

Disappointed shuttle astronauts begin week of briefings

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Astronauts Joe Engle and Richard Truly, who returned from an historic space voyage to cheering crowds during the weekend, begin a week of intensive briefings today about their adventure in the shuttle Columbia.

The 106-ton winged rocketship became the first vehicle from Earth to successfully complete more than one roundtrip to space, although the length of the second flight was cut in half. One of three electric power generators aboard broke down, and space officials decided to curtail the mission and not take any chances.

"There'll probably be a long briefing session on electricity," said National Aeronautics and Space Administration spokesman Charles Redmond.

THE COLUMBIA returned to Earth on Saturday, landing smoothly in California's Mojave Desert, and technicians began immediately preparing it for its third trip into orbit in mid-March.

Engle and Truly, who talked Friday with President Reagan during his visit to Mission Control, ate breakfast Sunday with Vice President George Bush, who called NASA a "national treasure."

Reporters at the Johnson Space Center waited outside during the breakfast, but a microphone left on in the same room provided about five minutes of the conversation inside. Bush expressed curiosity about the shuttle's capabilities.

"Can that thing pick up — is it designed to pick up an alien satellite?" the vice president asked Truly, the shuttle pilot.

"It can," Truly replied. "Can you really sleep the same way (in the weightless environment) — I mean, where you're just out and not aware? Or is it very light?"

"No, you really can," said Engle. "I slept well. The only problem is, you wake up early."

After the breakfast, Bush told reporters, "This NASA complex and the people who make it up are a national treasure, and it is essential that whatever we do in Washington that this national treasure be preserved and continued."

And, he vowed, "It will be."

ENGLE AND TRULY went home and spent the rest of the day relaxing.

Monday they'll pick up on a solid week of technical briefings," said NASA public affairs officer Terry White. "Each system group's engineers will get a crack at them to pick their brains on what works and what needs to be improved."

Spokesman Redmond said this time experts should be able to produce a thermogram of the shuttle's underbelly during the fiery re-entry — a picture showing the varying degrees of heat build-up.

Officials believe air friction created by the shuttle's re-entry generates temperatures up to 2,700 degrees Fahrenheit, but they were not able to compare that estimate with a thermogram during April's maiden flight because of bad weather.

Those attending the briefings on Columbia's second flight will include astronauts Ken Mattingly and Hank Hartsfield, who served as the backup crew for the Engle-Truly mission, although they have not yet been designated as the crew for the next shuttle mission.

White said Engle and Truly will hold a news conference in about a week. A key topic will be why the normally reliable electrical power unit broke down in space.

THE DEAD BATTERY left two functioning power cells aboard, but NASA officials invoked a "minimum mission" rule that requires triplicates in certain systems. The shuttle could limp home with only one fuel cell, but if all three failed, it would be stranded in orbit.

THERE WAS NO hiding the disappointment for Engle and Truly, who were geared to stay in space the entire five days as planned.

"Sorry we got down here a couple of days early," Engle told a welcoming crowd at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

He and Truly returned to Earth after 36 orbits, the same number the shuttle made on its first flight. Engle called the cut in flight time "kind of heartbreaking," but added: "We were awful glad that we were able to accomplish the things that we set out to do and got the main objectives of the flight done."

Unemployment may hit peak of 9 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the administration's gloomiest forecast yet, one of President Reagan's leading economic advisers says the unemployment rate may go as high as 9 percent before the nation begins working its way out of recession.

Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, conceded Sunday that the jobless rate "could conceivably" reach the 9 percent peak of the 1974-75 recession — the highest in the post-World War II period.

That would mean approximately 9.5 million people out of work, the most since the average for 1939.

"I do think that an unfortunate consequence of winding down the inflation... is the current recession, and yes, I expect the unemployment rate unfortunately to continue to rise during this recession," Weidenbaum said on CBS' "Face The Nation."

BUT WEIDENBAUM said he still strongly expects "one of the most vigorous periods of economic growth in recent years" by the second half of 1982 as Reagan's policies start taking effect.

Unemployment climbed to 8 percent in October, meaning about 8.5 million people were out of work. After the government reported that rise from September's 7.5 percent rate, the administration, which had been predicting unemployment would peak at about 8 percent, acknowledged its forecast was overly optimistic.

In other economic news Sunday: —Sen. Ernest F. Hollings of South Carolina said budget director David A. Stockman had "exposed himself as a great deceiver" by acknowledging his skepticism about the administration's economic programs. Hollings, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said the furor over Stockman's comments reported last week in the December of Atlantic Monthly "really shook President Reagan's credibility."

Appearing with Hollings on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley," Sen. William L. Armstrong, R-Colo., said, however, that the issue now is not Stockman but "how we're going to get the federal budget under control."

—Democratic Rep. James R. Jones, chairman of the House Budget Committee, said on NBC's "Meet the Press" that the Reagan economic program is "a Rube Goldberg mixture" whose parts are "inconsistent and therefore unworkable."

Collision kills Midlander

A 20-year-old Mangum, Okla., man remained in City Jail early today after being booked Sunday on a charge of negligent homicide in connection with a grinding car-truck-tractor collision that killed 21-year-old Antonio Quintana Jaquez of Midland.

Jerry Dale White Jr. was to be taken before a justice of the peace today for formal charges and the setting of bond.

White was driver of a tractor-trailer rig that was pulling away from a stop sign on the north service road of Interstate 20 at 11:46 p.m. Saturday when he was involved in a collision with a car driven by Jaquez.

According to reports by investigating officers, White said he thought he had time to proceed across Rankin Highway before Jaquez's northbound car got to the stop sign. The car apparently was going faster than White had thought and struck the tractor-trailer rig. The vehicle slid underneath the rig, pinning Jaquez inside.

The impact of the collision demolished Jaquez's vehicle, reports indicated. Midland emergency personnel used the "Jaws of Life" equipment to extract the man's body.

Green charged with murder

Booker T. Green, of 202 E. Dormard Ave., charged in the Saturday night murder of Midland businessman R.J. Morris, 50, has been bailed out of Midland County Jail under a $25,000 bond after he was formally charged Sunday.

According to police, Morris was fatally wounded following an argument over a gambling bet in his eastside liquor store.

Morris reportedly ran Green out of the liquor store with a gun. Green allegedly got a .22-caliber rifle from his car and fired five shots through the liquor store window. One of the shots struck Morris in the left chest.

Green is a U.S. Postal Service foreman.

Morris, who had sizable holdings in Midland's flats on the east side, owned several businesses, including R.J. Real Pit Bar-B-Q.

Services are pending with Roscoe V. Jackson Mortuary.

Fast-food franchise damaged

By BILL MODISSETT
Staff Writer

Midland police were continuing their investigation this morning into an explosion burglars used early today to open the safe at Der Wierschnitzel, while the firm's owner assessed damage.

"We won't be selling any hot dogs or hamburgers today," reflected Peter Mertens, owner of the fast-food franchise.

The explosion, which rocked the franchise at 3:45 a.m. today, shattered windows, cracked stucco walls, snapped beams, gnarled metal objects and opened the safe. Mertens said he did not know how much money was in the safe at that time, but it's doubtful the burglar got much for his efforts.

Force of the explosion apparently shredded the money contained in the safe, with pieces of bills found throughout the inside of the structure. Mertens said police officers estimated 50-60 pounds of plastic explosive was used to blow the safe, much more than was actually needed.

J.T. McKinley with Abbott Builders was surveying damage at mid-morning and indicated his initial estimate places damage to the building at $20,000 to $30,000. He added that work to restore the fast-food restaurant probably will not be completed before Feb. 1, 1982.

Mertens said burglars apparently placed plastic explosive against the safe in the drive-through window

Not much left on top

Investigators study what remains of a car that struck a tractor-trailer rig at Rankin Highway and Interstate 20 shortly before midnight Sunday. Emergency personnel used the "Jaws of Life," seen to the right, to remove the body of Antonio Quintana Jaquez from the wreckage. Jaquez, driver of the car, apparently was killed on impact. See story below.

Reagan plans no personnel changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, back in the nation's capital after an unsuccessful hunting weekend in Texas, says he plans no changes in his administration because of personnel problems involving his national security adviser and his budget director.

Reagan flew home Sunday aboard the jumbo "Doomsday Plane" designed by the Strategic Air Command as a flying White House during nuclear war and said the experience left him feeling secure.

He returned to find increasing questions about national security adviser Richard V. Allen's receipt of $1,000 from a Japanese magazine which interviewed Nancy Reagan last January and continuing fallout from budget director David A. Stockman's published doubts about the president's economic program.

REAGAN REFUSED to accept Stockman's resignation last week, and deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said Sunday that there would be no comment on the Allen matter pending a Justice Department investigation.

Upon arrival Sunday evening at Andrews Air Force Base near Washington, Reagan replied "No" when asked if he planned any changes in his administration.

The New York Times quoted unidentified administration officials today as saying there is no plan to ask Allen to step down during the investigation, although that position could change if a special prosecutor were appointed.

A senior executive of the Japanese women's magazine Shufu-no-Tomo — Japanese for "Housewives' Friend" — said he understood the White House knew in advance of the payment, which he called customary.

Allen said he locked the money in a safe rather than cause embarrassment to the reporters or Mrs. Reagan and then forgot about it until it was discovered by others.

The magazine's decision to make such a contribution and the amount deemed appropriate were agreed upon beforehand in a meeting of the editorial staff, Katsura Ishizuka said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

"It was understood in advance that some of the money would be given to a charity by the White House," said Ishizuka, director and general manager of the monthly magazine.

The Washington Post quoted Mrs. Reagan's press representative, Sheila Tate, in today's editions as saying the first lady does not remember the interview but has a "faint recollection" of a photo session.

THE ALLEN MATTER came just days after the December issue of Atlantic Monthly quoted Stockman as saying the president's economic program of tax and budget cuts isn't working — a statement seized by Democrats as evidence that the plan was misguided from the start.

Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, senior Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said Sunday on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley" that the furor over Stockman's remarks "shook President Reagan's credibility."

In Texas, White House chief of staff James A. Baker III joked about the Stockman story. "We turned off the lights, turned down the thermostat and we bound and gagged David Stockman," he told a Republican fund-raising dinner that Reagan attended in Houston.

Whatever his problems at home,

Reagan said he found security in the air.

Accompanied by his top three aides, Reagan spent two hours and 40 minutes aboard a U.S. Air Force Boeing 747 designed as a flying command post from which he could direct strategic forces during nuclear war. The experience was "great, fascinating and very encouraging," the president said afterward.

REAGAN TOLD Speakes he was "highly impressed" by what he saw and added: "It gives me a sense of confidence."

The president was given a demonstration of an emergency takeoff from San Antonio, Texas, that took seven minutes and 19 seconds — one minute slower than a Boeing 727 carrying reporters.

Speakes told reporters that the president's plane flew at 33,000 feet over Shreveport, La., Memphis and Knoxville, Tenn.

"Everything went according to schedule on the plane," Speakes said. Reagan toured the aircraft "from stem to stern" and was briefed on its operations, he added.

Hinckley suicide try foiled

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the door lock jammed, U.S. marshals reached in the window of John W. Hinckley Jr.'s prison cell and cut down the accused presidential assassin as he tried to hang himself with a rolled-up jacket, the Justice Department says.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said the lock on Hinckley's cell door malfunctioned and kept marshals from reaching him immediately after they saw him begin the apparent suicide attempt at 4:55 p.m. Sunday.

DeCair credited alert work by the marshals guarding Hinckley in the stockade at Fort Meade, Md., with saving his life.

THE SPOKESMAN said Hinckley was "semi-conscious" and suffering from hypoxia, or oxygen deficiency, when he arrived at the hospital of the army base but was in satisfactory condition with "no serious injury of any kind."

U.S. marshals are investigating the incident, particularly to determine whether the 26-year-old Hinckley had disabled the lock on his cell door, DeCair said.

Hinckley has been under 24-hour watch since he unsuccessfully tried to harm himself with a overdose of Tylenol, an aspirin substitute, and Valium, a tranquilizer, in a federal prison in Butner, N.C., last May 27. Prison officials said Hinckley wrote of possible suicide after that.

Hinckley pleaded innocent to a 13-count federal indictment charging him with attempted assassination of President Reagan on March 30. His lawyers have told the court they will use an insanity defense and will not contest the fact that Hinckley shot and wounded Reagan, a Secret Service agent, a District of Columbia policeman and White House press secretary James Brady.

While Hinckley awaits the start of his trial Jan. 4 in U.S. District Court in Washington, he has been watched around the clock directly and on television monitors in his single cell at the nearby army base.

DeCair said marshals saw him try to hang himself with a rolled-up jacket wrapped around a bar in the cell window and rushed to stop him. The door, however, would not unlock, so the marshals went outside in the exercise yard and reached through the window to cut him down.

