels hold 3-1 series lead.

BAYLOR (2-2-1, 1-1-1 in SWC) at TEXAS A&M (2-3, 0-2 in SWC), 2 p.m. — Second straight big challenge for Baylor defense, which last week checked SMU's nationally-ranked ground game only to lose, 22-19, on three TD passes. Aggie passing attack is led by Gary Kubiak. Eggies lead SWC in passing at 237.6 yards per game as Kubiak connects on 57.6 per cent and also leads SWC in total offense. Game matches three of SWC's four leading receivers — No. 1 Johnny Hector of A&M with 6.3 catches per game, No. 2 Gerald McNeil of Baylor with 4.8, No. 4 Don Jones of A&M with 3.8. Bear QB Mike Brannan likely to miss second straight game with hamstring injury, probably replaced by David Mangrum, who led Bears to 13-0 lead over SMU in first half last week and to 19-14 fourth-quarter advantage. Baylor pass defense ranks third in SWC, while Aggies have been strong against rush. Bears' Alfred Anderson sixth among SWC rushers with 1 yards per game, while Aggie ground game has suffered due to injuries to Earnest Jackson, Hector and Thomas Sanders. Aggies lead series 44-27-7.

HOUSTON (2-2-1, 1-0-1 in SWC) at SMU (5-0-0, 2-0-0 in SWC), 7 p.m. — Mustangs seek to protect No. 5 national ranking. Eric Dickerson and Craig James have averaged 179 yards per game between them in three years at SMU, but only 68 yards between them vs. Houston. Dickerson leads SWC and vies for national rushing championship with 152 yards per game, James third in SWC with 87.4, but Dickerson has totaled only 137 in three games vs. Cougars, James only 67. Cougars lead SMU by 4-3 in series. Both teams are among nation's offensive leaders, Houston pacing SWC at 409.8 yards per game, SMU third at 393, SMU leading SWC in rushing at 297.2, Houston third at 246.4. Cougars' Lionel Wilson roaring back from early-season injury, hitting 57.5 per cent of his passes and No. 2 in SWC total offense at 193.2 yards per game. Game pits four of top five SWC rushers, Cougars' Dallas Wiggins ranked third and Dwyane Love fourth. Cougars' David Roberson No. 2 pass receiver in SWC with 24 catches. Mustang victory would give SMU second straight 6-0 start for the first time in school history.

TEXAS TECH (2-3, 1-2 in SWC) at RICE (0-5, 0-2 in SWC), 7:30 p.m. — Surprising Raiders have a chance to even their record at 3-3. They showed near-flawless last-half offense two weeks ago in 24-15 victory over Texas A&M and strong defense last week in 21-3 loss to Arkansas, holding Razorbacks scoreless in last half with four turnovers. Owls led TCU well into third quarter last week before yielding scoring drives of 72, 36 and 66 yards and dropping 24-16 decision. QB Michael Calhoun regained starting job for Owls, running for one TD and passing for another to have a hand in 28 of the 29 TDs Rice offense has scored in last two seasons. Teams remarkably similar in stats through five games--Rice leads in total offense, Tech in total defense. Tech's Anthony Hutchison SWC's No. 9 rusher with 59.6 yards per game, Rice's Deron Miller No. 5 receiver with 18 for 188 yards and one TD. Harris among nation's top broken-field threats and averages 11.5 yards on 15 punt returns. Tech noseguard Gabe Rivera and Rice DT Clenzie Pierson among top defensive players in SWC. Owls hold 16-15-1 all-time series lead.

Newman, Andretti to team for racing '83

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the biggest names in the entertainment world — Paul Newman — will team up with one of the biggest names in sports — Mario Andretti — to field a car in the 1983 Indianapolis 500, along with other races on the PPG Indy Car World Series circuit.

"We've been talking about this for a long time," said Andretti, who won the 1969 Indy 500. "It's not just having a star on your team. Paul Newman has a total understanding of racing."

"He will be able to field a first-class team, and his personality does bring people on," Andretti said at a Wednesday press conference to announce the joint effort.

The entry, backed by Budweiser, will be a Lola T-700, a turbo V-8 Cosworth. The car currently is under construction in England, and the new team hopes to start testing in December before beginning the Championship Auto Racing Teams series.

Andretti said he wasn't necessarily disappointed with the STP-sponsored Patrick team for whom he raced last year, during which time he was a teammate of Indy winner Gordon Johncock.

"They treated me very well," he said. "It's just that when things somehow don't go quite as well as you had hoped for and new opportunites come up, you sometimes go for them.

"That's exactly what I'm doing. If this opportunity hadn't come up, I probably would have stayed where I was."

He added that it would be "great" being the only driver on a team.

Newman, speaking by telephone hookup during the press conference, said he was "looking for a new challenge" and said he would "devote the better part of six months to it."

"You can't get much better than that," he said of getting Andretti as his driver.

"I've been looking for someone to help me now that (Robert) Redford's out of the picture," he joked.

Newman has won two national driving championships in Sports Car Club of America racing since getting involved in the sport. In the last five years, he has fielded several teams in Can-Am racing.

Newman's co-owner in the new entry will be Carl Haas, a 25-year veteran driver, manager and team owner whose entries have won four Can-Am series championships.

KENNY REDIN'S

Fin & Feather

Since this is Bass Masters Classic week, I forget about dove hunting, whitetailed deer archery season, rattlesnake roundups and women.

Six years ago I was invited to attend my first Bass Masters Classic by Ray Scott, founder and president if the world's largest fishing organization, the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society.

Not only did Scott corner the market on top-rated professional bass fishing tournaments that pay huge sums of mone , but he's also responsible for you and me becoming competitive tournament bass anglers.

Scott is also the main factor for promoting the conservation and preservation of the largemouth bass, America's No. 1 gamefish. Without his efforts through B.A.S.S., we wouldn't have the bass fishing in our local, area and state reservoirs that we now have.

He's made millions off us anglers, but I wish I could have thought of his idea. Still, he remains dedicated to the anglers.

Scott's Bass Masters Classic is a dream come true. He will be top dog in Montgomery, receiving all the glory. But he will transfer the glory to the 41 contenders that attend the Classic.

I've never been to a World Series or Super Bowl, but I've been to the World Finals of Bass Fishing several times and if any Super Bowl or NBA championship can top the Classic, I sure would like to attend.

You get to meet people like Merl Haggard, Mel Tillis, Jerry Clower, Louise mandrell, Cory Wells, Jerry Reed, Johnny Cash and George Bush, but the best thing about the Classic is being able to observe firsthand the nation's top bass fishing professionals like Tommy Martin, Roland Martin, Rick Clunn, Harold Allen, Randy Fite, Kenneth Walker, Bill Dance and Stanley Mitchell, the 1981 Classic winner.

The Classic is the final event for all those hundreds of anglers who have fished all year on the B.A.S.S. tournament trail, hoping to qualify for the Classic.

The Classic is an educational course crammed into one fun-filled week. You not only learn about bass fishing, but also people, competiveness, nature and conservation. More than you could in a full year of study and research.

The B.A.S.S. organization has given us a new outdoor sport. With today's economy, it's very expensive to find a good hunting lease or go to Australia to catch a giant black marlin. But B.A.S.S. is something we can all enjoy.

We learned to form bass fishing clubs and then learned to be competitive. We also learned that you can catch a bass, keep him in an aerorated live well all day long, take care of him during the weigh-in and release him back into the lake again for someone else to catch and enjoy.

Bass conservation is what the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society of America is all about and we have Ray Scott to thank for that.

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — A secret file on the death of Thurman Munson, an All-Star catcher for the New York Yankees in the 1970s, was discovered in the Summit County Coroner's office during a Sept. 17 search by detectives, the Akron Beacon Journal reported Wednesday.

The newspaper's sources said the Munson file was not confiscated in the search because it was not specifically requested in the detectives' application for a search warrant. It was not learned what the secret Munson file contained.

Munson died Aug. 2, 1979, when his newly bought private jet crashed short of the runway at the Akron-Canton Airport while Munson was at the controls practicing takeoffs and landings.

Canton attorney Eugene Okey, who represents Munson's widow, Diana, in a $42 million wrongful death suit still pending against Cessna Aircraft Corp. and Flight Safety International, said he was "astounded" to learn of the secret Munson file.

A secretary at the coroner's office told The Associated Press Wednesday that Coroner A.H. Kyriakides was out for the day and unavailable for comment on the report. A woman at Kyriakides' residence said he was not home.

The coroner's chief investigator, Joseph Orlando, when asked about the newspaper's report, said, "I have no knowledge of a secret file on Thurman Munson, and I have no knowledge of the case."

Summit County Sheriff's Department Capt. Tom Bostick said, "A couple of my men were on the investigation. I don't know anything about a Munson file."

On Sept. 5, 1979, Kyriakides held a news conference and said he had determined that Munson died of asphyxiation. Kyriakides gave reporters a two-page report, but it did not include copies of the autopsy report, the newspaper said.

The newspaper said the Munson file was the second secret file investigators discovered that the coroner apparently kept separate from regular case files. The first concerned the 1980 murder of Northeast Ohio millionaire Constantine R. "Dean" Milo.

Police and sheriff's detectives were given a warrant to search Kyriakides' office after learning of the secret Milo file.

Mrs. Munson's wrongful death suit alleges Cessná used high-pressure techniques to sell her husband the plane and that Flight Safety International was negligent in teaching him to fly it.

The $42 million suit was to be tried in May in federal court in Akron, but U.S. District Judge Leroy J. Contie's appointment to the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals forced a delay in the trial.

Cups Thorpe received now valued at $7 million

Wheeler was in Los Angeles Wednesday. He arrived here this week in anticipation of the IOC's announcement to meet with the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee for the 1984 Games.

Wheeler's goal was to persuade the committee to schedule a special ceremony during the 1984 Games to honor Thorpe. He said he is "optimistic" such a ceremony will occur.

He began his fabled career at the Carlisle Indian Institute in Pennsylvania, a trade school, shortly after the turn-of-the-century. The school played — and swamped — the agreat college athletic teams of the time.

When the institute contested the U.S. Military Academy for a national championship, A Kansan named Dwight David Eisenhower was in the West Point secondary.

President Eisenhower later would recall, with awe in his voice, in a taped interview with Wheeler, how he and a teammate tried to "high-low" Thorpe to knock him out of the game. Instead, Thorpe side-stepped the pair and burst for a touchdown while the two cadets, having collided, were removed nearly unconscious from the contest, which Carlisle won handily.

Carl Philip Thorpe, 55, of Vienna, Va., an official with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the athlete's eldest son, recalled that on his father's death in 1953 he received a warm telegram of condolences from the then president of the United States.

BYU, Hawaii are just two WAC teams with one loss

By JOHN MOSSMAN
AP Sports Writer

Before the season began, there were those who expected the Hawaii-Brigham Young game to decide the Western Athletic Conference football title. Both teams would be undefeated heading into that game, the reasoning went, and the winner would have smooth sailing the rest of the way.

When Hawaii and Brigham Young actually do get down to playing on Saturday in Provo, the circumstances will be somewhat different, but the game takes on no less significance.

Hawaii brings a 3-1 WAC record into the contest, while Brigham Young is 2-1. Both have taken their lumps along the way, and instead of leading the pack they are among six WAC teams with one loss.

Barring ties, at least two, and as many as four, of the six teams will suffer their second loss this weekend, lending some clarity to the muddled title picture.

The other game involving one-loss contenders pits New Mexico, 2-1, and San Diego State, 1-1, in San Diego. Colorado State, 1-2, is at Air Force, 2-1, in another league encounter, while Utah, 1-1, entertains Nevada-Las Vegas in a game designated to count in the WAC standings.

In non-league affairs, Wyoming plays host to Cal State-Fullerton, and Texas-El Paso is at 10th-ranked Arizona State.

Brigham Young was given up for dead after suffering a 39-38 loss to Air Force three weeks ago, coming on the heels of a 17-14 setback to nationally ranked Georgia. But the Cougars responded in typical fashion, routing Texas-El Paso 51-3 and New Mexico 40-12 to move back into the thick of the title chase.

"I think it's a quality of being champions," Coach LaVell Edwards said in explaining the turnaround.

Mitchell, Nixon lead field for Bass Classic

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Defending champion Stanley Mitchell, a 22-year-old logging contractor from Fitzgerald, Ga., and BASS Angler-Of-The-Year Larry Nixon, a professional fisherman from Hemphill, Texas, lead the field for the $100,000 BASS Masters Classic which opens Thursday on Lake Montgomery.

Forty-one fishermen from 15 states will roar off in 150-horsepower boats each morning Thursday through Saturday. The $40,000 first place purse will go to the angler with the greatest total weight of fish caught over the three days.

"I feel I can do good again," said Mitchell, who, at 21, was the youngest man ever to win the Classic, sponsored by the Bass Anglers Sportsman Society. "I don't know if they thought it was luck or not the first time. I wouldn't say I can win again, but I should be in the top 10 anyhow."

He said he spent four days on Lake Montgomery, practicing for the event.

Nixon, who fishes some 175 days a year, said he has not practiced on the 75-mile stretch of lake open to tournament anglers.

"It's kind of a personal protest to allowing any pre-practice on the tournament waters," Nixon said. "I really think the emphasis on the classic competition should be in finding the fish — when the tournament starts. Any of several fishermen can catch bass — if they find them."

"People around the tournaments treat me a lot better," said Mitchell. "I've done a few tackle shows, but it hasn't changed me hardly any."

He said he has kept fishing a part-time occupation while he put most of his time into his business.

"I just fished four (BASS qualifying) tournaments this year, just like the year before," Mitchell said in a telephone interview from his home as he was "getting my tackle box ready."

"It was because of business. I had so much work I had to do. We had so much land to clear and we had to be preparing our land so we could replant the trees and all that. Next year I think I'm going to have a little more time and going to wind up fishing them all."

Mitchell won the tournament with 35 pounds, 2 ounches of bass; 15 fish over the tournament 14-inch minimum size. He fished deep diving crankbaits and spoons in the main river, off the mouths of tributary streams.

"It's going to be a lot tougher for me this year," Mitchell said. "Everybody knows what and where I caught my fish. But the creek mouth-river pattern is one of the most dependable in the fall and I'll probably stay with it."

Warrant out for former Denver Nugget forward

DENVER (AP) — A warrant is out for a former Denver Nuggets power forward in connection with a purse-snatching incident earlier this month, police say.

Tom Boswell, 29, of Denver is suspected of being an accomplice to a purse-snatching in a southeast Denver park Oct. 5, police said. Also being sought on a warrant for the alleged theft is Robert J. McKnight, also of Denver.

Through-the-night bargaining underway to resolve strike

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

COCKEYSVILLE, Md. (AP) — The long grind of through-the-night bargaining orchestrated by private mediator Sam Kagel has begun with the possibility that negotiators for the National Football League owners and the striking players could be kept at the table continuously into the weekend.

Sources involved in the negotiations aimed at ending the 24-day strike said Wednesday that Kagel, a San Francisco lawyer approved by both sides as their intermediary, had recommended a series of round-the-clock sessions — as much as 96 hours in all. That would keep the bargaining going into Saturday.

"We have been told to be prepared to go that long," one of the sources said. Another said people on each side of the table had winced when the suggestion was made, but added: "Who's going to be the first to walk away from him?" It was a reference to the idea that whichever side left first could be accused by the other of sabotaging the talks.

And the 73-year-old Kagel, while not confirming he had called for round-the-clock talks, did note: "We haven't reached the first 24 hours yet."

WHILE THE talks resumed at a hotel in this Baltimore suburb, the "all-star" players selected by their peers held their first day of practice for next Sunday's union-sponsored game a couple of hours down the road in Washington's RFK Stadium.

And the union got help from U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington Wednesday. The court declined to consider, until after Sunday's game and a second one scheduled for Monday night in Los Angeles, the league's attempt to prevent the games.

A lower court barred the 28 NFL teams from using local courts to block players from appearing in the games, then the U.S. District Court invalidated those state suits and said all suits had to be filed in federal court in Washington to avoid "piecemeal litigation." The league appealed that ruling and the Court of Appeals scheduled oral arguments in the case for Wednesday.

NEGOTIATIONS BEGAN with Kagel meeting separately with reprentatives of the owners and the union, two sessions adding up to more than four hours, followed by a joint 1¾-hour meeting of Kagel, owners' chief negotiator Jack Donlan, owners' chief counsel Sargent Karch, union executive director Ed Garvey and union president Gene Upshaw.

Then Kagel read a one-sentence statement: "The parties'proposals and counter-proposals are being reviewed and discussed in depth and this process shall be continued."

Then, as unceremoniously as he had opened the one-minute news briefing, he closed it, rejoining the negotiators, with Joseph "Chip" Yablonski, the general counsel for the union, entering the talks later.

Garvey and Donlan each said he was sticking to his side's previous position on the basic contract issues — the union demanding a wage scale tied to a fund to be independently administered, the owners refusing to give up the existing system of individual salary bargaining with players. Said one source: "Why give up anything before you have to."

House owner decides to drop charges against Tony Ayala

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The owner of a house that junior middleweight boxer Tony Ayala Jr. is accused of burglarizing has decided he does not want to press charges.

Jim Carpentier, 25, signed an affidavit Tuesday in the district attorney's office, saying that nothing was stolen from his house on Aug. 15, according to First Assistant District Attorney Charles Conaway.

"He (Carpentier) does not want to prosecute," Conaway said.

The announcement raised the likelihood that Ayala, who recently completed an alcohol rehabilitation program in Orange, Calif., would not be prosecuted.

AYALA'S ATTORNEY, Alan Brown, contended that the boxer simply got drunk and wandered into the wrong house in a new neighborhood where he had recently moved. He was arrested by police inside Carpentier's house.

Conaway said prosecutors plan "to go to court and let the court make the final decision."

Based on the burglary charge, the district attorney's office also had moved to revoke the 19-year-old undefeated prizefighter's probation and send him to jail for 10 years.

Two years ago, District Judge Mike Machado had assessed the 10 years probation after Ayala pleaded guilty to aggravated assault. In that case, a teenage girl testified that Ayala attacked her in the women's restroom of a drive-in theater during an alleged rape attempt, beating her and rupturing her bladder.

Machado granted probation after the Ayala family reached a financial settlement with the girl and she testified she had no objection to probation.

THE PREVIOUS probated sentence, coupled with numerous traffic violations by Ayala that were dismissed in city courts, caused a local uproar from people charging that the courts were coddling the boxer.

Ayala claimed he was drunk during both incidents. After the latest arrest, he sought treatment at the California center where former first lady Betty Ford, Minnesota Vikings quarterback Tommy Kramer and others also have been treated.

Ayala and his wife now are living in New Jersey where he is training for a Nov. 19 fight that would pay him hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"The whole thing was hyped to begin with," Conaway said. "It is none of my business why he (Carpentier) dropped it, but in my opinion it was because of his own thinking. I don't think he was coerced into dropping the case."

Ayala's father and co-trainer, Tony Ayala Sr., said Wednesday, "I'm very glad. I do want to thank Mr. Carpentier for being so considerate, and I want to offer an apology to Mr. Carpentier for the terrible inconvenience to him. Now the facts are out about Tony's problem, I think Mr. Carpentier didn't want to ruin someone's career or life just because he (Tony Jr.) got drunk."

Brown said that Carpentier, who works at a grocery store and plans to go to medical school, "came to the same concluuion I did — that Tony Ayala Jr. in no way needed to commit a burglary and does have a drinking problem which he openly admits and has taken concrete steps to deal with."

New crisis develops in Grand Prix racing with FISA's safety regulations

By PAUL TREUTHARDT
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — A new crisis arose in Grand Prix auto racing Wednesday when the ruling International Auto Sport Federation (FISA) voted tough safety regulations for 1983 considered "completely unrealistic" by race car constructors.

Renault sporting chief Gerard Larrousse said FISA President Jean-Marie Balestre had "dug up the hatchet again," while Ferrari team manager Marco Piccinini said the proposals would "kill Grand Prix racing."

FISA officials say the new rules are vital to protect the public, track officials and drivers by drastically slowing the cars which they say are outpacing all realistic track safety provisions.