"IT WAS BECAUSE he was under 24-hour watch that the attempt was unsuccessful," DeCair said. The spokesman said he did not know exactly how long Hinckley had been hanging before he was cut down.

Asked if Hinckley left a note, DeCair said, "I can't answer that."

He said he did not think the incident would delay or affect Hinckley's trial.

One of Hinckley's attorneys, Vincent Fuller, said Sunday night, "It's premature to say what it will do to the trial. I can't get to officialdom until tomorrow."

Fuller said he had no details of what happened at Fort Meade.

Hinckley's father, a Denver oil entrepreneur, and mother have been told of the incident, Fuller said, but he declined to give their response.

Texas area forecast

West Texas: Fair through Tuesday with continued above seasonal normal temperatures. Highs mid 70s north to upper 80s southwest. Lows lower 40s north to lower 50s south.

North Texas: Generally fair through Tuesday. Mild today. A little warmer tonight and Tuesday. Highs 70s north to 80s south. Lows 40s to 50s.

South Texas: Fair to partly cloudy through Tuesday. Not much change in temperatures. Highs 70s to low 80s south. Lows 40s Hill Country and generally 50s elsewhere.

Port Arthur to Port O'Connor: Winds becoming northeast 5 to 10 knots through Tuesday. Seas 1 to 3 feet. Fair weather.

Port O'Connor to Brownsville: Northeast winds near 10 knots through Tuesday. Seas 1 to 3 feet. Fair weather.

Borders forecast

Oklahoma: Fair and warmer through Tuesday. Highs 70 to 80. Lows 40 to 50. Highs Tuesday 75 to 85.

New Mexico: Unseasonably warm through Tuesday with near record warmth east and south. Sunny today. Fair tonight. Increasing clouds northwest Tuesday with continued fair weather east and south. Highs 50 to 70 mountains and northwest, 70 to 80 east and south. Lows 20 to 30 mountains and northwest, 30 to 40 east and south.

Above normal temperatures forecast

Fair skies with above normal temperatures remain in the forecast for Midland through Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

The temperature is expected to cool down to the mid-40s tonight, and shoot back up Tuesday with the high expected to reach the low 60s.

NWS reports the normal high temperature readings for this time of the year are in the high 60s with the nights dipping into the 30s. The warmer temperatures are expected to continue until the end of the week when it should become partly cloudy and colder.

Southwest winds should travel at 5-10 mph tonight and pick up to 15-20 mph Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 77 was not too far off the record high temperature of 84 set in 1963, but the overnight low of 43 was out of reach from the 15-degree reading set in 1932.

Woman robbed in home at knifepoint

A Midland woman told police that she awoke early Sunday morning to find a man in her bedroom who demanded money at knifepoint, then fled.

Isabel Diaz of 500 N. Terrell St. told police the robber took $42 in cash from her after holding the knife to her throat and escaped over the back fence of the residence.

She described the man as 6-foot-tall and weighing 140 pounds. She said when she answered one of his questions in Spanish, he also replied in Spanish.

Scott Hill of 5007 Heather Road reported the theft of more than $800 in possessions from his vehicle. The theft occurred at 9 a.m. Sunday at 1005 S. Jefferson St.

Taken were a tape player, power booster and equalizer, six cassette tapes, carburetor and assorted tools.

Man dies after Sunday night shooting

ODESSA — Jimmy Calvin Wilson, 24, of Odessa died in Medical Center Hospital Sunday night after a shooting at an Odessa nightclub, according to Odessa police.

The shooting occurred at Billy's Zodiac Club, 400 S. Dixie St., about 10:30 p.m. and the victim apparently was shot by a woman with a small caliber pistol, police said. A suspect has been arrested and charges were to be filed later this morning.

According to reports, the incident was "an outgrowth of a domestic squabble."

Clements will seek re-election

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements made it official today. He wants to be governor for a second term.

"I know of no higher honor than to serve the greatest state in the union as its governor and there is no challenge I would rather accept than to have the affairs of Texas as my daily responsibility and agenda," he told a news conference where the reporters were outnumbered by Clements' cheering supporters.

Clements won election as Texas' first Republican governor this century after a hard-fought campaign in 1978.

"The message I received then and continue to hear now is that you want state government to be run in a businesslike way," he said. "I still hear your message and this businesslike approach to government has been my program and is my plan for the future."

In a question-and-answer session following his formal announcement, Clements revealed several of his demands on the 1983 Legislature, if he wins re-election.

Suspended police officers face firing

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas (AP) — Two suspended police officers could be fired after city officials meet today to discuss allegations that the men beat two handcuffed Mexican-American teen-agers and then failed polygraph tests, officials say.

"We messed up, and we're going to get our house in order," said Assistant Police Chief Kenneth Burr. "It's as simple as that."

Veteran patrolman Jim Horrocks and Alan Patton, who has been with the department about a year, were suspended without pay Friday in connection with the Sept. 26 incident. Neither could be reached for comment.

"The police chief, the assistant chief and I are going to get together...and we'll decide what, if any, disciplinary action we'll take," said City Manager Ted Willis, who added the officers could be fired. "We take these things very seriously."

The FBI is investigating whether the officers violated the youths' civil rights during the incident, which occurred at a carwash and the city police station, Willis said Saturday.

"The officers submitted false accounts of what happened...," Burr said. "They were involved, and did assault the two juveniles. They used more force than was necessary" to make the arrest.

Willis said he ordered an internal investigation after the youths filed complaints of police brutality on Oct. 1.

He said both officers failed polygraph tests when they denied using excessive force against Ricky Diaz, 16, and Chris Gomez, 15, both of Grand Prairie, between Dallas and Fort Worth. Diaz received a broken nose and several chipped teeth in the incident, Willis said.

Diaz, Gomez and a jailer who verified their charges all passed polygraph tests, he added.

Mayor Pro Tem Phil Duncan said all bookings in Grand Prairie Jail are videotaped and "I believe a portion of this occurred in the booking area, and it was (videotaped)."

A sergeant who was absent when the incident occurred and a patrolman who was present also may face disciplinary action, said Willis, who declined to elaborate on the other officers' involvement.

The youths charged that the officers punched them several times after they were arrested and handcuffed about 2 a.m. Sept. 26 while cleaning Diaz's car at a Grand Prairie carwash.

Patton told investigators he saw the teen-agers drinking beer, but both youths deny that allegation.

Gomez said that after he was handcuffed, an officer held him by the hair while Patton punched him in the face, knocking him down and giving him a bloody nose. While he was being led into police headquarters, Gomez said, he was punched in the stomach by Horrocks.

Diaz said he tried to read Horrocks' badge number, but the officer threw him against the wall and punched him twice in the face, chipping several teeth.

area, then ran wire to a point near the office. From that point the explosive was detonated, he said.

"The money was just physically blown apart," Mertens noted. No fire resulted although five units from the Midland Fire Department responded to the scene. The explosion was heard three to four blocks away, Mertens said, and the first officers to arrive at the location reported seeing debris still rising above the restaurant.

The drive-through portion of the restaurant and kitchen sustained the most visible damage. Plate glasses were shattered by the blast and the force of the blast blew open a locked rear door. The deadbolt on the door's lock was still extended, however.

Sheetrock was blown down from the building's ceiling and numerous beams were snapped. Debris was scattered throughout and around the building.

Mertens says he has no idea who might have set the blast. "It's not an inside job," he added. "It's definitely an outside job."

No arrests had been made in the case this morning and police say they have no suspects at this time.

Peter Mertens, owner of Der Wieners-chinell, Illinois Avenue and Midkiff Road, surveys damage done to the interior of the fast-food restaurant after an explosion ripped through the building about 3:45 a.m.

today. Burglars used 50 to 60 pounds of plastic explosive in an attempt to blow open the safe, left. The force of the explosion not only destroyed much of the interior, but also shredded most of the money in the safe.

Motorist sideswipes car, returns and shoots woman
Son, daughter injured in shooting

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Authorities say they believe they have found the vehicle driven by a motorist who sideswiped a family's car and fled, then returned to shoot a woman to death and wound her son and daughter.

Fort Worth Homicide Detective B.J. Corder said Sunday no arrest had been made, but officials were trying to get positive identification on a suspect and find out if the family knew him.

Police said Mary Ellen Garcia, 43, was standing outside of her home inspecting the damage to her car when the man shot and killed her early Saturday morning.

She was pronounced dead at the scene, police said.

"We don't know who it was or why he would do this," Debra Estorga, a family member who was not involved in the shooting, said Saturday. "No one knows."

Ben Garcia, 21, was shot in the back and Rose Marie Garcia, 22, was wounded by a bullet that went through her left arm and entered her chest, said officials at St. Joseph's Hospital. Both victims were reported in serious condition.

The family was awakened about 2:15 a.m. Saturday by a crashing sound outside the home.

Reynaldo Garcia, 44, and his son, Reynaldo Jr., told police they jumped into another car and pursued the fleeing motorist. Meanwhile, Mrs. Garcia and three of her children went out into the street to look at the car, officials said.

The motorist eluded the father and son, and then apparently returned "fired a pistol repeatedly at family members who were outside looking at the car," said Sgt. L.C. Henderson.

Garcia and his son heard several shots as they returned, police said. Mrs. Garcia was found lying face up in the road and the wounded son and daughter apparently made it into the house before collapsing, police said.

Doctors arrested for interfering with paramedics

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Two doctors were arrested on charges of interfering with paramedics treating a heart attack victim at a hotel, officials say. The doctors say they were roughed up by police.

Arrested Saturday night were Dr. Leslie Schoenfeld, director of gastroenterology and research at Los Angeles Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, and Dr. Peter Barret, a physician at St. Mary's Medical Center in Long Beach. Both were attending a doctors' convention.

Schoenfeld, whose wife, Connie, also was arrested, says he was placed in a choke hold by police and jammed in the groin. Barret claimed his left arm was nearly pulled out of its socket during the arrest.

Another physician, Dr. Edward Piken, said he was sprayed with mace without warning while a fellow physician, Dr. Ronald Siegel, was shoved repeatedly. Neither was arrested.

Palm Springs Police Chief Tom Kendra declined Sunday to respond to the doctors' charges, saying, "As in most cases like this, there is some conflicting information on both sides that hopefully will be sorted out and acted upon."

Witnesses said the incident began when a woman suffered a heart attack at a party adjoining a hotel room where members of a gastroenterology association were meeting.

The doctors said they began giving cardiopulmonary resuscitation to the woman before paramedics arrived. A dispute apparently arose after the paramedics came and received conflicting instructions from the doctors at the scene and those advising from the hospital by radio.

The paramedics then summoned police, who ordered everyone to leave or be arrested.

Economic program faces another test

By JAY PERKINS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's economic program faces another major test this week as Congress works against a Friday deadline for legislation to keep the government operating.

A continuing resolution that has funded government operations since Oct. 1 — the start of fiscal 1982 — expires at midnight Friday. Unless new legislation is passed, no money will be available for federal agencies.

The bill is only one of several economic approaches before Congress that are aimed at keeping federal services going while trying to find a way to cut back on mounting federal deficits.

In other pending action on economic matters, the House plans to consider the defense authorization bill — with a showdown looming on Reagan's plan to build the B-1 bomber and the MX missile — and possibly a conference report to restore minimum Social Security benefits.

Also, a House-Senate conference committee hopes to wind up its lengthy deliberations on the multi-billion-dollar, four-year farm bill.

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., said Sunday on ABC's "This Week with David Brinkley" that he was "getting close" to the votes needed on the Senate Appropriations Committee to delete funds for 100 B-1 bombers which Reagan wants to build while developing a radar-eluding Stealth plane. Hollings said the $40 billion targeted for the B-1 over 10 years is too expensive "for a plane that is going to be serviceable for three years."

Sperm studies to determine effect of Agent Orange

By LEE JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas scientists soon will be examining the sperm of veterans who fathered defective children to see if exposure to Agent Orange in Vietnam was to blame.

A program created by the Legislature to seek answers to the question of whether Agent Orange caused genetic defects, cancer and other illnesses is getting off the ground.

Robert Nimmo, chief of the Veterans Administration, said in July that no medical evidence links Agent Orange to any health problem other than an acne-like skin disease.

"The sperm studies are intended to see if chromosome breakage was related to the birth of children born with defects," said Dr. George Anderson, who heads the Texas Health Department's new Agent Orange program.

Anderson said an estimated 23,000 Texas veterans were exposed to Agent Orange and other chemical defoliants and herbicides while in Vietnam.

"It's a momentous problem," he said. The department published rules and questionnaires for the program in the Texas Register Nov. 10 and is expected to put them into effect in January after a period for public comment.

"Right now we are very pleased with them. The only problem is there is not enough money to do what the bill proposes to do," said Donna Jordan, a co-organizer of the Brotherhood of Vietnam Veterans, which initiated the Agent Orange bill.

The Legislature appropriated $500,000 for the first two years of the program, and Anderson said it will cost $2,000 for a fat biopsy and genetic screening of one veteran.

Fat biopsies are intended to show whether dioxin, an Agent Orange contaminant blamed for cancer, liver ailments and birth defects, remains in a veteran's body years after coming home from the Vietnam War.

Mrs. Jordan said Dr. Robert Bernstein, a former Army Medical Corps general who heads the health department, has "been more than helpful" in moving the Agent Orange program from legislative good intentions to reality.

Bernstein last month said the Veterans Administration had destroyed its credibility by failing to provide information on Agent Orange.

The VA recently announced it will gather statistics on illnesses and birth defects blamed on the chemical defoliant that was widely used in Vietnam.

Anderson, who was in Vietnam briefly as an Air Force medical officer during the evacuation of wounded from the Tet offensive in 1968, said the Texas study will probe deeper than the VA's.

"The federal studies don't include genetic screening and fat biopsies," he said.

In the state's program, the health department will gather data identifying veterans with problems and the University of Texas' medical schools will do the biopsies, sperm studies and genetic counseling.

Linda Mencin, aide to Rep. Larry Don Shaw, D-Big Spring, sponsor of the Agent Orange bill, said some UT medical people were lukewarm at first but now seem enthusiastic.

"At our last meeting they sounded pretty excited at the prospect of doing something of national and international importance. There hasn't been much genetic research on this," said Ms. Mencin.

It will be up to veterans who think their illnesses or their children's birth defects were caused by Agent Orange to identify themselves. The first step will be a trip to a doctor, who will submit a report — which the veteran also must sign — to the department.

The doctor's report will list the veteran's symptoms as well as the physician's diagnosis and treatment of them.

After receiving the initial report from a doctor, the department will send the veteran a three-page questionnaire asking about his military assignment, dates and places of exposure to chemical defoliants, symptoms at the time of exposure and symptoms that developed later.

The questionnaire also asks about exposure to agricultural and industrial chemicals as a civilian and about cancer cases in the veteran's family.

"We need to know the full spectrum of exposure to chemicals rather than orient just to some of them," Anderson said.

The department will correlate the data and furnish yearly reports to the governor and the Legislature.

Anderson said only some of the veterans who send in questionnaires will be asked to submit to fat biopsies and genetic testing.

"We will have to ferret out those with known high exposure and medical problems that could have resulted from it," he said.

The Agent Orange bill directs the attorney general to sue when necessary to obtain military records of veterans who claim Agent Orange exposure.

But Anderson says the VA has been "very cooperative" and can be expected to furnish records "except in specific cases where the veteran was on a highly classified mission."

"I don't anticipate that big a problem. The VA is very sensitive to the fact that they have lost a certain credibility with veterans and want to get out of that hole," he said.

The state program is designed to develop evidence about the possible Agent Orange link to illnesses and birth defects and to provide genetic counseling for veterans.

Other states, including Pennsylvania, California and Oklahoma, are considering similar legislation.

Mrs. Jordan said helping veterans financially with Agent Orange-related problems and paying for genetic counseling is a federal responsibility, and data accumulated by the states "should shame Congress" into acting.

The paint did her in

CAMDEN, Ala. (AP) — Cornelia Wallace competed against hunters, trackers and other sportsmen in a weekend survival game and almost won. But the paint did her in.

Mrs. Wallace, the ex-wife of former Gov. George Wallace, joined 17 others on a Wilcox County farm Saturday for the game, the second in the country to be played in conjunction with National Survival Game Inc.

The contest requires players to fight brambles and bushes to retrieve four colored flags from woodland hiding places without being 'shot' by another player.

Each player carries a gun filled with paint pellets, and once you get paint on you, you're out. Mrs. Wallace was declared the winner until someone noticed she was splashed with paint from a pellet that burst on a bush near her.

"Three pinhead drops," noted Mrs. Wallace, one of two women competing against 16 men.

After she was disqualified, a local resident, John Clyde Riggs, came in with four flags and was declared the winner.

Still, Mrs. Wallace remained philosophical about the near-win. "I think women have an advantage with their intuition. Women can do anything men can do," she said.

ATLANTA (AP) — American racial extremism is a mixture of home-grown "fascists" and aging Nazi war criminals, according to one of the world's foremost Nazi hunters.

"In the United States we have documented 300 cases (of Nazi war criminals), but it is only the tip of the iceberg. There are maybe 3,000 to 5,000; nobody really knows how many," Simon Wiesenthal told an Emory University audience Saturday night.

Extremist papers "with names like 'Spotlight' and 'Thunderbolt' are filled with hatred," Wiesenthal said. "When you close your eyes after you read something in those papers, you think you are in Nazi Germany in 1942."

The "Thunderbolt" is a publication of the National States' Rights Party, an anti-Semitic group run by avowed white supremacist J.B. Stoner of Marietta, Ga.

Wiesenthal's documentation has helped track down some of World War II's most infamous Nazis, including Adolf Eichmann, administrator of the Nazi extermination camp system. He spoke under heavy security by uniformed and plainclothes officers at the university auditorium.

Wiesenthal said the world needs constant reminders of how 11 million Jews, Russians, gypsies and political prisoners of several European nationalities died in the Nazi concentration camps.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Three thousand opera fans, turned away from the box office of San Francisco's opera house for a performance of "Aida," got to see tenor Luciano Pavarotti sing anyway.

The crowd jammed Civic Auditorium, about two blocks away from the War Memorial Opera House, paying $5 to $15 each to view the opera via closed circuit television on a 20-by-30-foot screen.

The telecast also was viewed by audiences in West Germany, Spain, Austria and, by tape delay, in Italy, Britain and Scandinavia.

Kurt Herbert Adler, general director of the San Francisco Opera, said the experiment was being viewed with great interest by operas throughout the world, and he predicted the experiment would be a success.

"Absolutely, because after all, opera is music and view," he said. "A live performance will always have the strongest effect on the public, but I hope people will enjoy this."

Everybody wants a piece of the money he found

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's been four months since a student dropped a pencil down a school-owned trailer's air-conditioning vent and reached in to find a fatful of $100 bills.

Now the student, his teacher, the Palm Beach County school board and the South County Drug Abuse Foundation all have laid claim to the $40,000. It appears that the courts will probably make the final decision.

The city of Boynton Beach is holding the money in a high-interest savings account until Jan. 9. The city says it must hold the money for six months in case anyone with a provable claim to being its real owner steps forward.

In addition, the Pennsylvania heirs of Eva M. Hollar are also hoping to be awarded the cash.

Ms. Hollar died in 1977. She lived at Connors Mobile Home Park in Clearwater at the time of her death.

Her relatives believe that the elderly widow had stashed a large sum of money somewhere in her trailer, but it was never found, according to estate executor Becky Haygood.

Ms. Haygood sold the trailer in 1977 for $4,000 after a thorough search failed to yield the money.

But after investigating the claim, officials have found that Ms. Hollar's trailer was a 1969 Statler. The one where the money was found is a 1971 Parkway.

The trailer now sits on the grounds of Congress Avenue Middle School in Boynton Beach, north of Fort Lauderdale. It is owned by the drug-abuse program, which says that makes it the money's owner.

"Usually in this situation, there are a lot of people who make claims. Frankly, I'm surprised there's only one (family)," said attorney George Loomis, representing the school board in its effort to be awarded the money if the original owner can't be found.

Loomis told the Fort Lauderdale News and Sun-Sentinel in Sunday's editions that the school board feels that since the money was found on school

Two blackouts hit Boston

BOSTON (AP) — An estimated 9,500 Boston Edison Co. customers in Boston and two suburbs lost power for up to 31 hours in separate and unrelated weekend blackouts.

The major outage, in Boston, was caused by an underground cable fire early Saturday morning that blacked out the Chinatown and garment districts, the downtown shopping center, the adult entertainment strip and parts of Beacon Hill.

Electricity was restored to about half of the affected Boston customers by 11 a.m. Saturday, but power remained out in Chinatown and the X-rated "Combat Zone" until Sunday.

Utility spokesman Mike Monahan said the heat of the fire was so intense it melted seven cable connections providing power to a wide area.

Billy Chin, president of the Chinese Merchants Benevolent Association, estimated businesses in Chinatown lost $250,000 in trade.

No crime problems or injuries were reported during the blackout, but many residents had to move or bundle up for two nights.

A circuit failure blacked out nearly 2,000 customers in suburban Needham's Birch Hill section for about 70 minutes Sunday evening.

In the suburb of Milton, about 1,000 residents were without power for four hours Sunday after an automobile struck a utility pole and knocked lines loose.

property, it belongs to the school.

Teacher John Montgomery, who was teaching students about the dangers of drug abuse, also would like part of the money.

The student, Todd Running, is a little worried about the competition.

"I figure I probably won't get any of it. The school will probably get it," he said.

HOW TO EARN UP TO $2,000 INTEREST AT THE DROP OF A HAT.

★ Introducing a financial first. From First Savings & Loan Association of Midland. The All Saver's Certificate, a fully insured savings plan that earns up to $1,000 tax-free interest on individual returns or $2,000 tax-free interest if you file a joint return.

★ Now for the first time, Uncle Sam will not only insure your savings plan, he'll give you a tax break on it as well. Here's how it works: to equal an assumed tax-exempt yield of 12 1/2%, a taxable investment would have to earn 17.86% if your family income is $25,000 and your tax bracket is 30%.

★ Just check the chart:

| IF YOUR FAMILY INCOME IS | YOUR TAX BRACKET PROBABLY IS | THE INTEREST RATE YOU'D HAVE TO RECEIVE TO NET 12 1/2% AFTER FEDERAL INCOME TAX IS |
|--------------------------|------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| $50,000                 | 50%                          | 25%                                                                                |
| $35,000                 | 40%                          | 20.83%                                                                             |
| $25,000                 | 30%                          | 17.86%                                                                             |
| $20,000                 | 25%                          | 16.67%                                                                             |

Figures above are approximate and based on 1981 tax tables. Interest rate on 12 1/2% is an assumed average investment yield on the All Saver's Certificate. Actual rate is 70% of the average investment yield on one-year treasury bills at date of purchase.

★ You can see why the All Saver's Certificate is a savings break-through. But you may not see it for long. The program begins October 1, 1981 and ends December 31, 1982. So hurry to First Savings and Loan Association of Midland and purchase your All Saver's Certificates.

★ The All Saver's Certificate is a limited offer with valuable results.

Five WCs, extenders, openers planned

Five wildcats, along with eight extenders, have been scheduled for West Texas by oil producers throughout the state, and from Oklahoma City.

GLASSCOCK EXTENDER

Diamond Shamrock Corp., Amarillo, will drill an 8,100-foot extender to the nine-hole Blacklock, east (Wolf-camp) field, seven miles northeast of Garden City.

The No. 1 Calverly "23", will go down 1,200 feet from the south line, and 660 feet from the east line of section 23, block 35, T-3-S T&PRR survey.

The drillsite is about 3/4 of a mile southeast of the Mallard No. 1 Cox, abandoned March 17, 1975 at 8,300 feet.

KING WILDCAT

SRG Oil Corp., Abilene, will drill a 3,850-foot wildcat, the No. 1 G.C. Carothers, 15 miles south of Guthrie. The drillsite is 467 feet from the north, and 2,000 feet from the west line of section 146, block F, H&TC survey.

The site is 1 1/4 miles northeast of the Roark E. Hooker No. 2 Carothers, abandoned as dry March 17, 1977 at 3,635 feet.

LAMB SEARCHER

Guaranty Petroleum Corp., Corpus Christi, plans a 4,600-foot wildcat, to be drilled seven miles southeast of Littlefield.

The No. 1 W.E. Rhoten et al, is staked 467 feet from the north and east lines of section 11, block I, R.M. Thompson Survey.

It appears there are no wells of comparable depth in the vicinity.

LOVING TRIO

Mobil Producing, Houston, plans to develop production in the Dimmit (Cherry Canyon) field. Three wells are planned for the field, which is not now being produced.

The three 6,800-foot projects are the Numbers 1, 2 and 3 W.D. Johnson et al. All will be drilled about 10 miles northeast of Mentone, in section 24, block 53, T-2, T&PRR survey.

No. 1 will be located 1,980 feet from the north and west lines of the section.

No. 2 will be located 1,980 feet from the north, and 660 feet from the west line of the section.

No. 3 will be located 1,980 feet from the south, and 2,210 feet from the east line of the section.

It appears there are no wells of similar depth in the vicinity of this trio.

MIDLAND EXTENDER

Texaco Inc., Midland, will try for a ninth producer in the Sweetie Peck (Ellenburger) field, 22 miles southwest of Midland.

The No. 1 June T. Sanders, a plug-back from the War-Sand field, is scheduled for 13,229 feet.

The location is 660 feet from the south, and 606 feet from the west line of section 10, block 41, T-4-S, T&P survey.

MITCHELL WASH DOWN

Russell Exploration & Production Co. has scheduled the No. 1-B Solomon Finch as a 7,493-foot re-entry wildcat, 18 miles northwest of Colorado City.