The situation is similar to that of 1980 when the British-led independent constructors defied FISA rules and threatened to set up a breakaway championship.

But this time all the racing teams, including Renault and Ferrari, are united behind proposals that FISA's Executive Committee rejected in favor of its tougher measures.

The racing teams have tied their proposals into a package requiring a two-year extension after 1985 of the Concorde Agreement under which they have financial control of the multimillion dollar sport. It also calls for any rules changes to be agreed on unanimously.

Observers saw Wednesday's vote and the constructors' proposals as preliminary positions in difficult negotiations to be held in the coming weeks.

A majority of the Executive Committee of the International Auto Sport Federation (FISA) strongly opposes the extension, because the agreement prevents it imposing safety measures unless all the constructors agree.

FISA officials, who declined to be identified, noted Wednesday's vote ignores the unanimity clause and said the constructors could take FISA to arbitration if they desired.

The officials also say they will make an issue of demanding who takes the responsibility for the safety of the public, officials and divers in 1983 racing if no major changes are agreed.

FISA safety and medical committees warned the executive group this week of major risks if the cars are not considerably slowed, particularly in cornering speeds. For the drivers, double world champion Niki Lauda called for slower, safer and less physically punishing cars next year.

The constructors claim their cars are designed or built for next season and they can make only minor changes. They say that major changes as voted by FISA would be dangerous without long study.

The technical argument centers on how to reduce "ground effect," the aerodynammic downforce — typically two and a half tons on a half-ton car — which glues them to the track and has dramatically increased cornering speeds since it was first introduced in 1978.

The constructors offered 1984 rules including flat bottommed cars without lateral "skirts" which control air flow, two measures to almost eliminate ground effect. Their 1983 proposals were for only very minor changes which would reduce speeds only minimally.

FISA voted for flat bottomed cars from the first European Grand Prix next year, the French race in April. The constructors dismissed this as impossible, but offered to reduce skirt length 50 percent, cutting downforce 30 percent.

They linked this, however, to the Concorde Agreement extension.

The FISA vote also banned cars with four-wheel drive or with more than four wheels.

Seahawks fire Patera, Thompson

SEATTLE (AP) — Coach Jack Patera and General Manager John Thompson were fired Wednesday by the Seattle Seahawks, who named Mike McCormack interim coach for the remainder of the 1982 National Football League season.

McCormack, fired as head coach of the Baltimore Colts at the end of last season, was the Seahwaks' director of football operations.

Don Andersen, the Seahawks director of non-football operations, will become director of administration, filling in for Thompson for the rest of the season.

"We have been disappointed at our lack of progress on the football field the past years and that was the sole reason for the dismissal," Nordstrom said, reading a prepared statement.

"It became apparent in our early season performance that things hadn't turned around.

"It is always difficult to make changes, but we believe that Mike McCormack will be an excellent head coach until the end of the year. We have not written off the 1982 season."

Nordstrom said the Seahawks' ownership had not made contact with anyone about filling Patera's old job on a permanent basis.

McCormack will return to his duties as director of football operations with the Seahawks next season, Nordstrom said.

The existing contracts of Patera and Thompson will be honored by the club, Nordstrom said.

Nordstrom described Patera as "surprised" by the dismissal, and said Patera asked, "Why now?"

Under Patera and Thompson the Seahawks had a 35-49 record, including an 0-2 record before the 23-day-old National Football League players' strike began.

In two previous NFL head coaching jobs, McCormack has a 25-48-1 record, including a 2-14 mark in Baltimore last season. McCormack was 5-8-1, 7-7 and 4-10 at Philadelphia from 1973 through 1975. In 1980, he had a 7-9 record at Baltimore.

The Seattle Times reported Wednesday afternoon that a search for Patera's permanent successor will begin immediately. The candidates likely will include Don James, University of Washington's highly successful head coach, the newspaper said.

Fontana High players pay for mistakes

By CHRIS BAKER
and
JERRY CROWE
(c) 1982, Los Angeles Times

FONTANA, Calif. — Linebacker Stan Hunt of the Fontana High Steelers had just been penalized 15 yards for a late hit in a prep football game against St. Paul, and it was now time for him to pay the price.

Immediately after the call, Hunt removed his helmet and placed both hands over his ears. He shut his eyes and tensed his face. Then the teammate closest to him, linebacker Rob Ellis, slapped Hunt's face hard with an open right hand.

Later in the game, it was Ellis' turn to get slapped.

"It's a hard slap," Ellis said. "It makes you think about what you did wrong so you won't do it again."

By now, The Slap is considered a tradition in this steel-producing town of 32,700 about 50 miles east of Los Angeles. Originated about 10 years ago by ex-Coach John Tyler, it is the price a player pays for making a "mental take" in a game.

Players are slapped by a teammate after penalties such as offside and late hits. Coaches say The Slap cuts down penalties.

PLAYERS, PARENTS, coaches, fans and school administrators interviewed by the Los Angeles Times say The Slap is more symbolic than it is punishment.

There have been few complaints about The Slap. For sure, it is as much a part of life at Fontana as the smoke that belches from the coke ovens at the Kaiser Steel mill here. Kaiser is closing the steel mill, laying off 600 workers later this month, but it appears that The Slap is here to stay.

Two reporters recently talked to 50 fans, coaches, players and parents at the school, bars, barbershops, restaurants, shopping centers, the steel mill and the feed and grain store. And no one interviewed voiced objections to The Slap.

A sampling of comments on The Slap:

Fontana graduate Denita Fornelli: "Don't all teams pick on you if you make a mistake?"

Fontana Gridiron Club member Rita Drinville, whose daughter dated a player last year: "It's an honor (to be slapped) — well maybe not an honor — but it's something that has become a tradition."

Steelworker Manny Santillan, who played at Fontana in 1969: "I guess it would bother some people, but you've got to have some sort of commitment to football. It's just a love tap. A guy is acknowledging that he made a mistake."

Fontana alumnus Terry Rush, who played in 1957-58 and has a son, Keith, who starts at offensive tackle: "If they get a penalty, they get slapped in the face a good one. It's just to remind them of their mistake. It's (an indication of) how tough those kids are. They play good, physical football."

Season ticket-holder Margie Heathcock: "The first time I saw it (The Slap), I was shocked. But it's helped to bring penalties down. And nobody seems to object to it. The boys aren't hollering about it, so why should we?"

Fontana Coach Dick Bruich said: "It's just a little way of waking someone up. If you jumped offside, wouldn't you feel bad about it? This way, you get slapped and it's over with, and you don't have to think about it anymore. It ain't no big thing."

BRUICH, WHO has been at Fontana six years, said the slapping tradition began long before he came to Fontana and that he and his assistant coaches "stay totally out of it. We don't want to go to jail (for hitting a player)."

School officials say they have had no complaints from parents or players.

Fontana Principal Anthomy Lardieri "It's more of a gesture than anything else. There is very little physical contact as far as I can see. I've only seen it two or three times all season. It doesn't look like any big deal."

Bruich may be correct when he said that The Slap "ain't no big thing." Football, however, is a big deal here. The Slap is just one aspect, although an unusual one, of this football town.

Some say football gives the town its identity. Said Fontana graduate Lori Gallegos: "If they didn't have football, what would everybody in Fontana do on Friday nights?"

Football may not be the only show in town on Friday nights, but it's probably the best attended.

College football scout Dick Lascola on Fontana: "They treat the game like they do in the Midwest. It reminds me of a town in Ohio where I used to coach."

Fontana High's stadium is the place to be on Friday nights.

"The town damn near closes up on Friday night," said Fontana fan John Stevens.

For big games, fans sometimes line up three hours in advance to get the unreserved seats.

Fontana Principal Lardieri: "The school I was at back East, I knew everybody in the stands on a first-name basis."

Fontana averaged 4,800 fans per game in its 7,000-seat stadium last year. Almost everyone wears maroon, the school color.

Last year, the football program grossed about $54,000, and reportedly netted about $23,000 after expenses. All of the profits are used to pay for other sports.

INTEREST IN the team is such that the town newspaper, the Herald-News, publishes a special tabloid section before each home game. Included are a column by Coach Bruich, statistics, rosters, pictures of players and cheerleaders, and predictions on prep and college games by local figures such as the ex-mayor, city manager and president of the Gridiron Club.

Circulation manager Judy Nash said street sales of the paper usually increase 30 percent to 40 percent during the football season. Published daily, the paper has a circulation of about 20,000.

"A lot of people here eat, sleep and die football," said Managing Editor Michael Nutt, who said he's never been to a game.

The school has one of those giant motorized football helmets, like the ones at NFL games. "We got a good deal on it," Lardieri said. "We bought it from the NFL after the last Super Bowl they played here (Pasadena, 1980), where they had a parade of helmets from each team before the game. If you were to scrape off the paint, you'd see the New Orleans Saints logo underneath."

The student body hires a plane, at a cost of $110 per game, to buzz the stadium and deliver lighted messages to opponents.

The Gridiron Club, Fontana's booster club, also has a branch at the Kaiser Steel mill.

LIKE FANS at Yankee Stadium, the Bronx Zoo, the Fontana fans have a reputation for being wild.

"One paper wrote a story about us (the fans), calling us a bunch of drunks," said steelworker Santillan. "The story said we were a hard-drinking town. But I don't think people drink at games. We've got a bad rap."

Said Jack Toothman, 33, who has lived most of his life in Fontana: "Fontana has always been a tough town. Fontana was not high on smarts, it was high on knuckles. When I was in high school, Fontana was the baddest place in the county. Just ask anybody in Fontana. If you were looking, you wouldn't have any trouble finding a fight. I can remember some hellacious fights."

Said fan Jack Stevens: "Fontana has always been a hardhat town. You could beat us, but you couldn't outhit us."

Star running back misses half of game taking dental test

ADRIAN, Mich. (AP) — Adrian College football Coach Ron Labadie was philosophical about the absence of his star running back until the third quarter of Adrian's first loss of the season, to previously winless Olivet.

Our new bistroware from Paris

When Pier 1 needed a new line of flatware, we naturally first thought of France, a nation with a long tradition of gourmet cooking and stylish dining. We wanted the kind of flatware you'd see on tables in Parisian outdoor cafes, and that's exactly what we got. It's stainless steel — look for the "INOX" mark — and three rivets securely attach each dishwasher-safe handle. Take home several place settings in burgundy, blue or white, or mix all three for a splash of color.

Rangers hand Flyers first lose of NHL season, 5-2

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

The Philadelphia Flyers had been perfect ... untiL they ran into a team which had been anything but.

Philadelphia came into Madison Square Garden Wednesday night at 3-0, the National Hockey League's only undefeated-and-untied team. But the 1-3 New York Rangers got third-period goals brom Bill Baker, Barry Beck and an empty-netter from Mike Rogers to hand the Flyers their first loss of the season, 5-2.

"It's completely different here,G' said Baker. "We're allowed to be creative. Nobody piaked me up and I just stayed there untiL I got the puck. I'm beginning to feel more comfortable here. Hopefully, I'm coming around."

"It's a good feeling, but it's not a big surprise because I ha' a good training camp," said Davidson. "It's really enjoyable to play with this team because they are so creative on the ice. There's no chance of another year between victobies. I feel too good."

"We're not used to the fast-skating game like the Rangers play. But we're going to keep up with the best of them this year. We have a lot of new young players and we're getting used to each other," said Ron Flockhart, sho had both Flyer goals.

Capitals 5, Maple Leafs 3

Third-period goals by Gaetan Duchesne and 18-year oLd rookie Scott Stevens broke A 3-3 tie and lifted the Caps past the Leafs, who are still winless Bt 0-2-2.

Brian Engblom, Bob Gould and TorRie RoDertson also scored for the new-look Caps, who have 10 players who weren't around at the concXusion of lact season. Stewart Gavin, W'lt Poddubny and Peter Ihnacak replied for the Leafs.

"I played one of my better games," said Stevens. "I wasn't at all nervous and that was a first."

Black Hawks 6, Blues 4

Chicago Coach Orval Tessier coached Larmer at New Brunswick last season and was not surprised by the performance.

"I watched him develop into a great hockey player — especially on the power play," Tessier said. "As long as Steve keeps his cool and knows his role, he'll Be all right.

"I think the team showed for the first time that they have the ability not only come from behind, but to make things happ%n."

Finnish defenseman should improve New Jersey Devils anemic offense

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Tapio Levo, the world-class Finnish defenseman, has returned to the New Jersey Devils and should greatly improve their anemic offense, says Coach Billy MacMillan.

"Levo is a very important addition to our offensive unit, especially on the power play. He'll certainly help," MacMillan said.

Levo arrived in New Jersey from Helsinki Wednesday afternoon and was scheduled to work out with the National Hockey League team today.

The 26-year-old defenseman told the Devils last week he would return, but club officials weren't convinced.

"We didn't announce it until we knew he was on the plane so we wouldn't embarrass ourselves," said Devils spokesman Larry Brooks. "We thought he'd be here the first day of training camp, too."

Last season, when the Devils were the Colorado Rockies, Levo showed his offensive value with nine goals and 22 points even though a badly broken arm limited his season to 34 games.

MacMillan has said Levo, who speaks little English, told him he did not want to play in the NHL because he and his family had difficulty adjusting to life in America.

After MacMillan, in almost daily trans-Atlantic telephone calls, failed to persuade Levo to rejoin the franchise, the Finnish Hockey Association suspended the national team veteran from playing. The ban was recognized throughout the world.

"We've been in touch with his people there just about every day, and at the end of last week reservations were made for him to fly over," Brooks said.

Mitchell holds lead at Lone Star State

BOERNE, Texas (AP) — Jeff Mitchell had the lead entering today's second round of the 1982 Lone Star State Open after tying a competitive course record at the Tapatio Springs Resort and Country Club.

Mitchell, a former Texas Tech golfer and Professional Golfers' Association tour player, shot a 7-under-par 65 Wednesday.

The PGA event, limited to Texas residents, was rain-delayed Tuesday. The event will be reduced from 72 to 54 holes, officials said.

More than 160 golfers participating in the tourney are playing for $32,500 in prize money, including $5,000 in first-place winnings.

Player holds four stroke advantage over Wadkins

By GEOFFREY MILLER
AP Sports Writer

VIRGINIA WATER, England (AP) — Gary Player, 47-year-old South African veteran, burned up the Wentworth golf course with a 5-under-par 67 today and took a four-hole lead over Lanny Wadkins at the halfway stage of their first-round match in the $215,000 Suntory World Match Play Tournament.

Bobby Clampett, playing in this tough head-to-head knockout event for the first time, was 2 up on Massy Kuramoto of Japan at the end of the morning round.

Player, who has won this title five times, played like a man who knows the 6,945-yard, par 35-38—72 course among the trees.

Player went 1 up with a birdie at the sixth. Wadkins pulled back at the eighth, where he laid a 9-iron to 2 feet for a birdie. But he got into a sand trap and bogeyed the ninth, and Player reached the turn 2 under par and went 1 up again.

Player turned on the pressure on the way home and won three holes in a row.

SIMS talks SENSE
Higher Education

We've talked about our school children and their educations.

Now, let's talk about our colleges and universities and the young adults these institutions produce.

I am a graduate of what are now Angelo State and Texas Tech. During the course of the campaign, I have joked about majoring in freshman English for three years. The truth is I got a good education and had the opportunity for a better one.

Our children are getting even better educations today because we have these regional schools.

For Texans, Angelo State, Sul Ross and Midland Junior College are the flat, dry rocks in the middle of a stream. They are the stepping stones to an educated and informed citizenry.

Were it not for these institutions, I'd be digging more post holes in Paint Rock than I do now.

It has been suggested that these institutions be required to seek funding for expansion and capital improvements every two years.

This is nonsense. The halls of the Capitol will be jammed with lobbyists from every school, fighting over a share of the funding like fishwives over a choice mackerel.

Texas has made a decision to invest in the future through quality education. That future spans generations, not two-year cycles.

We must think and plan in terms of those generations as we look to the future of our colleges and universities.

We can't let a crop failure or two get in the way of that vision.

A West Texan for our times.

story as the defense has posted shutouts against Abilene Wylie, Snyder, Fort Stockton and Lamesa. The only dent made in the Mustang defense was a 17-point performance by Abilene High.

Shipmann is well aware of the problems his Wing-T offense will have against the larger Sweetwater squad.

"They are big and powerful," he said. "We need to be able to throw against them, and have some deception in our offense."

"The wishbone gives them lots of options, they throw well, and they have a lot of trick plays too," he said. "Their quarterback (Scott Richards) is a junior and has been a starter since he was a freshman."

Defensively Shipmann has had a fair number of positional changes since his Mustangs gave up 16 points to Midland High and 30 to Monahans.

DARRELL RAY was moved from defensive back to defensive end where he started last year. James Brown moved from end to the "Monster" position he played a year ago, and Eric McCullough moved from end to tackle.

The result has been seven points yeilded in the last two games.

But Shipmann isn't the only one who has has to move his personal around. Stapler lost four starters last week in Sweetwaters' 28-0 win over Lamesa.

Pat Gerald, middle linebacker and tight end, suffered a strained knee and will miss the Andrews contest. Gerald was a second team defensive All-State selection last year.

Andy Dear will move from his defensive end position to fill in for Gerald. But Dear left the Lamesa game with "very sore ribs" and his playing time may be limited.

David Hendricks, a tackle on both sides of the line, is out with a dislocated elbow. If his arm responds to therapy he could be back in three weeks but there is a very real posibility he will be lost for the remained of the season.

The final casualty was defensive end Brent Burnett who has a deep thigh bruise but is expected to play.

"WITH ALL the people we've been shuffling around, we've had a difficult time working out this week," Stapler said. "Plus it's been raining."

"I hate the situation we're in with all these injuries," he said, "but we'll bust our tails to win."

"We're looking foward to playing at home," Shipman said. "It's our first home game in five weeks."

It's tough enough to beat Andrews at home but to add to the problem this week is homecoming for the Mustangs, a situation Stapler is keenly aware of.

"We're getting into a hornets nest," he said.

Elsewhere in the district, No.10 ranked Lakeview (5-0) will try to stay even with the Andrews-Sweetwater winner as it travels to Fort Stockton (2-3), winless in two district outings. In a battle of the have-nots Pecos (2-3) will travel to Snyder (1-4). Pecos has been shoutout in its two conference games while Snyder is 1-1 with its only victory over hapless Lamesa (1-4). Monahans (2-4) will try to improve its 1-1 district mark at home against Lamesa, 0-2 in league games.

IT'S SHOWDOWN time in District 7-A as Sterling City (5-1) travels to Eden (5-0-1) to take on the No.5 ranked Bulldogs. Both teams are 3-0 in league play as is Garden City (4-2) which travels to Bronte, 2-4 overall and 1-2 in district.

Greenwood (2-4), with only two victories, has come along in its three district games and will try to make it three in a row as the Rangers invade Irion County (1-5), winless in three district outings.

After suffering a major upset at the hands of Grandfalls, Rankin (3-2) will host powerful Iraan (4-1) in District 6-A. The Red Devils, 1-1 in district play, lost to Grandfalls (2-3) 12-8 despite outgaining the Cowboys 325 yards to 93. Grandfalls hopes to ride the crest as they travel to Sanderson (2-1-1). Both teams support 1-1 league records.

Wink, 5-0 overall and 2-0 in league games, broke into the state rankings at the number 10 spot. The Wildcats will host Buena Vista (2-3) which has yet to win a district game in two tries. Fort Davis (1-4) will try to improve its 1-1 district mark when Balmorhea (0-4, 0-2) comes to town.

REAGAN COUNTY saved its best game for the opening week of district 8-AA play as the Owls upset McCamey 24-15 last Friday. The Owls were 0-4-1 before the beginning of the conference schedule while the Badgers were 3-2. This week Reagan County will host Eldorado (1-4), which lost its district opener to Stanton (3-3), 29-6, while McCamey will try to rebound against mighty Wall (5-1). Wall crushed Miles (2-4) 61-0 and will play host to Stanton (3-3).

Crane (6-0), 15-14 victors over Sonora (2-4), will host Coahoma (2-4), 28-0 losers to Colorado City (3-3). Sonora will be at home against Ballinger (5-1), which pulled off a mild upset over Ozona (5-1) 28-13. Ozona will try to regroup at home against Colorado City.