The project is located 1,799 feet from the north, and 710 feet from the west line of section 72, block 97, H&TC survey.

The original well was drilled by Thomas W. Dowsett et al No. 1 Solomon "B", plugged May 18, 1950. No information was available on the plugging.

MITCHELL EXTENDER

Texas International Petroleum Corp., Oklahoma City, will re-enter for plug back the No. 8 Edwin Parks, currently located in the two well Dixon (Ellenburger) field.

Scheduled for completion in the 14 well Dixon (Strawn) field, the site is 660 feet from the north, and 760 feet from the west line of section 2, block 1-A, H&TC, and is five miles north of Silver.

PECOS EXTENDER

Mobil Producing Texas & New Mexico Inc., Houston, will plug back for a completion attempt in the Delaware formation the No. 3 Ivy B. Weatherby, currently in the Wolf-camp formation.

Scheduled for 7,050 feet, the project is located 1,500 feet from the south, and 480 feet from the west line of section 20, block 48, T-8, T&P survey, and is 20 miles northwest of Fort Stockton.

The Rojo Caballos (Delaware) field currently contains four producing wells.

The site is approximately one mile from Texas Gas No. 1 Cross, a 7,200-foot project, which topped the Delawere at 5,250 feet. It was dry and abandoned Feb. 5, 1961.

PECOS SEARCHER

Kimball Production Co., Houston, will clean out to the old total depth, and test as a wildcat, the No. 7 University "17", 14 miles east of Fort Stockton.

Planned depth is 8,100 feet. The site is 1,320 feet from the south, and west line of section 17, block 23, University Lands survey.

The original well was drilled by the Ralph Lowe Estate as the No. 1 University and plugged and abandoned April 20, 1972. No other information was available.

WARD TENTH

Pecos Operators Inc., Midland, will drill the No. 48 Quito Unit "A" as an attempt for a tenth producer in the current nine well Quito (Delaware sand) field.

The project, scheduled for 5,200 feet, is located 990 feet from the northeast, and 1,650 feet from the southeast line of section 196, block 34, H&TC survey.

The site is surrounded by production in the Quito field.

YOAKUM WILDCAT

Petro-Lewis Corp., Lubbock, will drill the No. 2 Bowen et al, as a 9,300-foot wildcat, 13 miles northwest of Denver City.

The project is located 1,950 feet from the north, and east line of section 663, block D, John H. Gibson survey, and is in an area which apparently which has not been explored.

Alaska's second arctic oil field near production

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (AP) — The second large oil field on Alaska's oil-rich North Slope is expected to begin production by the middle of next month, pumping millions of dollars of additional revenue into the state's treasury, oil company officials say.

Arco Alaska Inc., which holds a majority interest in the vast Kuparuk field 28 miles west of Prudhoe Bay, said the field could begin producing 80,000 barrels daily by Dec. 16. The company projects the field eventually will produce 250,000 barrels every 24 hours. The Prudhoe field is producing about 1.5 million barrels a day.

"Worldwide, it's a great field, but it's going to take a lot of wells and a lot of facilities to develop it," said Bill Van Dyke, the state's petroleum manager. "It's maybe twice as big as Prudhoe in area, but developing it will be a much slower and costlier process than at Prudhoe."

With the current wellhead price of $24 per barrel, the state's one-eighth royalty share will add up to about $250,000 daily at the field's start-up rate of 80,000 barrels daily, Van Dyke said. Arco estimates the life of the field at between 20 and 30 years.

Rand Corp. figures show the Kuparuk field as the nation's ninth-largest in total reserves, containing an estimated 4.4 billion barrels of oil — with 400 million to 1.3 billion barrels recoverable.

Arco officials said the company already has 700 employees on the 20-acre production site and anticipates investing $450 million in the first phase of the field's development.

"The size of our effort at Kuparuk will be much the same as our effort at Prudhoe, except that there we're lifting (pumping oil) about three times as much as we'll be lifting here" at Kuparuk, said Arco engineer J.J. Pawelek.

Since beginning the field's development in 1979, Arco has drilled 40 wells on five lease tracts in Phase 1 of the field's development, and the company projects more than 200 square miles eventually will be covered by the Kuparuk operation, with 362 producing wells and 354 water injection wells on 50 drill pads.

About 30 wells are scheduled for next year, company officials said.

Arco Alaska President Paul Norgaard said the field will need water injection pumps from the outset. That process allows water into the field to force oil toward producing wells when the natural pressure and production rate declines.

The Prudhoe Bay field, which recently produced its 2 billionth barrel of oil, is expected to need water injection by 1984. Prudhoe is estimated to have nearly 8 billion barrels of oil remaining after 4 1/2 years of production.

Norgaard said without the expensive water injection, the Kuparuk field would only produce 13 percent of the oil in its reservoir.

"We have a lot to learn about the area, but I would guess we will get more than one billion barrels, but less than one and one-half billion barrels," Norgaard said. "I'm optimistic. I believe we might exceed 30 percent (recovery), which is the average for the United States."

Arco's major partners include BP Co., Sohio Alaska Petroleum Co. and Union Oil Co. of California.

Americans still angry over Canadian oil policy

By STANLEY MEISLER
(c) 1981, Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — It has been a year since Canada announced its intention to put at least half of its oil industry in Canadian hands by 1990, but time has not tempered American anger. If anything, Americans have bristled even more over the months, and there is increasing talk in Congress and among Reagan administration officials of retaliation against Canada.

"If this were some banana republic or something," said a staff member of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee, which has been the most vociferous critic of Canada, "I suppose then you would say the investor should know enough to beware. But this is Canada. Is Canada like Libya now?"

"If a developed country like Canada can get away with these things, how can we look developing countries in the face? ... If this were Chad or Gabon, who cares? But it ain't."

In another interview, a U.S. official who watches Canadian affairs closely tried to make it clear that the United States believes Canada has a responsibility to behave in a way more in keeping with its image.

"It's as if all the little guys get four strikes in a ball game," he said, "and this big guy comes along and says, 'I want four strikes, too, because I'm not so good.' If we allow Canada to have a fourth strike, what do we say to the other developed countries?"

But, in the view of R. Donald Pollack of the Science Council of Canada, American officials are really more worried that Canada is following the restrictive investment policies of countries like Norway and Britain.

"The name of the game," he wrote in a recent article in a Toronto newspaper, "is to deter Canada from successfully emulating other industrialized countries."

It is obvious that Americans do not want Canada to go the way of other foreign countries, whether developed or not. Much of the American rhetoric reflects a sense of frustration and betrayal. American investors and businessmen have been welcome in Canada for so long that this foreign country to the

DEATHS

E.T. Branham

SAN ANGELO — Services for E.T. Branham, 70, of San Angelo, brother of Mrs. Otto (Mertie) Floyd of Midland, will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Harris Avenue Baptist Church with Dr. J. Earl Dunn, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in Lawnhaven Memorial Gardens under the direction of Johnson Funeral Home.

He died Sunday in a San Angelo hospital.

Branham was born July 17, 1911, in Millersview. He had lived in San Angelo the last five years. He was an independent oil operator before his retirement. He was married to Marine L. Harris. She preceded him in death in 1969. He was married to Ruth Dorbandt Ware in 1970, in El Paso.

He was a member of Harris Avenue Baptist Church. He carried the mail from San Angelo to Sterling City in 1932. He worked from time to time as a cowboy on various local ranches. He worked for the West Texas Utilities Co., Shell Oil Co., and at one time as land man for Richard King of the King Ranch.

He went into business for himself as an independent oil operator in Vernon. He was active in the Palomino Riding Club in Vernon. Branham was a charter member and deacon of the Vallecito Baptist Church near Durango, Colo.

Other survivors include his wife, a son, two daughters, a stepdaughter, a brother, three other sisters, seven grandchildren, three step-grandchildren, six great-grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

Theodore Greene

GLENNPOOL, Okla. — Services for former Midlander Theodore Roosevelt Greene, 77, will be at 1 p.m. Tuesday in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. John Crawley, pastor, officiating. Burial will be in the Bixby, Okla., Cemetery, directed by Huff Funeral Home of Whitesboro, Texas.

He died Saturday in a Sherman, Texas, hospital after an illness.

Greene was born June 9, 1904, in Bolivar, N.Y. He was married Aug. 30, 1951, to Florene Cantelou in Odessa, Texas. He was a lease broker for an oil company.

Survivors include his wife; a son, John Edward Greene of San Antonio; five sisters, Pearl Veaty of Longview, Texas, Gladys Black and Mary Vowell, both of Glennpool, Alice Noon of Whitesboro, and Dorothy Clack of White Oak, Texas; five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Brooks Evans

Graveside services for Brooks Evans, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel W. Evans IV, of 4401 Erie Drive, were to be at 10 a.m. today at Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Roy Carley, associate minister of First Baptist Church, officiating. Services are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Evans died Friday in a Midland hospital.

Survivors include his parents; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Evans of Richmond and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Timms Jr. of Midland; and his great-grandparents, Mrs. Claude Johns of Dublin, Mrs. Jack Lane of Meridian, Georgia Walker of Van Horn and Albert Timms Sr. of Morgan.

Ruby Williamson

FORT WORTH — Services for Ruby Lee Tapp Williamson, 71, of Fort Worth, sister of Viola Lynch of Midland, were Friday in the Mount Olivet Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Cabel Roberts officiating. Burial was in Ashcreek Cemetery in Azle.

Ms. Williamson died Wednesday. Other survivors include five sons, a daughter, another sister, 18 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Pope John Paul II is surrounded by a huge ground in a Rome suburb Sunday during a visit to a parish church. The pope told the crowd that emigration has become a worldwide social problem and that economic and social rights of guest workers must be protected.

Family bitter about man's death after hospital release

DALLAS (AP) — The family of a 71-year-old man with chronic lung disease is bitter about his death, which came 12 hours after Parkland Hospital discharged him and 142 other patients because of a power failure.

Charles Black collapsed and died on his front porch, the day after doctors at Parkland decided he was well enough to go home.

"The doctors could have at least sent him to another hospital. They rushed him out," said Black's sister Elma Broadnax. "He didn't even have time to get his billfold and other belongings. They told me I could get them Monday."

Dr. Joy Robertson said her patient might have lived if he had remained in the hospital. But she added that Black's lung disease was so advanced he had "only six months to live anyway, at the most. It was our medical judgment he was better, so we released him."

She said the hospital could provide little help for Black's condition. "We weren't really doing anything special for him," she said. "He had bad, bad lung disease. It was just a matter of time."

More for foreign aid?

It seems a little contradictory that spending on foreign aid would be increased during a time of serious domestic economic problems. Yet that is exactly what the Senate voted to do recently.

Like it or not, Americans should face up to the fact that foreign aid is important to the United States' relationships with other nations. And we have an unwritten obligation as the most humanitarian nation on this planet to help others less fortunate than ourselves. For the most part, we have accepted that obligation ungrudgingly.

But coming on the heels of the biggest budget cuts in the country's history — $130 billion over the next three years — the Senate's approval of a foreign aid bill totaling $5.7 billion in 1982 appears a bit ridiculous. The bill represents a 17 percent foreign aid spending hike over the $4.9 billion level set in last year's measure.

U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who voted against the foreign aid bill, said, "I find it hard to believe that Congress can cut a wide chunk out of the domestic aid program for its own citizens, and then turn around and expect those same citizens to foot the bill for a substantial increase in foreign aid spending."

The bill means American taxpayers are expected to pay an additional $850 million in foreign aid this fiscal year. That action is not consistent with the direction the nation has been moving the past several months.

This nation has been more than generous with other countries down through the years. In the 1940s and 1950s, the Marshall Plan pumped billions of dollars into European nations ravaged by the war. We helped them rebuild their industries and restore their economies. Those actions were part of the obligation Americans feel for the world community.

West Germany and Japan are prime examples of the United States' generosity. Both countries now have successful economies and provide stiff competition for the United States on the world market.

The task facing the United States now, though, is to put its own economic house back in order. The nation's economy is laboring under the effects of a massive federal deficit and staggering inflation. Americans have agreed to suffer through the painful processes required to put the United States' economy back in order and to exercise future fiscal restraint.

As Sen. Bentsen pointed out, "At a time when we have serious domestic economic problems. At a time we have substantial federal deficit. At a time when we're forced to make cuts in domestic programs — this is no time to be voting to increase the aid we provide to foreign countries."

We couldn't agree with the senator more.

What a way to travel!

Congratulations to four intrepid souls who braved the vast Pacific and its snowstorms and jet streams to become the first to soar in a balloon from Japan to United States.

Their Double Eagle V helium balloon drifted over the coast near Bodega Bay after a 6,000-mile flight across the ocean. The last part of the trip was fraught with danger. Socked in by a cloud bank, which prevented the balloon from heating up properly, the four were forced to jettison much of their ballast to keep the Double Eagle flying.