Movie situation is dream of pitchers

By DAVE KINDRED
(c) 1982, The Washington Post

ST. LOUIS — Details are lost in the fog of advancing years, but Ray Milland made a movie ("It Happens Every Spring") that is the fantasy of every baseball pitcher who has looked down the hill at a guy carrying a big stick.

A baseball crashes through the window of a college chemistry lab. The ball splashes into an experimental potion. And, voila, the chemistry professor becomes an unbeatable pitcher.

He discovers that a baseball soaked in his potion is allergic to wood. If a baseball bat comes near such a ball, the ball leaps over it. Or dives under it. Or does a loop-the-loop around it.

The best major-league hitters fail 70 percent of the time. Ted Williams said hitting a baseball is the most difficult act in all sports. So the poor fellows are up against it to start with. No wonder we hear such wailing when they suspect pitchers are cheating.

After Game 1 of this World Series, the Cardinals' leading hitter, Keith Hernandez, suggested Milwaukee's Mike Caldwell threw a three-hit shutout with the illegal assistance of (pick one) "grease," "K-Y jelly" or "loaded-heavy spit."

"I never saw a screwball drop off the table like Caldwell's did tonight," Hernandez said. "Fernando Valenzuela's screwball doesn't drop off the table like that. Makes you wonder, doesn't it?"

What we have here, besides a hitter's paranoia, is his reluctance to believe in the aerodynamics of a baseball thrown 85 miles per hour. Hitters say a pitch rises coming to the plate, or sinks, or moves laterally. But when they see an extraordinary example of such aerodynamic action, they want the FBI to frisk the pitcher for illegal potions.

Photographs prove a baseball pitch can curve. It won't do much from side to side, but it bends down significantly. Thrown with the proper grip at maybe 95 mph, a pitch also will rise. It will even leap upward if the pitcher has devoted his life and knuckles to that trick.

"Aerodynamics?" said Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver. "Go ask Ted Williams."

"Aero-what?" said Darrell Porter, the Cardinals' catcher. "Shoowhizzz. All I know is that when Bruce Sutter throws that thing of his, the way those guys react, it must be hard to hit."

Even in the short space of 60 feet 6 inches, air deflects the moving baseball. Air hits the spinning seams that stand 1-32nd of an inch from the ball's cover. Spin the seams this way, the ball rises; spin them another way, it falls. Scientists speak of lift created by vacuums; they speak of air masses colliding with seams and forcing the ball the way of least resistance.

"To survive," said Tom Lasorda, the Dodger manager, "you must make the ball move some way."

Pitchers grow up learning the curve delivered with a snap of the wrist (and, by extension, the elbow). A powerful fast ball will rise slightly. A slider is a fast ball delivered with half the twist of wrist needed for a curve. It breaks quickly and not as much as the slower curve.

Does Don Sutton scuff up baseballs? If he scraped the smooth side raggedy, a violation of rules, that ragged edge would catch the air at 85 m.p.h. That ball would sink quickly in the direction of the scuffed side — which is what hitters claim happens when Sutton needs a big out.

Phil Niekro's knuckleball is legal. He keeps the flat part of his fingers off the ball, touching it only with his knuckles (his fingernails, actually, but it sounds silly to call it a fingernailball). So he eliminates the spin his fingers might apply. The dead ball collides head on with the air, literally piling the air up in front. The ball is buffeted up and down.

"It's like an airplane coming in for a landing," said Hub Kittle, the Cardinals pitching coach. "When it gets near home plate, it settles down to the ground."

It is Sutter's alone. "Ain't no other man ever going to throw Sutter's pitch," Kittle said. "He has abnormally long fingers; he has a real, real loose wrist, and he has the perfect conformation of arm and body to throw the way it must be done."

Sutter spreads the first two fingers to the sides of the ball. The pitch normally breaks straight down, but he says he can make it break left or right depending on pressures he applies with each finger.

Lloyd wins 23rd straight with easy victory over Lee

PALM HARBOR, Fla. (AP) — Top-seed Chris Evert Lloyd is happy with her tennis game and has her 23rd consecutive match as proof that things are going about as well as possible.

She was an easy 6-0, 6-0 victor Wednesday night over unseeded South Korean Duk Hee Lee in the $125,000 Florida Federal Tennis Open.

"I just hope I can play that way all the way through," said Lloyd. "Everything seemed to be working tonight. I even came to the net a few times and put away a couple of winners."

Lloyd, who last lost in the Wimbledon finals three months ago, took just 52 minutes to complete the match, and yielded only 17 points in the 12 games.

Lloyd's victory completed first-round play. She was scheduled to face Sue Barker of Great Britain today in second-round play.

Three second-round matches were also played Wednesday.

Third seed Sylvia Hanika of West Germany defeated Nancy Yeargin 7-6, 6-4 in a match that lasted 98 minutes.

After dropping the first three games, No.7 Zina Garrison turned things around to win nine games in succession and go on to a 6-3, 6-2 victory over unseeded Barbara Hallquist.

L.A. Kings' Bonar to miss at least two months play

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings center Dan Bonar has a dislocated left elbow that will keep him out of National Hockey League play for at least two months, says team physician Vince Carter.

Houston impressed with three visitors

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston is rolling out the red carpet for three world leaders at once — a distinction usually reserved for New York and Washington — and it's requiring some slick coordination and space-age timing in this home of astronauts and oil.

Presidents Suharto of Indonesia, Zail Singh of India and King Olav V of Norway brought a coterie of aides and security agents with them, although they are visiting for different reasons and don't plan to meet.

Singh is recovering from open heart surgery at Texas Heart Institute. Suharto is touring a hospital where Indonesian doctors and nurses are being trained. And Olav is combining a private visit with public appearances in connection with the 200th birthday this year of the man who led the first wave of Norwegian immigrants to America.

The joint visits required "a major security effort" including Houston police, said Bill Livingood, chief of the Houston office of the U.S. Secret Service, which provides security for the visiting dignitaries.

The visit of three foreign leaders is not considered unusual in Washington, D.C., or New York, where the United Nations has its headquarters, he said.

But a trio of leaders in Houston, "is pretty unusual," he said.

"We've had two in here at once before, but this is the first time for three at once," Livingood said.

"It does take some very fine timing and a close coordination," he added.

Singh came to Houston Oct. 1 after his doctors in India recommended the Texas Heart Institute's Dr. Denton Cooley for a triple-bypass operation. Cooley was a pioneer in heart surgery, including transplant operations.

Hospital officials said Wednesday the 66-year-old president was recovering and in satisfactory condition after the operation Oct. 6.

Suharto flew to Houston on Wednesday from Washington, where he was President Reagan's guest at a state dinner Tuesday.

He was scheduled to tour Methodist Hospital today with Dr. Michael DeBakey, a rival of Cooley's as a heart surgeon and a pioneer in cardiovascular surgery.

Suharto was then to visit the Johnson Space Center, where astronauts Sally Ride and Robert Crippen will show him through mission control and a demonstration model of the space shuttle.

DeBakey, who went to Indonesia in 1980 to advise the country on heart treatment, is helping train doctors and nurses to open a heart treatment center in that country. He will return there next year.

Olav arrived here Sunday evening. On Monday, he laid a cornerstone for the Norwegian Seamen's Church in Pasadena, a Houston suburb, and toured the San Jacinto battlefield south of Houston. He was briefed Tuesday by Tenneco Oil Inc. and GECO, a Norwegian-based company, on oil exploration.

Earlier, the monarch toured Norse, a Norwegian community in central Texas, and visited the grave of Cleng Peerson, considered the pioneer Norwegian immigrant, who was born in 1782.

Both Suharto and Olav were scheduled to leave Houston today — Suharto for Hawaii; Olav for New Orleans. Olav later will visit Miami and Washington before returning home.

Singh is up and walking in his hospital suite and could move from the hospital to a hotel next week, doctors said. He is expected to leave Houston late next week to return to India.

Committee recommends judicial screening group

AUSTIN (AP) — Texans would continue to elect judges who wear party labels, but voters would be told which candidates are "qualified" under a plan to be recommended to the Legislature.

The Select Committee on Judicial Selection, chaired by Rep. Bob Bush, D-Sherman, concluded Wednesday that election of judges keeps them "accountable to the people."

But the committee wants the Legislature, which meets again in January, to create a "screening commission" to evaluate candidates for appellate court posts.

Under the panel's proposal, candidates for appellate court seats would be required to submit information to the screening commission, which would then publicly pronounce the candidate "qualified" or "unqualified" at least 30 days before the election.

The committee report said panel members decided, after five hearings and over 100 witnesses, that eliminating party politics from selection of judges would only worsen such current problems as "name identification, voter apathy, ballot length and campaign expenditures."

The committee also recommended:

—limiting judicial candidates to 16 months of fundraising from Oct. 1 the year before the election to Jan. 31 the year after the election;

—strengthening the Judicial Conduct Commission's authority to discipline judges and broadening the categories of misconduct for which judges can be censured; and —requiring judges at the county level and above to undergo an orientation course and continue their legal training as long as they are on the bench.

Bush said the committee recommendations "show a consensus that we do not want a mini-federal judiciary in Texas, but rather one that is accountable to the people."

Clements official reveals White's 'sleight of hand'

By The Associated Press

The campaign manager for Gov. Bill Clements says that backers of his Democratic challenger — Texas Attorney General Mark White — pulled a "sleight of hand" to conceal loans from auto dealers during the spring primary campaign.

A spokesman for White said the Clements charge was an effort to draw attention away from the issues in the race.

White, along with other Democratic candidates, picked up support Wednesday from U.S. Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio. At a Houston campaign appearance, Glenn called on Texans to "restore sound, Democratic leadership to the governor's office."

Meanwhile, Democratic attorney general candidate Jim Mattox, careful not to criticize White, said Wednesday that many changes are needed in the office of the state's top lawyer.

Mattox said White has done a "respectable job." Mattox also listed changes he thinks are needed in the attorney general's office.

Mattox, who faces Republican Bill Meier in November, said the attorney general's office should be more involved in representing consumers at Public Utility Commission proceedings and investigating abuse of nursing home patients. He also called for a "more comprehensive" training program for new lawyers in the office.