The ballooning from Japan idea is not unprecedented. During World War II the Japanese turned 9,000 balloons loose. They carried fire and anti-personnel bombs. About 1,000 made it to the United States, killing six people in Oregon and starting several forest fires.

The Double Eagle flight was purely a peaceful mission, however. The commander, Ben Abruzzo, 51, and crewmen, Larry Newman, 34, and Ron Clark, 41, all are from Albuquerque. Abruzzo and Newman were on the first trans-Atlantic balloon flight in August 1978, in Double Eagle II.

The fourth man on the Pacific flight is Rocky Aoki, 43.

During the latter stages of the flight, the balloon — tall as a 26-story building — was scooting almost 100 miles an hour on the jet streams. What a way to travel!

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Small battle is microcosm of rebels' war

WASHINGTON — If some latter-day Homer decides to pen the history of the Russians' war in Afghanistan, the siege of Tamiir would hardly be his centerpiece. Epic it is not.

Yet the battle for this little crossroads town in southeastern Afghanistan is, in its own modest way, typical of the peculiar war being fought by a super-power and its satellite army against ill-fated, poorly equipped native tribesmen. My associate Peter Grant witnessed a brief, inconclusive episode in his strange contest.

The Ajax of the siege of Tamiir is a genial former schoolteacher called Malm Shokour. Unfortunately, his military skill did not match his courage. When he fired a captured SAM missile at a Russian helicopter, the $40,000 rocket landed in a nearby field, barely missing his own men.

The Tamiir garrison, which had been encircled by the guerrillas for three weeks when Grant arrived, consists of some 800 Afghan army troops and 20 Soviet advisers. Their only means of supply is Russian MI-8 helicopters, which fly in usually about twice a week.

My roving correspondent had already watched two Russian gunships exchanging fire with the besiegers as he and his two Mujahidin guides hiked the last couple of miles across the rocky desert toward Tamiir. That should have been it for a day or two.

But no sooner had he arrived in the deserted mud village than the two choppers returned on another foray.

"Men lunging around the courtyard grabbed their rifles and dashed out," Grant reported. "Shokour picked up a SAM hand-held, ground-to-air missile — a weapon the Mujahidin supposedly did not have."

Grant's host led him to an inner room and told him to wait there. The sound of battle was comfortably distant — except for one loud explosion, which my associate assumed was a rocket fired at the village by one of the helicopters.

The choppers finally left, and Shokour returned. "Smoke was rising from a nearby field, and I asked Shokour if that was from the rocket I had heard land so close," Grant reported. "He grinned sheepishly. 'No,' he said. 'That was my missile.'"

"He explained that his unit, which was in charge of air defense, had the Mujahidin's one ground-to-air missile, which had been captured from the Russians. For weeks they had been preparing to use it. But Shokour didn't fire it properly, and the SAM landed in the field near his own troops."

Grant spent a week with the besieging "army" around Tamiir. It was an instructive lesson in Soviet tactics.

"One night, after a particularly bad dinner of bread, oil and grapes, the mujah in command of the Mujahidin's night fighters visited the group I was staying with," Grant wrote. "He spoke animatedly for 15 minutes with Abdul Rasheed, whose unit had two mortars and a recoilless rifle — most of the rebels' heavy guns."

The mujah wanted Rasheed to wipe out some Communist machine-gun nests that had killed one of the night fighters and wounded two others.

"So early the next morning we loaded the recoilless rifle on the back of a donkey and set off. We worked our way through wheatfields, ditches, irrigation canals and farmyards to within 200 yards of the enemy strong point. The machine guns fired at us only a few times."

Rasheed positioned the bazooka in a partially destroyed house, aiming it through a hole punched by a Soviet tank shell. Before he commenced firing, Rasheed poured water on the dirt floor to avoid kicking up dust that would give away their position.

"What a joke that turned out to be," Grant reported. "The first shot kicked up more dust than a camel stampede. I braced myself for the return fire from the tanks, mortars and artillery we knew were in the fort."

But the only return fire was from the machine guns that were the guerrillas' targets. "For half an hour we picked off machine-gun nests without any response from their heavy guns," Grant reported. He was told later that this reluctance of the Soviet-led troops to commit their clearly superior equipment is characteristic of the Afghan war. For whatever reason, the Russians have chosen to fight the war on a shoestring.

PUN INFORMATION: My recent report on the humorous headlines sometimes included in the State Department's daily news summaries for the president drew response from an alumnus of the pun-loving summary soldiers of Foggy Bottom, Douglas H. Jones. He recalled that the "Seventh Floor Regulars" — that is, the secretary of state and his top aides — didn't always appreciate the attempts at levity. Two efforts that made it to the White House anyway, he remembered, were: "Echeverria Gets a Soviet Pat on his Aspirations," and "Japan: Conservatives Still Out for Miki's Mantle."

WATCH ON WASTE: "Join the Navy and See the World," the old recruiting posters said. But no one thought of enticing landlubbers to "Join the Navy and Read a Book" — until PACE came along. That's "Program for Afloat College Education," an ambitious, if ungrammatically titled, scheme to provide college courses to seagoing personnel. But the program, which cost $4.2 million in a recent fiscal year, has experienced an unusually high failure-drop-out rate. Besides the normal academic problems, Pentagon auditors noted that higher education on the high seas suffered from "attractiveness of liberty in some ports."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Nov. 16, the 320th day of 1981. There are 45 days remaining in the year.

Today's highlight in history: On Nov. 16, 1933, the United States and Soviet Union established diplomatic relations.

On this date: In 1941, Nazi Germany launched its second unsuccessful assault on Moscow during World War II.

In 1968, the Soviet Union announced it had launched the world's largest spaceship to date, the Proton IV.

In 1977, the Shah of Iran left Tehran for a meeting with President Carter, saying he'd work actively against an increase in oil prices.

And in 1979, eight people, believed to be Iranians, were arrested outside Washington, D.C., for carrying high-powered rifles, ammunition and a street map of the capital.

CHARLEY REESE Stronger U.S. military essential

Sometimes, because I pick on pacifists and disarmament nuts, people think I am some kind of gung-ho jingoist who would like to play in the band while the boys march off to war.

That's not so. Like most professional soldiers, I despise war. As Ernie Hemingway said, all war is a crime against humanity but there are some things worse than war and they all come with defeat.

Anybody with common sense knows that war and preparation for war are an enormous waste of human and material resources. Building a bomb is not a good investment. All of that labor, resources, and capital are merely going to explode and thus be subtracted from the available wealth in the world.

But there are two problems with most pacifists and disarmament nuts. One, just because something is horrible doesn't mean it's impossible. So long as there are other nations which prepare for war and which view war as a legitimate means of accomplishing political goals, then we have only two choices: prepare to defend ourselves or accept surrender with all the bad consequences that follow.

The second problem is realizing that inanimate objects like bombs and guns do not cause wars. These are effects, not causes. So long as you focus your attention on effects instead of causes you will never be successful. That's why in the long, sad history of the world, no treaty or diplomatic agreement has ever prevented a war.

Wars begin inside the heads of human beings. What we have to fear from the Soviet Union is not their missiles, but the thoughts inside the heads of the men in the Kremlin. Those thoughts created the missiles and the warheads; those thoughts will launch them if they are ever launched.

When you understand that, you get a clearer picture of the difficulty. Until you can change the thinking of the men who run the Soviet Union, you are spitting in the wind. A realistic person who looks at the kind of society the men in the Kremlin have created cannot be optimistic that they really have any scruples whatsoever about launching a war and killing several million Americans.

What kind of person will order people shot for wanting to move from one country to another? What kind of person will sentence a man to seven years of hard labor for reading a poem in a public square? What kind of man will order poison to be sprayed on villagers in Afghanistan and Laos? What kind of man will order the execution of millions of his own fellow citizens for the "crime" of believing in a different system of economics and politics? What kind of man will deliberately starve seven million Ukrainians, shoot 10,000 Polish officers in a forest, build a wall to keep people inside a country?

Too many Americans, often those in government even, indulge in wishful thinking. They allow their fear to color their thoughts. They simply do not wish to face the evil of, which there is overwhelming evidence, for to do so would destroy their illusions about the prospects of avoiding war.

This wishful thinking, this refusal to face reality, is the cause of our present unpreparedness. Now that the government has gained some slight modicum of realism, you see frightened people running around railing against our defense buildup as if an attempt on our part to defend ourselves, and not the evil and malice in the Kremlin, is the threat to peace. That's like trying to destroy all the cancer-treatment machines and rugs to prevent cancer.

Until the men who control the Soviet Union change their thinking to respect for human life, we have no choice but to prepare for war. The change in philosophy necessary for peace will not come from demonstrators, politicians or diplomats. It can only be brought about by a religious experience.

So, unless you can get to the men in the Kremlin and convert them, you'd better support stronger military buildup than even President Reagan is proposing because to date the only thing which has kept the Soviet missiles in their silos is the fear of our ability to strike back. As the military balance changes, that restraint will be eroded.

INSIDE REPORT:

Stockman's budget-balancing change worries supply-siders

WASHINGTON — Even as word spread Tuesday (Nov. 10) that David Stockman seemed to have destroyed himself with his own tongue, he failed in another bid to deflect Ronald Reagan from his stubborn convictions.

Reagan rejected language prepared for his news conference by Stockman's Office of Management and Budget (OMB) that would have repeated the follies of the last generation by trying to balance the budget through tax increases. Stockman had lost the fight for the president's mind to his closest political friend, Rep. Jack Kemp. Their tattered alliance was further torn that same day with disclosure of Stockman's quotes in the December Atlantic Monthly.

It was Stockman's 35th birthday. The events unfolding that day belied the conventional wisdom that the Reagan Cabinet's best and brightest member is wise beyond his years. Rather, it suggested politically juvenile behavior in undervaluing and betraying both his compatriots and his leader.

"The Education of David Stockman," William Greider's Atlantic article, illuminates the backstage developments preceding Tuesday's presidential press conference. Those quotes suggest that the president's budget director pushed so vigorously for drastic change in the Reagan economic program because he had not really believed in it for a long time.

Kemp, who last year promoted Stockman for the budget post to get a genuine supply-sider in the Cabinet, until he read those quotes could not fully believe his friend was abandoning the cause. As recently as the evening of Nov. 1 in Kemp's suburban Bethesda, Md., home, they talked tax-politics for hours. Kemp decided they were not really so far apart.

On Nov. 4, however, the gap widened when Stockman conferred on Capitol Hill with House Republican leaders. Kemp asked Stockman how anything could be served by taking money out of the private sector through higher taxes; if those taxes diminish the pool of private savings, financing the debt becomes all the harder.

Stockman responded with the sarcasm that has antagonized liberal Democrats in Congress all year. He told his friend: Jack, why don't you just repeal all taxes then, and finance the debt wholly through bonds? Kemp's face went ashen.

Other Republicans at that meeting were taken aback when Stockman suggested he would in the long run win the fight for budget-balancing through taxes. Even if the president decided otherwise now, Stockman implied, higher taxes eventually would be essential. His implication was that the wunderkind surely knew a lot more than the ex-movie actor twice his age.

Reagan himself was present two days later, on Nov. 6, when Stockman met with the House Republicans at the White House. Kemp argued heatedly that the Reagan-Kemp 10th tax cuts ought to be accelerated, not delayed. In following Stockman's advice early this year and delaying the tax cut for budgetary reasons, said Kemp, the president had bought big deficits and recession. Further delays, he said, would mean more of the same.

At that point, presidential chief of staff James Baker asked Stockman to respond. Stockman warned of ruinous budget deficits on the horizon. Later that day, however, the president told a friend that Kemp's linkage of Stockman's tax delay and the economic recovery's delay was compelling.

Stockman had lost, but not surrendered. The OMB-prepared answer for Reagan's news conference called for tax increases in fiscal years 1983 and 1984 if accompanied by spending cuts. Instead, the president asked Kemp to compare tax increases to additive drugs.

Stockman's persistence was explained by the quotes he gave Greider, suggesting private disillusionment with supply-side tax cuts months before they were in place. When he was read some of those quotes while on a one-day speaking tour Tuesday, Kemp was stunned. Nevertheless, that night he telephoned Stockman, at a Washington restaurant celebrating his birthday, to reaffirm their friendship.

But when Kemp read the full article Wednesday morning, he was shattered to find Stockman revealing to Greider that he had been maneuvering to keep Kemp "happy" so that supply-siders could not mobilize against dilution of the tax bill. That is precisely what Kemp's aides and advisers have been telling him all year, and precisely what he has rejected as an unfair indictment of his friend.

The theme here is one of betrayal, which some of Stockman's erstwhile allies have come to consider as recurrent through his career. Greider suggests that in moving from supply-side economics to orthodox budget-balancing, "perhaps Stockman was only starting into another intellectual transition. He had changed from farm boy to campus activist at Michigan State, from Christian moralist to neo-conservative at Harvard." Stockman himself Tuesday night worried that he was about to be labeled Judas Iscariot.

His inconstancy tended to fulfill the prophecy by one of Washington's most astute lobbyists who in February predicted the high-flying Stockman would last no more than a year at OMB, certainly not for want of ability but for defects in character. That failing has undone many in Washington and it brought the Reagan Cabinet's brightest light close to that fate on his 35th birthday.

Interview money was for charity, Japanese magazine says

TOKYO (AP) — The Japanese magazine that paid $1,000 for an exclusive interview with Nancy Reagan "understood in advance" that some of the money would be given to a charity by the White House, one of the magazine's senior editors said.

Richard V. Allen, President Reagan's national security adviser, has acknowledged he received the money that magazine editor Katsura Ishizuka called a customary honorarium.

Allen's role in the affair is being investigated by the Justice Department.

He said he did not solicit the money but "intercepted" it to avoid embarrassment to the Japanese reporters or Mrs. Reagan.

Allen said he locked the envelope full of cash in a safe and forgot about it until it was discovered by others.

"It was understood in advance that some of the money would be given to a charity by the White House," Ishizuka told The Associated Press in a telephone interview Sunday.

His statement indicated the White House knew in advance that the magazine Shifu-no-Tomo — Housewives' Friend — was prepared to pay an honorarium for the exclusive Jan. 21 interview with Mrs. Reagan.

Ishizuka, a director and general manager of the magazine, said such payments are customary among Japanese newspapers. The practice has been sharply criticized in the United States as "checkbook journalism."

First word of the payment came in a report Friday by the Japanese newspaper Mainichi Shimbun that said Tokyo police had investigated a payment to an unidentified top White House official. The Reagan administration then acknowledged Allen was the recipient.

Mainichi, quoting Japanese police reports, said a magazine editor who was present at the interview with Mrs. Reagan heard someone utter the word "honorarium?" as the first lady was leaving the room after the session.

Hearing that, the editor presented a company envelope containing money to a man she thought was an aide to Mrs. Reagan, but she did not know whether the man was Allen, Mainichi said.

Ishizuka said the decision to make such a contribution and the amount were agreed upon beforehand in a meeting of Shifu-no-Tomo's editorial staff. He said they settled on the total based on the time spent arranging the interview, the fact that Mrs. Reagan was taking time from a busy schedule to be interviewed, and the importance of the story, which ran in the magazine's March issue.

White House spokesman Mort Allin said there would be no comment on Ishizuka's remarks. The White House said Saturday it would "refrain from additional comments on this subject" while the investigation was under way.

The New York Times today quoted administration officials as saying there is no plan to ask Allen to step down during the investigation, but they added that position could change if a special prosecutor is appointed. But the unidentified officials said that question had not been specifically considered yet.

President Reagan, arriving in Washington from a trip to Texas, said he planned no changes in his administration.

Ishizuka said the interview with Mrs. Reagan was conducted by Fuyuko Kamisaka, a well-known freelance journalist who often writes for the magazine, and Chizuko Takase, who he said is an acquaintance of Allen and acted as interpreter.

CBS News quoted Takase late Sunday as saying that when the interview was first discussed before the election, Allen said no gratuity would be accepted. Takase said the magazine insisted on renewing the offer after the election.

Denying any impropriety, Allen said Saturday that he did not arrange the interview but did pass on the original request to others "for evaluation, handling and decision."

Cocaine conviction to be appealed

SEVIERVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Attorneys for a Lubbock, Texas, man who was convicted of helping smuggle $200 million worth of cocaine into Tennessee say their client was not participating in the scheme.

Charles Leslie Kageler Jr. was found guilty Saturday by a Sevier County Criminal Court jury of possession of cocaine with intent to deliver. He was acquitted of a second count of cocaine possession with intent to sell.

Kageler received a 10-year sentence, the minimum under Tennessee's Class X crime law. He could have received a life sentence. His lawyers say they will appeal the verdict.

The 24-year-old Lubbock man admitted that he co-piloted a Beechcraft Queen Aire 86 which landed at the Sevierville-Gatlinburg Airport on March 23 with 613 pounds of cocaine from Colombia, South America.

According to Federal Drug Enforcement Administration officials, the cocaine, with a street value of more than $200 million, was one of the largest amounts ever confiscated in the United States.

The plane, with the cocaine inside, was seized by Tennessee Bureau of Investigation agents, but after the occupants fled.

The man Kageler said piloted the plane, Clarence Dennis Newell, 51, of Kemah, Texas, also was charged in the case. No trial date has been set for Newell.

Authorities are searching for Kageler's father, Charles Leslie Kageler Sr., 47, and Gerald Hemp, 42, of Gatlinburg, whom they believe may have masterminded the plan.

Hemp and Kageler Sr. face federal income tax charges in the case. Authorities believe the pair may be in another country. Agents saw the two at the airport after the plane was seized, but they haven't been seen since.

The charges against the younger Kageler hinged on whether he intended to commit a crime when he took part in the scheme.

Knoxville lawyer Bob Ritchie and Lubbock lawyer Clifford Brown say Kageler idolized his father and trusted him without question.

Kageler testified during the four-day trial that his father told him he made a living smuggling weapons to anti-communist guerrillas in South America. He said his father told him the smuggling trip was a weapons run, but he became alarmed and confused en route when Newell told him the cargo was cocaine.

District Attorney General Al Schmutzer said Kageler knew he was breaking the law when he flew the plane into Sevier County.

Ritchie said the appeal of the conviction would be based on Judge Ken Porter's decision to admit the plane's cargo as evidence and the judge's refusal to let the jury hear sympathetic testimony from a Knoxville psychologist.

Concern spreads over fires

SALTSBURG, Pa. (AP) — Officials of this sleepy hamlet, on edge all year because of a dozen arsons, are asking for state and federal help following the suspicious blaze that destroyed an historic building.

"We're trying to get a state or federal grand jury (to look into the fires)," Mayor-elect Gary Taylor said as word spread of Sunday's fire at the lockmaster's house on the old Pennsylvania Canal.

"With a grand jury's involvement, we can compel testimony for an arrest and conviction," he said. "Our own police resources are limited."

The 150-year-old, two-story combination store and house was on the state register of historic places and under consideration for federal recognition, according to the local historical society. Officials of the society had planned to spruce it up.

The vacant, wooden building was just behind the Saltsburg Lumber Co., which itself has survived two arson attempts; in all, 12 fires of suspicious origin have hit Saltsburg, population 1,000, since Jan. 1 when a whole row of businesses were destroyed at an estimated $1 million in damage.

Among the suspicious fires: a building owned by the borough's library was burned in February; last spring, a former police chief's cruiser was set afire; a store window was blown out by high-powered fireworks; a vacant building was set ablaze; and two attempts were made on the lumberyard.

Look-alike drugs government target

By JEFFREY MILLS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government investigators are moving against a new type of mail-order scheme, the sale of "look-alike drugs" that are easily mistaken for amphetamines and other illegal pills.

Twenty-six companies have agreed or have been ordered to stop mailing the products and about 40 more companies are being investigated, said postal inspector Ned Friece.

Friece produced pills, sent by one of the companies, that looked exactly like the picture of amphetamines in a standard reference book. The pills of the same shape, size and color are sold to those who can make a substantial profit by reselling them to inexperienced drug users.

The pills contain caffeine and several other legal ingredients, Friece said, and "someone who hasn't used amphetamines can take one, get only a little effect and work up to four or five at a time."

If that person then buys real amphetamines, he can very easily take too big a dosage.

In addition, the surrogate drugs can be dangerous themselves, especially in large doses. They are blamed for some strokes caused by blood flowing too heavily through the brain, Friece said.

The Drug Enforcement Administration cannot move against the counterfeit drugs because it has authority only against illegal substances.

The Food and Drug Administration, which regulates legal drugs, has accused nine manufacturers of making counterfeit drugs. "But we are the only agency that has put much of a dent into this business," Friece said. "If they use the mail, we can go after them."

Number of traditional households declines

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — An explosion in the number of households of single or unrelated people has reduced the proportion of married households to fewer than three of five for the first time, new Census Bureau statistics show.

This growth of non-family households has been a growing phenomenon in the past decade, jumping 84 percent in the 1970s, noted census statistician Steve W. Rawlings.

A new Census study released Sunday reported that as of last March households including married couples had declined to 59.8 percent of all U.S. households, down from 69.3 percent a decade earlier.

During the same period non-family households grew from 19.5 percent to 26.8 percent of American households, the study said. The rest were households of related but unmarried people.

Boosted by soldiers returning from World War II, the married share of households peaked at 78.2 percent in 1950. Since then, the percentage of married couples among households has declined steadily. Only a month ago, final 1980 Census figures put the share at 60.8 percent.

And the study noted that the decline has taken place despite the fact that married couple households had, in real numbers, the largest increase of all family types in the last decade. Their increase of 4.6 million households amounts to 10.2 percent, but at the same time households which did not include families skyrocketed 84.7 percent. Non-family households included both single people living alone and unrelated people living together.

The report also said the increase in non-family households, most of which include only one person, contributed to a decline in the country's average household size from 3.14 people in 1970 to 2.73 in 1981.

"Proportionately, one- and two-person households constitute 54 percent of all households in 1981 versus 39 percent in 1955," the report added.

Another recent study by Rawlings attributed this change to "the increasing incidence of young adults leaving their parents' homes to live independently and increases in separation and divorce (that) have resulted in the fragmentation of individual households containing several people into two or more separate households containing, on average, fewer people."

And while married couples were making up an ever smaller share of households, couples with children recorded an actual numerical decline of 2.4 percent between 1970 and 1981.

Married-couple families with their own children under 18 totaled 25.5 million in 1970 but declined to 24.9 million by last March, according to the statistics.

At the same time, the number of women alone with children under 18 jumped 97.1 percent to 5.6 million, and men alone with children under 18 climbed 95.3 percent to 666,000.

FDA approves country's first hepatitis vaccine

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration today approved the nation's first vaccine against hepatitis B, the debilitating liver disease that strikes hundreds of thousands of health workers, homosexuals, drug addicts and other Americans each year.

The vaccine, which has proved safe and highly effective in clinical trials, is the first ever made directly from human blood and the first new viral vaccine introduced in this country in a decade, said FDA Commissioner Dr. Arthur Hull Hayes Jr.

The vaccine, called Heptavax-B, was developed by Merck Sharp & Dohme of West Point, Pa., and will be on the market in mid-1982.

Dr. Maurice R. Hilleman, Merck's senior vice president for research, and associates began working on the vaccine in 1970 and the company began studying mass production last January. The manufacturing process will take 65 weeks, Merck President John A. Lyons said.

Lyons said the complexity and the cost of obtaining human blood plasma from people who have contracted hepatitis B will make the vaccine expensive, about $75 to $120 for three shots over six months.

Hilleman said its protection lasts at least five years, and Hayes said the three-shot regimen has not produced any significant side effects.

Hayes said the vaccine promises not only to safeguard health workers and others from hepatitis B, but possibly from liver cancer as well.

"This vaccine, although very important, is not for general, population-wide use," Hayes said. "I want to make clear that not everyone needs to take this vaccine."

Will vetoes help Reagan?

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the normal course of government, the president proposes and Congress disposes. But that's turned around when Congress passes something the president doesn't want, and he decides to dispose of it with a veto.

He generally wins.

The scorecard through history: Presidents have vetoed 2,389 bills; Congress has overridden 92 of them. It takes two-thirds of the House and two-thirds of the Senate to override a veto, which accounts for the landslide.

A fresh face when he came to town, Democrat Jimmy Carter vetoed 31 bills and a Democrat-dominated Congress topped him twice. A veteran of the legislature who entered the White House, Republican Gerald R. Ford rejected 66 acts of a Democratic Congress which whipped him 12 times.

Now, with congressional control split, President Reagan is threatening to take up the veto pen against any bill that would bust his austerity budget.

"I stand ready to veto any bill that abuses the limited resources of the taxpayers," Reagan said at his news conference last week. Most of the appropriations bills being considered by Congress, he added, "are above budget, the budget that we set," and "I will not stand still for budget-busting bills."

The odds are solidly on his side; the likelihood is that any veto overridden by the Democratic House would be sustained in the Republican Senate.

Democrats used to accuse Ford of governing by veto, but his statistics pale by comparison with some of his predecessors.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, the only president to serve more than two terms, vetoed 635 bills in just over 12 years in the White House. Harry S. Truman followed with 250 and Dwight D. Eisenhower 181. And, before FDR's day, Grover Cleveland vetoed 584, which got him the nickname "Old Veto."

New blood renews traditions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago you ran an article about a woman who never cooked her own Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner. Instead, she went to her mother's or her mother-in-law's. She wrote to say that she wishes now that she had done her own holiday dinners.

That letter was terrific. If you could publish it again, it would be a great help to a lot of people.