"I think Mark White has done a respectable job considering the funds he's had available to him," said Mattox, calling Clements "a governor that has followed an extremely antagonistic approach" to White.

At a Capitol news conference, Mattox called for increased financial support for the state's money-short crime victims compensation fund, which gets its money from fees paid by convicted criminals.

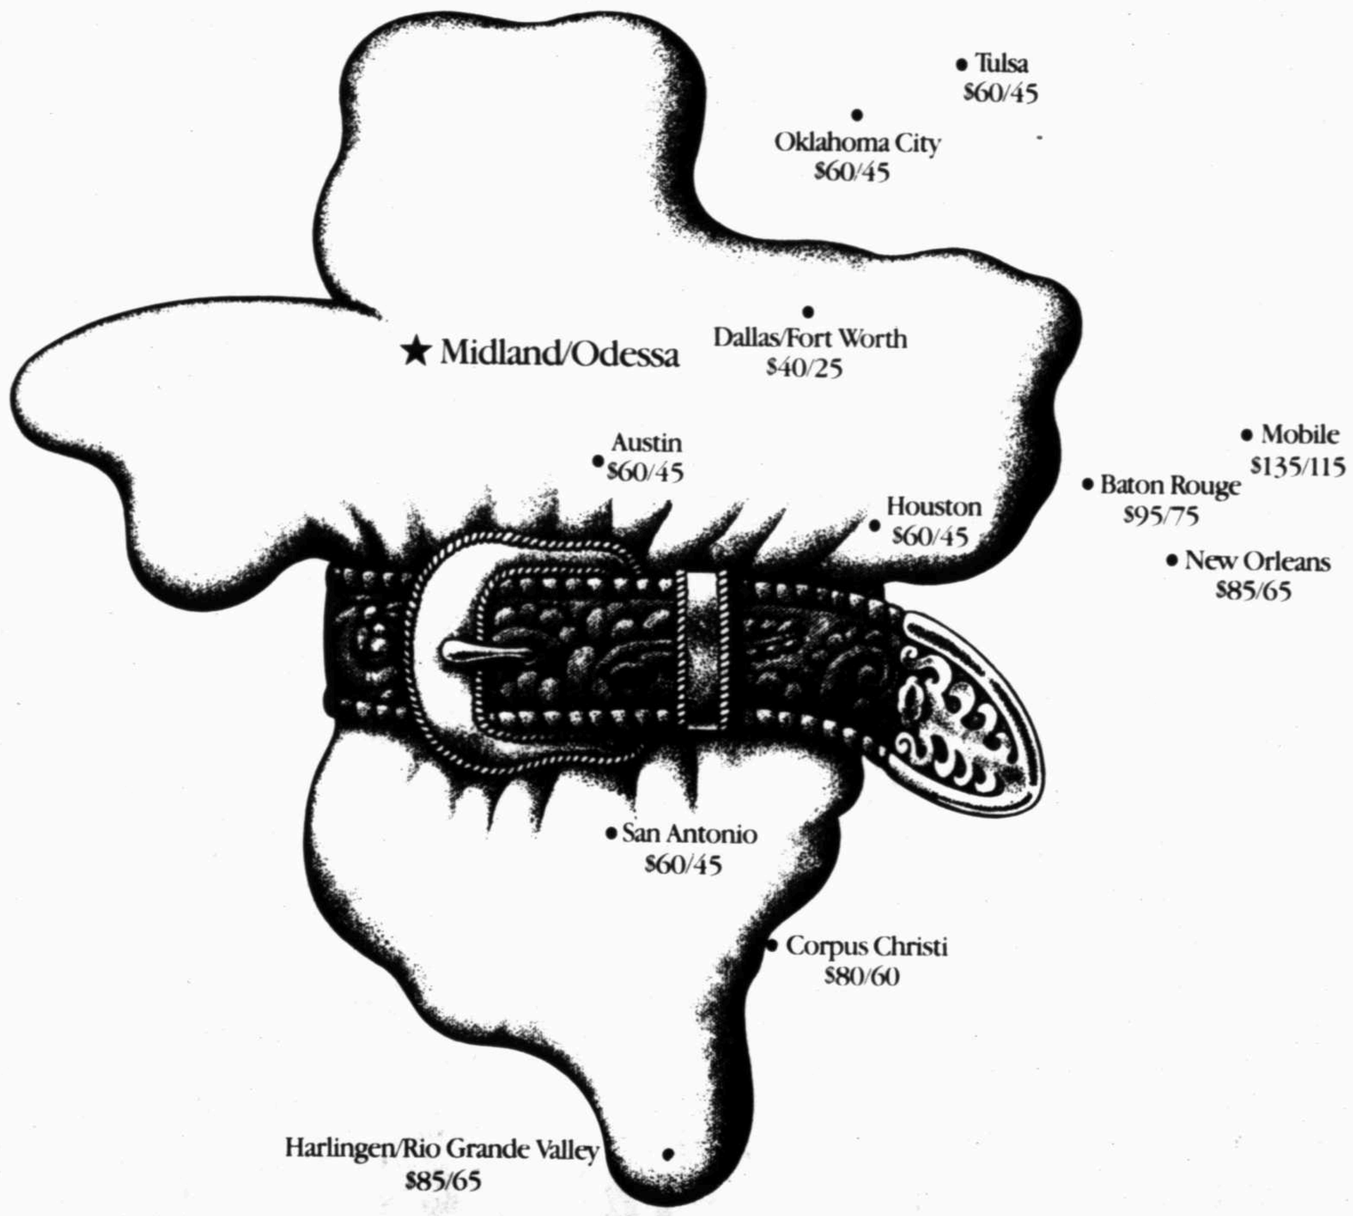

Mattox said people convicted of Class C misdmeanors — who now do not pay into the fund — should pay.

The Industrial Accident Board, which administers the fund, has approved 563 more claims than the fund can pay, according to Mattox.

Francis complained that White received — and then tried to conceal — campaign loans from auto dealers in the spring. The loans came while White was boasting about his lawsuit against General Motors. White, who lost the suit, claimed GM's rebate plan was deceptive.

School dumps maids

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Students at exclusive Williams College must make their own beds and clean their own rooms because cost-cutting has prompted school officials to dump maid service.

Students have mixed feelings.

"I hate it," sophomore Allison Ashley told the student newspaper, The Williams Record, about losing the service. "It made the school unique. Not many people have the time to clean their rooms."

Senior Jeff Mook, however, said, "Not having them saves money, and it is just as easy to clean your room yourself.

Maid service, once daily, was reduced to twice a week and then weekly and then last year to every two weeks. Three matrons last year cleaned the rooms of 2,000 students.

Wendy Hopkins, director of student housing, said the college apparently was the last one, private or public, with maids. Janitors will still clean bathrooms, hallways and other common areas.

The college, which ranks in academic circles with Amherst, Wesleyan, Bowdoin and other small, private liberal arts colleges, charges $10,731 a year for tuition, room and board.

Heinz Co. in pickle

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The makers of Heinz ketchup have found themselves in a pickle. Their robot shaped like — what else — a giant ketchup bottle is missing.

The 5-foot-7 robot, named H.J., apparently disappeared last week on a plane between Chicago and Cleveland, said R.J. Heinz Co. spokeswoman Beth Adams.

"He never arrived as far as we can tell from the paperwork," Ms. Adams said Tuesday. "The man who took him to the airport in Chicago said he remembers putting it on the plane."

Although capable of being operated by remote control, H.J. couldn't have walked away because his electronic innards were delivered separately. The robot also was packed in a coffin-like crate.

H.J. was built for the opening of Pittsburgh's convention center in February 1981. He has a blinking hat and two arms.

"He looks just like every ketchup bottle you've ever seen," Ms. Adams said.

Meanwhile, a duplicate named H.J. II is filling in at scheduled appearances in Michigan.

Heinz plans to mold another H.J. at a cost of between $8,000 and $10,000 if the missing robot is not found soon.

Company officials are asking for help from the public in tracking down the robot — and have offered two cases of ketchup as a reward.

"We figure this will give people a chuckle. But it is, in fact, true. And the reward is for real," Ms. Adams said.

Students kiss off homecoming

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Some came in Halloween costumes, some came with bags over their heads, but all came to pucker up — more than 1,400 couples for Oklahoma State University's "Big Kiss."

Carey Pirtle, 21, an OSU senior from Tulsa, said an unofficial total of 1,460 couples smooched for three minutes Tuesday night to help kick off the school's homecoming festivities.

Friends of Donovan pay him tribute

WASHINGTON (AP) — With a warm, bring-down-the-house show of support by his president, Raymond J. Donovan's evening would have been complete.

But President Reagan was among the missing from a cast of a thousand supporters, including White House and administration officials, who attended "A Tribute To Raymond J. Donovan" $50-a-plate dinner Wednesday night.

R. Donovan

Donovan, nonetheless, apparently has a tight hold on his once-tenuous position as Labor Secretary, thanks in large part to his boss.

Although Reagan was conspicuous by his absence — he was busy reassuring a nation of bright prospects for an economic recovery — the chief executive sent a vote of confidence through two top White House emissaries: chief of staff James A. Baker and counselor Edwin Meese III.

For Donovan, the dinner was the high point of a 21-month tenure in office, troubled by allegations that as a New Jersey construction executive, he had business and social ties to mobsters.

When special prosecutor Leon Silverman issued his final report Sept. 12, concluding for the second time there was "insufficient credible evidence" on which to prosecute Donovan, the labor secretary seemed bitter. He acknowledged he'd consider calling it quits.

That was about the time a group of conservatives, led by the Young Americans for Freedom, decided he was in need of a tribute. Sponsors of the event said any money not used to pay for the dinner would be donated to Donovan's favorite charity.

They turned out in droves, these friends of a onetime seminarian who became a businessman, a campaign fund-raiser, Cabinet officer and — critics charged — an embarrassment to the president and to the Republican Party.

About 400 friends from New Jersey — including former partner Ronald Schiavone, president of Schiavone Construction Co., mayors, business and union officials, formed the largest contingent among the crowd that filled the ornate Grand Ballroom of the stately Mayflower Hotel, six blocks from the White House.