I am a grandmother who wishes my married children would cook their own holiday dinners and invite me as a guest! — PAID MY DUES

DEAR PAID: It wasn't hard to find, and here it is. DEAR ABBY: I've been reading your column for years, and around holiday time someone always asks, "Should we go to his mother's or to my mother's for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinner?" Your answer has always been: "Why not alternate?"

Abby, my husband and I struggled with that problem for years. We resolved it according to your suggestion. Both sets of parents lived nearby, and it seemed the only fair thing to do. So, for 22 years, we spent Thanksgiving and Christmas in their homes instead of our own.

It never dawned on us until this year — now that our children are ready to strike out on their own — that we never developed our own holiday traditions. We always went to Grandma's for the holidays. She insisted on doing all the cooking herself, then complained for months about how much work it was and how tired she got. When we, her daughters and daughters-in-law, asked if we could bring something for dinner, she wouldn't hear of it. When we brought food without asking her, she refused to serve it, so we finally gave up.

I realize now what a high price I've paid over the years for peace in the family. I wish I hadn't.

Abby, please urge young marrieds to dare to have their own holiday celebrations in their own homes. Suggest that they invite their parents and grandparents, who might even be relieved to be finally free of the burden of entertaining three generations. — DOING MY OWN THING

DEAR DOING: Thank you for an excellent letter. Perhaps it will inspire others to do their own thing, too.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that I see only Planned Parenthood mentioned in your column? Why don't you ever mention natural family planning? It is the only method of birth control that has no bad side effects.

Please be fair and answer this in your column. — FOR NATURAL FAMILY PLANNING

DEAR FOR: In order for the natural family planning method to be absolutely foolproof, the couple must recognize indicators of fertility, chart their symptoms and abstain from all marital relations during the fertile phase of the cycle.

Very few women are able to calculate their "safe" periods reliably. Women who miscalculate are called "mothers."

DEAR ABBY: This is no joke, so please give us a serious answer. Our son is a "Junior," named for his father. He is 35 years old, married and divorced twice, the father of four legitimate children, and three (that we know about) who aren't legitimate. He has made a mess out of his life and has given us plenty of headaches.

Needless to say, our son's reputation is terrible and his credit is lousy. His creditors are always getting my husband mixed up with him because his name is the same and he doesn't always add the "Jr."

My husband would like to change HIS own name for this reason. Can it be done? — NAMELESS, NATURAL-LY

DEAR NAMELESS: Yes, He may change his name as long as his intent is not to defraud.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 12060 Hawthorne Blvd., Suite 3000, Hawthorne, Calif. 90250.)

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Goodies for grandma

DEAR HELOISE:

A great gift idea for a grandma or grandpa-to-be or for someone who has no children at home but has occasional visits from them? A cheerily decorated box filled with things for children.

A small rattle, a box of colored pencils, coloring book, small box of modeling clay, plastic truck and doll, foam ball for safe indoor play, set of plastic dishes, a few decks of game cards like rummy and fish, a few small books with animal and other simple children's stories.

All items make a minimum of mess and cleanup and are ideal for a small apartment or house.

The box can be kept in a closet or under a bed and pulled out and used when needed. For outdoor use, you could add bubble soap and a pail and shovel. — Mrs. Ellie Bires Great idea! By having varying toys so there's something for every age level, all visiting youngsters should be very content. — Heloise.

BAKED POTATOES

Dear Heloise: Cut large potatoes in half lengthwise before baking them and you'll lessen the baking time.

Simply rub the cut surface with shortening or whatever.

The resulting taste will thrill and delight you, as well as save you money on your fuel bill. — Louise Wigal

SOFTENING BUTTER

Dear Heloise: I find when I'm ready to bake and need softened butter or margarine, I can take it directly from the refrigerator and grate it as one grates cheese.

This makes mixing it with other ingredients very easy. It softens quickly and mixes well. — Ann Van Hoene

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: Place a ball of household string or twine in a one-pound coffee can.

Punch a hole in the plastic coffee lid and thread the string or twine through the hole. The string is always ready, clean and untangled. — Robert Dill

GAS CAP

Dear Heloise: My husband has lost dozens of gas caps due to leaving them on the gas pump while filling the car at a self-service station.

I was determined that this would never happen to me so, when I pump my gasoline, I always put the cap on the front seat of my car.

You can't drive off sitting on a gas cap! — June

GLOVE TRICK

Dear Heloise: My right glove always wears out before my left because I'm right-handed.

When this happens, I save the left glove. When another pair loses its right hand, I retrieve the left-handed glove from the previous pair, turn it wrong-side out and have a good right hand glove.

Lies can do it visa versa. — Jane Older

SAFETY GIFT

Dear Heloise: When buying Christmas gifts this year, put "nightlights" on your list.

They are great safety aids in halls, stairways, bathrooms and bedrooms. Just think, your gift could prevent an injury. — Dennis Curry

Send your favorite household hint or gift idea to Heloise, P.O. Box 32000, San Antonio, Texas 78216. She can't answer your letter personally, but, sure as snow leads to making snowmen, she'll use the best tips received in her column.

Retired principal leaves mark on playground

FAIRLAND, Ind. (AP) — Retired school principal John Tresslar is still an educator as Johnny Mapmaker, King of the Blacktop.

Tresslar, 52, spends his spare time painting brightly colored drawn-to-scale maps on elementary school playgrounds. The Fairland man views it as a working hobby, but says the maps provide a good geography lesson for students.

The maps, which have been painted at 35 elementary schools in Indiana, Florida and Ohio, can teach students the names and locations of states and state capitals, said Tresslar.

They can also be utilized through games which teachers develop about historical events, he said, explaining they can show their pupils where the Battle of the Alamo took place by pointing to it on the mammoth black-top map.

Wearing a pair of white overalls with a red, white and blue cap, Tresslar produces his maps using the same methods as other artists. He applies the paint with a 1-inch-wide paint roller, pours the paint in a wheeled paint tray, starts with the outlines and then travels to the interior.

Tresslar retired two years ago from Triton Elementary School in Fairland, where he first got the idea of using playground maps.

A recent painting session at Henryville Elementary School, funded by the school's parent-teacher association, will cost between $350 and $400.

Ron Lanoni, a former teacher at Tresslar's school who is now principal at Henryville, says the maps are a good investment.

You look at the cost of that and start looking at playground equipment," Lanoni says. "A swing set for seven children can cost between $700 and $1,000. And a lot more kids can use the maps and games."

Tresslar says he lays out his maps according to the proper compass points and draws them to scale. On the U.S. map, excluding Hawaii, each foot represents 100 miles. On the map of Indiana, each foot represents 20 feet.

Hawaii, the nation's 50th state, isn't drawn to scale, Tresslar said if he drew it to the same scale as the continental United States, the islands would be too small to see.

Hope Masters and 'A Death in California'

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Hope Masters has known for some time that her neighbors whisper about her.

She knows that they remember a long-ago weekend of murder in the Sierra Nevada foothills and wonder if she was guilty even though she was cleared.

"I made the sad discovery that people want to believe the worst," says the striking young woman with socialite credentials who was charged with murder after her boyfriend was slain and she was raped and held captive by an assailant with a strange past.

The charges were dismissed, but the Hope Masters' case made headlines. People, she says, remember the charge more than the dismissal or the ultimate conviction of her captor.

"I think 90 per cent of people who know about it believe I was guilty — not necessarily of the shooting, but of something," she says.

Now, eight years after the nightmare, Hope Masters is telling her side of the story. If people are going to talk, she says, they may as well know her version of what happened.

"A Death in California," the book written for Ms. Masters by author Joan Barthel, is the story of that weekend in February 1973 which brought murder and notoriety into her life, and changed her forever.

It is also about a bizarre bond that grew between the victim and her sweet-talking, cunning captor — a man she now calls the personification of evil, the devil in disguise.

It is a book which leaves many unanswered questions, and Ms. Masters agrees that readers "will be left hanging, just like I am."

The facts which raise the questions are these: Hope Masters, a Beverly Hills divorcee with three children, and her boyfriend, advertising man Bill Ashlock, left her children with a housekeeper and drove off for a weekend at her parents' remote Sierra ranch near Porterville.

She came back. Ashlock did not.

He was found days later at the ranch, shot through the head. Ms. Masters was arrested at her mother's Beverly Hills mansion. Later, an escaped convict named G. Daniel Walker also was arrested after he used Ashlock's credit cards. Walker was convicted of the killing and charges against Hope Masters were dropped. She testified against him at the trial — somewhat reluctantly.

She says that Walker, posing as a newspaper reporter, connived his way into the ranch, took pictures of her and Ashlock, won their confidence and left. That night, she says, he returned, shot Ashlock, raped her and convinced her he had a Mafia contract to kill her and her children if she didn't cooperate.

She stayed with him through three days, returning to Beverly Hills, telling no one that Ashlock was dead at the ranch. Eventually, she told her mother and father who called police. But it would be months before she identified the killer.

Ms. Masters offers few explanations of her behavior other than to say she was afraid that Walker would kill her and the children.

"I don't think I did anything that any other mother wouldn't do in the same situation," she says.

She adds that the killing of Ashlock was so irrational that she believed the story of a Mafia contract — "There was no other reason for anyone to kill Bill" — and that she was being watched every moment.

Since the killing, Ms. Masters says, she has been "trying to climb out of the hole I was in physically and mentally." At one point, she says, she weighed 76 pounds, "and had the symptoms of a person who'd been hit by a car." Her children also had traumatic after-effects.

Now, she says, the book is the focus of her life. "I want to clear the air, talk about something everyone's talked about behind my back for years." She has a movie deal, and she seems convinced that reviving the case will help her solve the puzzles that remain, the unanswered questions which flaw the book.

There are things nobody will ever know about Walker," she says, but insists she has told everything she knows.

Frank Serpico: A case of unwanted parenthood

NEW YORK (AP) — Former policeman Frank Serpico is described as a cold-hearted cad by the woman accused of plotting to make him a father. When his feminist lawyer tells it, Serpico shines as an advocate of sexual equality.

At age 45, the man whose expose of corruption in the New York City Police Department became a best seller and a hit movie is involved in a court battle over the right of men to avoid unwanted parenthood.

SERPICO, who retired from the force in 1971 and moved to Europe, claims he should not have to pay support for the child he fathered because he was used as "a sperm bank" by a lover who lied about taking birth control pills.

"I don't care if people call me a cad," Serpico said in a telephone interview. "There are a lot of women who get left in the lurch, but this is not one of those cases."

A Family Court hearing resumes Friday to determine whether a flight attendant identified only as "Pamela P.," the mother of Serpico's 18-month-old out-of-wedlock son, is financially able to support the child alone.

Judge Nanette Dembitz ruled Oct. 1 that testimony showed Serpico was tricked into fatherhood, and that Pamela therefore did not have an inalienable right to child support. But the judge said Serpico might have to pay some support if it is proven the child is suffering financially.

If the judge rules he must pay, Serpico said he might appeal — or he might refuse to comply with the judge's order. "I'm willing to go to jail if I have to for my principles," he said.

Serpico's lawyers include feminist Karen DeCrow, a former president of the National Organization for Women, who has long advocated equality for men as well as women.

Ms. DeCrow said that because of Supreme Court rulings allowing abortion, "Women have the right to choose parenthood. That right has never been extended to men until this case."

THE RULING that might let men off the financial hook if they are tricked into fathering a child would not apply in cases where a couple used a birth control method that failed, said Alan Levine, Ms. DeCrow's co-counsel. "The

One witness testified that he broke up with Pamela several months before the child was conceived because she wanted him to father a child out of wedlock. When he refused, he said, she told him she would have Ser-not. Serpico maintains that Pamela and the baby "are not in a poverty situation ... One of the reasons I broke it off with her in Switzerland is because she wanted to live like I was a Hollywood star or something."

Pamela said she is seeking child support because "I'm not a wealthy woman. It's not for me — I'm not asking for pity money," she said. "I'm not asking him to empty out his pockets to me or become a pauper."

"I've been offered money by some publications to have (the baby) photographed, but I'm very protective of him. I'm not going to parade him in the press."

The case has made waves among feminists. Ms. DeCrow has received "an enormous favorable response from feminist lawyers ... who are thrilled with the forward-thinking decision."

But others are not as pleased. "If he (Serpico) were that opposed to having children, he could have said 'no' or chosen to be sterilized," said Marjory Fields, co-chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Domestic Violence.

"There is always a danger of conception," said Ms. Fields. "This case is almost a classic anti-woman presentation: that women seduce and entrap men with their feminine wiles." Ms. DeCrow said some women "need to always believe that the man is the villain. In this case, the man is the victim."

Despite the image many people have of him, "Frank Serpico is absolutely not macho," she said. "He is a kind, gentle, sensitive person who espouses many ideas about equality between the sexes."

But answered Pamela's lawyer, Stephen Harnick: "If he were so sensitive and concerned about the possibility of conception, there are a half dozen things he could have done, including abstained."