Many proclaimed their allegiance by wearing "I am a friend of Ray Donovan" buttons. They posed with him for pictures, toasted to his future and sought his autograph.

It was Meese, however, who brought the message Donovan wanted to hear.

"As I left (the Oval Office), he (Reagan) asked me to express to you his best wishes...and also his real appreciation for the job you're doing and the fact that you're on his team," Meese said in opening his speech.

"I have been particularly impressed by your display of tremendous grace under pressure during the past difficult months," Reagan said in the letter.

"The ideals for which we campaigned in 1980 will not be achieved overnight, but thanks to your efforts, we've made a good beginning," he said. "I deeply appreciate the work you've done on behalf of the goals we share for America."

Though Reagan was absent, the White House delegation numbered nearly a dozen; Cabinet officers came, and those who couldn't make it, sent regrets.

Vice President George Bush sent word that he and his wife, Barbara, "express our strongest support and best wishes to you, Kathy (Donovan's wife) and your family."

Attorney General William French Smith made a brief appearance, but didn't stay for dinner.

Agriculture Secretary John Block said, "I think I speak for the Cabinet when I say we have great appreciation and admiration for Ray Donovan."

"The business community owes you a great debt for your leadership and also your courage, because we know the road has been tough," said Richard Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

As Baker and Meese arrived, they were beseiged by reporters asking whether Donovan would remain in the Cabinet after the Nov. 2 congressional elections.

"I don't know of any reason not," Meese replied. "That's up to him."

Baker said the allegations against Donovan had "all been disproved."

The chief of staff, asked about speculation Donovan would be eased out, said: "I think that talk is rumor."

A combative Donovan, though, had the last word.

"The wheels of justice move slowly," he said. "Justice has not been completely done, but it will be.

"Perjurers cannot go completely free. And those who aid and abet and pull the chain of perjurers, in the name of duty, should not go free."

Policies produce hardship, heartbreak, say Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats, lambasting President Reagan for saying the nation's economy is "recovery-bound," say administration policies are producing nothing but unemployment, hardship and heartbreak.

"The suggestion (by Reagan) that we stay the course overlooks all the damage that's piling up here in the United States," said Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., Wednesday night after delivering a nationally broadcast Democratic response to an economic address by the president.

During his address, Riegle said that Reagan's economic program has produced increased unemployment, and increased rate of business failures and farm failures and fear among senior citizens that their Social Security benefits will be cut.

He added that members of the administration are insensitive to the condition of the economy.

"Maybe it's because about one-third of the top officials in the administration are millionaires who have no understanding of what life is like for average people," Riegle said.

"That's why staying the course makes sense for them because they're not paying the price. You are," Riegle told his broadcast audience.

He added that voters have an alternative to sitting "by in despair as our hopes for economic growth vanish before us. Each one of us can vote to change the course of our country. And it's my hope you will do so on Nov. 2."

Riegle also outlined some moves Democrats hope to make to improve the economy. After the speech, he summarized the items as a "crack down on the invasion of foreign products coming into the United States...lower interest rates, not just before the election, but on an ongoing basis" and an effort to put people back to work.

Riegle — whose home state of Michigan has an unemployment rate of 15.9 percent — said the policy adopted by the administration "has led to incredible economic problems for millions of Americans who never thought they'd be in unemployment lines — or welfare lines — or bread lines."

He also said it is misleading to say the recent rallies on Wall Street mean the nation is on the road to economic recovery, noting the stock market boomed the day the government announced that unemployment topped 10 percent nationally and "also boomed in 1929 — just before the Depression."

Meanwhile, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., chided Reagan for his remarks.

"If he thinks we should stay the course, he should ask those millions of American families who have already reached the end of the line," O'Neill said. "If he thinks Reaganomics is working, he should ask the fellow who isn't."

Democratic National Committee Chairman Charles T. Manatt was more blunt in his assessment of Reagan's speech.

He also called it "a blatant and shameless political apologia of a failed economic policy that has resulted in millions more unemployed and tremendous hardship and heartbreak for many more Americans."

Manatt also repeated his protest over television networks providing time for the president's speech, which Reagan had promised would be "non-partisan."

"It was a message of no news, no ideas, nothing non-partisan," Manatt said. "If the networks don't send the White House a $500,000 bill for this travesty there is no justice."

During his televised remarks, Riegle deleted portions of the prepared text made available to reporters ahead of time so that his response would not delay the start of the broadcast of the second game of the World Series.

Reagan's son unemployed

NEW YORK (AP) — Hours before President Reagan told the country "America is recovery-bound," his son Ronald Prescott Reagan stood in an unemployment line here waiting for a relief check.

The 23-year-old ballet dancer has collected two or three unemployment checks in recent weeks since his layoff from the Joffrey Ballet, acknowledged Deputy White House Press Secretary Larry Speakes on Wednesday.

Young Reagan, who lives with his wife Doria in Greenwich Village, was standing in line Wednesday at the New York State unemployment office at Avenue of the Americas and 20th Street.

"The Reagans offered to be helpful but they respect his right to be independent," Speakes said in explaining that the president's son refused his parents' offer of help while he was out of a job.

Reagan joined some 11.3 million other Americans on relief lines as the country's unemployment rate hit 10.1 percent last week — the highest figure since the end of the Great Depression.

The dancer, recently promoted to the Joffrey's primary company, is expected to be back at work by Nov. 1, according to Nancy Reagan's press secretary, Sheila Tate.

He will move with the ballet company when it becomes the resident dance company of the Los Angeles Music Center, she added.

The New York Post, which first reported the story, said that assistant White House press secretary Mark Weihberg initially said young Reagan was still employed, but that Speakes later called back to say the report of his unemployment was true.

IT'S PEOPLE THAT MAKE NEWSPAPERS GO!

National Newspaper Week October 10th- 16th

...And at The Reporter-Telegram that means people working in a dozen different departments with one common goal: To produce and deliver to you the best daily newspaper possible.

To help us do a better job we're taking a close look at ourselves, how we do things and how we could do them better. We're examining all the possiblities and looking at all the angles that could result in a better Midland Reporter-Telegram for you.

And our people are deeply involved in helping us make those changes. This week we'll be letting you know who some of them are and the role they play in producing your daily paper.

The Midland Reporter-Telegram

People Make The Presses Roll

Camera and Press Modern Machines

Camera, plate making and press departments make up one of the most important phases of daily newspaper production.

And at The Reporter-Telegram major expansions are being made to enable the newspaper to grow along with the city and region it serves.

Utilizing the offset process of production, The Reporter-Telegram's Chemco Spartan camera photographs entire pages after they have been composed. Negatives move through an automatic film processor for development as do all news photographs and advertisements that must be reduced or enlarged.

With the recent addition of a new press unit, the newspaper's Harris offset press now has the capability of printing 96 pages at one time,80 pages if individual one or two color advertisements or news material is used or 64 pages in a single press run if full color photographs are included.

Fully automated, the two-story press complex automatically splices and glues new rolls of paper at the appropriate time without a halt in press operation.

The press is capable of publishing 50,000 copies per hour with each rool of newsprint weighing approximately one ton and in a year's time this adds up to a staggering amount of paper.

Checking the Ink
The proper amount of ink, not too much, not too little, is essential for good newspaper reproduction. Dourga Persad checks an early copy for possible ink adjustment.

Another ton on the press

Taking Pictures

While a newspaper's task is to keep citizens informed on what's happening throughout the world, and The Reporter-Telegram utilizes five national news services to do that, we believe you also want thorough, timely, comprehensive local coverage...news and features about people, places and events here at home.

To obtain and produce that news we have enlarged our staff to its present size... 32 editors, reporters and photographers. We're proud of them because we know "It's PEOPLE that make newspapers go!"

College Board introduces new services

Three new services to help students and school officials better understand and interpret scores on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test have been introduced by the College Board to coincide with this year's test date of Oct. 23, according to Glen Walton, administrator at Permian Basin High School.

The three services include the following:

—A Summary of Answers Report, which indicates how many students in each school, district, or state chose each answer to each question on the test, as compared to all students taking the test nationally.

—State Summary Reports of Sophomores, which show career choices, intended college majors, ethnic background and similar demographic data — identical to information currently provided for juniors.

—A "Counselor's Guide to Helping Students Learn from the PSAT/NMSQT," a new publication designed for counselors to help students more clearly grasp the general nature of the tests and the implications of their test results.

The PSAT/NMSQT is co-sponsored by the College Board and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation. Since 1959, more than 25.5 million students have taken the test, which measures verbal and mathematical abilities.

By taking the test, students discover how they rank among juniors (or sophomores or seniors) across the country. It also provides a preview of the College Board's Scholastic Aptitude Test, which many seniors take when they apply for college.

Fourteen students at Permian Basin High School are scheduled to take the PSAT Oct. 23. PBHS is a private college preparatory high school, dedicated to one-to-one instruction.

Trinity students spend week on ranch

The entire seventh grade class from Trinity School spent last week at the Y-O Ranch outside of Kerrville. The wilderness experience is an annual occurrence for Trinity's seventh graders, enabling them to learn more about their environment and how to care for it through a program developed by the Y-O Ranch personnel.

Accompanying the group were faculty members Pat Preston and Brian Stone.

State university to award scholarships

AUSTIN — Five $10,000 scholarships will be given to outstanding high school seniors when the University of Texas at Austin awards the Texas Excellence Award for Scholarship and Leadership, the first of its kind in the state.

The $2,500 per year scholarships will be given to students who ranked in the top 5 percent of their class at the end of their junior year and who have demonstrated leadership ability. Two hundred quarterfinalists will be designated in November, 50 semifinalists in January and about 10 finalists, to be selected by university deans, alumni and other UT officials, will be invited to Austin in February.

Following on-campus interviews, five recipients will be chosen. Announcements will be made March 2 in the winners' hometowns by local Texas Exes Clubs and awards will be presented on campus next fall.

Eligible high school seniors may obtain applications from their school counselors or from The Ex-Students' Association, P.O. Box 7278, Austin, Texas 78712. Applications must be postmarked no later than Nov. 1.

Writer to speak on Northern Ireland

ODESSA — John Conroy, who has written for the New York Times, Washington Post, Boston Globe and newspapers and magazines in Holland, Italy, Australia and Canada, will speak in the student lounge at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin at 6:30 tonight.

The lecture, "Northern Ireland: An Everyday War," is free and open to the public.

Conroy has lived in the heart of the Belfast Catholic ghetto. He was there through the upheaval of riots, bombs, barricades and ambushes following the death of IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands. His eyewitness accounts of the events of those days, published in the Boston Phoenix and the Chicago Reader were nominated for an Overseas Press Club Award and his account of the life of Catholic teenagers, "Northern Ireland's Lost Generation," became a cover story of the New York Times Sunday Magazine.

Conroy began his journalism career as a Vista Volunteer, when he founded a community newspaper. He also worked as a senior editor for a Chicago magazine. He has since become a freelance writer, traveling around the world. In 1980, he won an Alicia Patterson Foundation fellowship, an award given to five journalists every year.

He now is writing a book on ordinary life in Northern Ireland for Viking Press. It will be published in fall 1983.

Anthony Hutt to lecture on ancient Egypt

ODESSA — The student lounge at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin will relive the ancient days of Egypt as Antony Hutt speaks on "The Splendor of Egypt," at 8 tonight.

The lecture, free and open to the public, will show the chronological sequence of development in Egypt.

Dr. Frank Samponaro, UTPB associate professor of history, said the lecture will take the audience on a journey along the Nile and offer glimpses of the splendors which an actual trip would reveal.

Hutt has studied at Worcester College in Oxford, London University and the British Institute of Persian Studies.

He has served as assistant director of the British Institute of Persian Studies in Tehran, managing editor of Scorpion Publications Ltd. and editor of various art and archaeology research papers. He also has led expeditions to Iran, Afghanistan, Turkey and Libya and served as the director of excavations in Sirjan, Iran.

The lecture is sponsored by UTPB's faculty of history.

Students need to register for tests

Midland and Lee High School sophomore and junior students who wish to take the PSAT/NMSQT test should sign up before test dates in their school counselor's office. Tests will be given at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the LHS cafeteria and at 8 a.m. Oct. 23 in the MHS cafeteria.

Prepatory officers speak at Trinity

Admissions officers from two preparatory schools for boys visted Trinity School during the week.

Steve Hearne from McCallie School in Chattanooga, Tenn., spoke to Trinity's eighth and ninth grade boys Tuesday. Jim Farrar, representing Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va., spoke to the group on Wednesday. Farrar presented further information about EHS to boys from grades seven through ten and their parents at a gathering hosted by Mr. and Mrs. L.R. French Jr., Wednesday night.

St. Ann's PTA to meet tonight in gym

The St. Ann's PTA will meet at 7 tonight in the St. Ann's Gymnasium, according to Linda Honeyfield.

College credit transfers cause confusion

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

There is a conflict, due to misunderstanding rather than intentional spite, between the state's 139 public and private, four-year and junior colleges and universities. Which courses should be accepted as credit when a student transfers from one institution to another often has been a source of contention between schools and one of frustration for students.

The conflict on creditable core curriculum is rampant in every area of instruction, although no other of the 14 transfer study committees assigned by the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System was forced to do as extensive a study as the committee assigned to the Journalism/Mass Communications, according to Wilma Wirt, chairperson.

"We went far beyond where the normal transfer studies go," Ms. Wirt, of the department of communications at The University of Texas at El Paso, admitted.

According to Ms. Wirt, since the area of journalism/mass communications has expanded to encompass so many various areas, the committee was forced to break into subcommittees to comprehensively and accurately complete the study.

"JOURNALISM IS no longer limited to writing and editing a newspaper," she pointed out after a hearing on setting standards for transferring junior college credits with junior and four-year college journalism/mass communications instructors and newspaper editors from Odessa, Lubbock, Levelland and Midland at Midland College Wednesday. Two additional hearings are planned Oct. 27 and Nov. 5 in Houston and Dallas.

In 1968, when Ms. Wirt was on the original committee assigned by the Coordinating Board to look into the core curriculum for journalism, junior colleges were just beginning to grow and curriculum standards at every campus in the state were diverse.

At that time, the committee offered a guideline for core curriculum in an effort to help new institutes with their growing needs and established universities improve areas of teacher guidance, equipment selection and curriculum standards.

"At that time, we came up with a suggested core curriculum," she explained, adding that in 1980, the coordinating board decided another look needed to be taken "because of the misunderstanding (by some institutions) that if this was the core, then everyone had to take it."

ALTHOUGH THE state requires that 12 hours credit must be given to a student who transfers to another institution, provided those courses are offered at both schools, many institutions thought that meant they had to offer the same mandatory courses.

"But what has happened is that many who go to junior colleges find their courses won't transfer because the college (they transfer to) doesn't offer the same courses or they may have their own they want the student to take," she explained.

The problem of transferring credits can occur when a student transfers from one four-year university to another, although a student faces more difficulty when transferring from a junior college to a four-year university, she said.

"Junior colleges want to start their students immediately in their major while the majority of senior public institutions don't (allow students to concentrate on majors) until later," she said, explaining that many students enter a junior college with the intention of only obtaining an associate degree after completing two years of college.

UNFORTUNATELY, some students take all of the hours in their major that they can while in junior college and then decide they want to continue their education in order to receive a bachelor's degree. When transferring to a four-year institution, they find they have excessive hours in their major, which the university will not accept as credit courses. The student often has to take courses he already has studied at the junior college, as well as complete basic courses required by the university as a junior or senior, when most of his new classmates are at the freshman or sophomore level.

Usually students at junior colleges also are encouraged to enroll in publication courses (working on the yearbook or the school newspaper) every semester, which results in less time for many important lecture courses, both in journalism and other academic areas.

According to an instructor at South Plains Junior College in Levelland, junior colleges encourage students to enroll in publication courses because of the short amount of time the instructors have to work with the students. He cited the need of small junior colleges to get students immediately interested in their major as well as the need to have as many of the small enrollment as possible staffing the newpaper and yearbook.

WHILE MS. WIRT said she realized the difficulty junior colleges and colleges with small enrollments face, she said one of her main concerns is that journalism students don't take enough other courses during their college career.

"You can't write about the governor unless you know what his job is," she stated.

While instructors and deans are being encouraged to advise their junior college students that although certain courses may not be credited when they transfer they are important to the student's education, checking school catalogues to see what courses are required and what courses will be accepted as credit is the student's responsibility, Ms. Wirt maintained.

The best students won't mind taking important courses that will give them a well-rounded education even though those courses may not be accepted when transferring, she said.

'Harry Powell' searches for true identity, family

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — The old man's eyes widened at the question. He smiled as he rubbed his chin and tried to pull the answer out of the past.

He opened his mouth as if to speak and moved his tongue and lips. The answer simply wouldn't come. As he had done many times, Harry Powell buried his head in his hands and managed, "I, I, I try, but I can't tell you plain."

He is either 68 or 70. Sometime between 1959 and 1975, he apparently adopted the name Harry Powell and quit being Thomas Henry Hoover.

The reasons — and the rest of the mystery of Harry Powell — are locked deep in his mind, and even he can't bring them to the surface.

Powell suffered a stroke May 16, 1980, while living and working at the Salvation Army in Austin. A few weeks later, he was taken to a nursing home, where has lived since.

He now suffers from aphasia, a condition that makes it difficult for him to speak or to understand what is said to him.

Powell's struggle to remember his past has gained him several allies trying to help him break through his memory and find the two daughters he says he has.

"It's impossible not to be charmed by him," said Lynne Hays, a speech pathologist who has worked with Powell since his stroke.

The search for Powell's past is more difficult because for years before his stroke he had intentionally obscured his past, refusing to talk about his family or his personal life.

Nursing home administrators tried to trace Powell's past, but got no further than his recent employment with the Salvation Army.

"He wanted to wipe away his past," said Elaine Hall, one of his employers at the Salvation Army. "We knew he was not telling the truth."

This is what is known about him:

He has two daughters whom he hasn't seen since they were children. He would like to find them.

He may have been born in Kingsville. He was married three times. He served in the Army in the mid-1930s and the late 1940s. He lived in Houston, where he was arrested once in 1959. He worked in Dallas in the 1970s.

There is no conclusive proof that Harry Powell was once Thomas Henry Hoover, although military and social security records he has suggest it.

Birth and military records have been lost or destroyed, so much of the information cannot be confirmed.

Hoover reached the rank of technical sergent in the Army, and was court-martialed, Army officials said. Powell showed no recollection of the court-martial and insisted he had been a colonel.

He said he went to Texas A&I, but the school has no record of Hoover or Powell. He said he had been married once, but military records and his arrest record in Houston indicate he has been married three times.

He remembered the arrest but denied it was for the charge indicated by Houston police. Police said he was not jailed.

Available records confirm the fact about two daughters. One was named Tommie Jean Hoover, the other Alice May Hoover. According to incomplete military records, it appears they were born in Tennessee.

Arriving for his first visit here, Marchais said, "The restoration of our party relations is an excellent thing, conducive to peace, justice and socialism in the world."

He and his five-member delegation were greeted by Qiao Shi, minister of the Chinese Communist Party's central liaison department and by French Ambassador Charles Malo. Marchais was to begin talks later in the day with party leaders. He also is to meet Deng Xiaoping, China's top leader.

"No one can deny that we have our different positions and views with the Chinese Communist Party, so we will discuss these questions in full frankness and friendship," Marchais said.

And a car to be enjoyed for many moons. Both because of the attention to quality engineering that goes into all our cars, and the Prelude's standard power-operated moonroof.
The moon and stars come standard as well.

Stock no. 1051

Just what is the difference between a 2 wheel and 4 wheel drive sport utility. Unless all terrain travel is important to you, consider these advantages in a 2 wheel drive. Less machinery in the 2 wheel Ramcharger means less on the sticker price and the cost of repair. 2 wheel drive uses normal highway tires for less cost and for a more comfortable ride. And the 2 wheel drive tows your boat, camper or trailer with as much ease as the 4 wheeler. Over all the 2 wheeler is a practical choice. But we of course, stock 4 wheel drive Ramchargers.

The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 9¼% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 14¼% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be charged at the most recent 6months Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7.5% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principle exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE APPROXIMATELY 16¼%.

GAS. CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW. FHA/VA financing availble.