"I don't care if people call me a cad. There are a lot of women who get left in the lurch, but this is not one of those cases."

decision is rather narrow," said Levine. "It applies in those circumstances where deceit can be proved."

Pamela lived with Serpico in Switzerland in 1973 and 1974 and after that saw him about once a year, the judge said.

Serpico's lawyers said that on the night the child was conceived in 1979, Pamela told him she was "on the pill." Pamela conceded in court that she was in her most fertile phase when the conception took place, but said there was no discussion of birth control.

pico father her child, whether he chose to or not. The court found that blood tests indicated Serpico fathered the baby, who was born March 15, 1980. Serpico has conceded only that he might be the father.

"If he showed up at my door one day, I'd treat him just like any other child," said Serpico. "I would say, 'What do you need? Are you hungry?' In Europe, I had little children coming to my farm just to talk."

In a telephone interview, Pamela denied the allegation "that there

Gospel singer Eddie Maultsby Jr. lives on

ATLANTA (AP) — Three years ago, Eddie Maultsby Jr., a frail 15-year-old suffering from an incurable disease, predicted he would die at 18.

But now that the blind gospel singer will celebrate his 19th birthday on Wednesday, he's revised his goal.

"I want to go to about 80, but I expect it'll be somewhere in my 20s," said Eddie, who was stricken at age 11 with sarcoidosis, a chronic disease of unknown origin which causes deadly tumors to grow inside the body.

IN REMISSION now, the disease has left him blind and suffering from ulcers, and has damaged his liver, kidneys, lungs and heart.

"If, five years ago, you had asked me if Eddie would be alive in 1981, I would say, with the disease that he has and the damage he has, I would say he would not be here," said Dr. Jorge Vidal, a St. Petersburg, Fla., pediatrician.

"I believe that God keeps him alive, not me. I don't take credit for that," he said. "Without his belief in God, I am sure that he would be dead. You can call that a miracle."

Eddie Maultsby Sr., lead singer and founder of a Hawkinsville-based Southern gospel group called The Spiritualaires, said his son is alive because God answered his prayers and the entreaties of thousands of fans and supporters.

Several years ago, Maultsby said his ex-wife, Mabel, called him in South Carolina, where The Spiritualaires were to perform, to tell him doctors had given up hope for his son.

"I CAN remember hanging up the phone, going into the bathroom and crying and getting on my knees and praying to God," he said. "I said, 'I'm out here on the road, singing for you. My son is dying and I want to see him alive again.'"

"And I could feel like a vibration, a chill go from my head to my feet like electricity and I felt then that he would be all right. And sure enough, here he is today."

Eddie Jr., who has maintained a 3-foot, 68-pound body since he contracted the disease, said he first realized he was not well when he experienced sight problems in elementary school.

"It got real blurry and I couldn't hardly see the words on the chalkboard at school. I'd ask somebody what one word was and then it'd clear back up and I could read," he said.

By age 12, he was blind and the disease had spread through his body. About three years ago, his condition began to stabilize.

BUT EDDIE still has the fatal disease, and eventually he will die from the tumors that lie dormant in his body, Vidal said.

Meanwhile, Eddie says he is doing what he really wants to do — singing with his father in his five-member band which plays the black gospel circuit of Florida, Alabama, Georgia and

Original 'Jane,' Enid Markey, dies

BAY SHORE, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Enid Markey, who portrayed the character Jane in the original "Tarzan of the Apes," has died of a heart attack, officials said.

Miss Markey, whose career spanned six decades and also embraced the stage, radio and television, died Sunday at Southside Hospital, according to John Schell, a friend of the silent film star.

The actress, born in Dillon, Colo., before the turn of the century, never revealed her age.

Besides appearing in the Tarzan film in 1918, she worked with William S. Hart in "The Darkening Trail" in 1915, and also appeared in talking films, such as "The Boston Strangler" and "The Naked City."

She began her Broadway career in the 1919 show "Up in Mabel's Room," and later appeared in "Morning's At Seven" in 1939 and with Helen Hayes in "Happy Birthday" in 1946.

Schell said Miss Markey had no surviving close relatives and a private funeral was planned.

A helicopter of the Hessian state police has landed on the highway passing by the Frankfurt International Airport Sunday afternoon in an effort to remove the thousands of demonstrators who blocked the roads leading to the airport terminal. The demonstration and blockade had been organized to protest the construction of a third runway. According to police, more than 100 policemen were injured in the clash.

Riot police battle airport demonstrators

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Riot police used water cannons, teargas, helicopters and tow trucks Sunday to rout nearly 4,000 demonstrators who built barricades and set them afire to protest construction of a new runway at the airport.

Officials at Rhine-Main International Airport said air traffic was unaffected and the main terminal was calm during the seven-hour protest, but guards locked all side doors, allowed only ticketed passengers in the main entrance and closed the popular observation deck.

Demonstrators, some wearing helmets and masks, hit police with stones and tree limbs. Authorities gave no figures, but witnesses said dozens of police and demonstrators appeared to be injured and that hundreds of demonstrators had been taken away in police vehicles.

Outside, protesters trying to block access to the airport parked cars and dumped tree limbs on access roads and staged sit-ins on main highways leading to the terminal. The subway system leading from downtown to the airport was shut down after demonstrators climbed on the tracks in stations underneath the airport, authorities said.

Police said several thousand demonstrators also converged in a forest near the runway construction and pelted police with gasoline bombs, stones and sticks. Police lobbed teargas grenades and shot water cannons back at the protesters, officials said.

Officials flew in riot police by helicopter to break up groups of several hundred demonstrators blocking roads. Police trained water cannons on the demonstrators and hauled parked cars away with tow trucks, officials said.

Police said they had no immediate reports on the number of people arrested in the clashes but said traffic was clogged for several miles around the Frankfurt Autobahn just outside the airport.

On Saturday, about 100,000 people marched through nearby Wiesbaden to protest the runway construction and request a local referendum on the matter. After officials rejected that idea, runway opponents vowed to besiege the airport on Sunday.

Opponents contend the new runway, the airport's third, will harm the environment and cause the destruction of hundreds of thousands of trees in nearby forests.

Supporters of the runway say it is necessary to ease the crush of traffic at the airport, one of Europe's largest and most heavily used.

The airport handled 17 million passengers last year.

Two weeks ago officials cleared a "squatters' village" built of log huts and tents, from the construction site. Several days of violent demonstrations followed that police action.

A spokesman for the U.S. Rhine-Main military air base, which shares runways with the Frankfurt civilian airport, said the base was open and traffic was operating normally.

Runway opponents have contended that the U.S. military is backing the new construction, but U.S. officials say it is a strictly domestic issue.

South Korea proposes cultural exchange with North Korea

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Extending a new olive branch to hostile North Korea, South Korea today proposed North-South exchanges of cultural exhibitions and joint sponsorship of similar projects overseas.

The proposal by Lee Kwang-Pyo, South Korea's minister of culture and information, was reminiscent of the ping pong diplomacy of the late 1960s that opened the door to political ties between Communist China and the United States.

Lee was keynote speaker at the first National Convention of the News Media, sponsored by the Yonhap News Agency, at the Sejong cultural center in downtown Seoul.

About 300 president-publishers, managing editors and news directors of the country's newspapers and radio-television stations attended the first of what is scheduled to be an annual conference of Yonhap subscribers. The agency was inaugurated last Jan. 1, following the merger of the Hapdong news agency and Orient Press.

Lee told the meeting there is a "rising tendency in Western societies to look to oriental cultures for an antidote for the spreading sense of crisis gripping materialistic civilizations."

He said northeast Asian culture has developed continuously, "especially in the three countries of Korea, China and Japan, which constitute a single broad cultural sphere."

Lee said South Korea is willing to cooperate in any way to promote joint academic research and archeological explorations by all northeast Asian countries.

"I wish to take this occasion to put forward an official proposal to the North Korean authorities to exchange research data and to conduct exhibitions and joint academic studies on ancient Korean culture."

He said it was "most unfortunate" that differences in ideologies and political systems have prevented South and North Korea from having any cultural contact since the peninsula was divided after World War II. North Korea has been Communist ruled since 1948.

Senegal, Gambia to unite

PARIS (AP) — Senegal and Gambia, the tiny African country surrounded by Senegal on three sides, decided over the weekend to form a confederation to be known as Senegambia, according to reports reaching Paris today.

The agreement followed a recent visit by Senegal President Abdou Diouf to the Gambian capital of Banjul. The two nations announced plans for a loose union three months ago and then worked out details that will be presented to their parliaments for approval.

The two West African nations will remain sovereign, the agreement says, but will integrate their security and communications systems. They will also form an economic and monetary union and coordinate foreign policies.

Senegal, a former French colony, is a nation of 5.3 million on the West African bulge. Gambia, a former British colony with a population of 600,000, is a strip of land 10 miles wide that extends like a finger 200 miles into Senegal's interior.

Some form of integration between them was first proposed 20 years ago but became inevitable following the intervention of 1,500 Senegalese troops to put down a Marxist-led coup July 30 against Gambian President Sir Dawda K. Jawara, who was in London attending Prince Charles' wedding.

Senegal intervened under a 1956 mutual defense treaty that allows it to send troops if its national security is endangered by events in Gambia, whose only military resources are a 600-man police force.

Diouf said in an interview with The Associated Press Sept. 7 that the union would be completed by Jan. 1, 1982. He is expected to be president of Senegambia and Sir Dawda vice president.

A Paris newspaper quoted Amadou Cisse, Senegal's ambassador to France, as emphasizing that the two nations continue to exist as separate entities and that "Gambia remains a sovereign state for everything that has not been confederated."

Germans seeking emigration from U.S.S.R. were arrested for staging demonstration

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Eight ethnic Germans seeking to emigrate from the Soviet Union staged a brief demonstration in Red Square today and were quickly arrested by police.

The demonstrators gathered in front of Lenin's mausoleum just before the changing of the guard at 9:00 a.m. local time — 1 a.m. EST — and pulled protest placards from their coats.

Less than 30 seconds after the signs came out, the Germans were seized by plainclothesmen who materialized out of a crowd of about 50 gathered to watch the changing of the guard ceremony.

One sign written in German said, "Let us go to our homeland."

Dissident sources said those arrested — three men, four women and a small child — had applied to emigrate to West Germany but had been refused permission. It was not known whether criminal charges would be brought against the Germans who were whisked away in a police van.

The Volga Germans demonstrated to call attention to their plight before the Nov. 22-25 visit to Bonn by Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, dissident sources said.

One of the plainclothesmen angrily knocked down a man, who appeared to be a Soviet tourist, when he attempted to photograph the event. Police did not interfere with West German and U.S. correspondents who witnessed the detentions.

There are about 2 million ethnic Germans in the Soviet Union, and according to Western sources, about 100,000 want to emigrate. The current emigration flow among the Germans has reportedly fallen from 300 a month last summer to nearly none now.

The Germans first settled along the Volga River in the 18th century during the reign of Catherine the Great, but were moved inland en masse by Soviet leader Josef Stalin during World War II.

Terrorist 'Carlos' is back in action

LONDON (AP) — The Venezuelan-born international terrorist "Carlos" is "back in action" after disappearing six years ago, organizing covert operations for the Syrian government aimed at overthrowing the Iraqi regime, the London Sunday Times reported.

The newspaper said "Carlos," born Ilich Ramirez Sanchez and also known as "The Jackal," has been seen in Beirut, Lebanon. The newspaper did not say where reporters Christopher Dobson and Ronald Payne had obtained information for the article.

"Carlos" vanished after allegedly masterminding the 1975 storming of an OPEC meeting in Vienna, Austria. Three people were killed and 11 oil ministers were held hostage.

The Sunday Times said "Carlos," now 32, is "considered too old for active operations," but runs "a network of agents and disaffected Iraqis under the orders of Brig. Gen. Ali Khader, responsible for Syrian secret service forces plotting against Iraq."

The report did not make clear where "Carlos" is supposedly based, but said he travels weekly to Sabryah, a Kuwaiti town near the Iraqi border "where he meets couriers from Baghdad, receives reports and passes on new instructions."

The report added that "Carlos" is also thought to be involved in "operations to threaten" exiled opponents of Syrian President Hafez Assad in Europe.

It also said "Carlos" organized the January 1976 hijacking to Entebbe, Uganda, of an Air France jetliner whose 148 passengers, most of them Israelis, were freed by Israeli commandos.

The article alleged "Carlos" began working for Syria after a falling out with his previous "paymaster," Libyan leader Col. Moammar Khadafi.

Last May, a leading newspaper in Caracas, Venezuela, claimed that police believed "Carlos" was in his homeland. Police would not confirm or deny the report by El Nacional.

The Venezuelan paper quoted unidentified sources as speculating that "Carlos" was plotting an attack on Third World representatives who met near Caracas to discuss economic cooperation within the Group of 77, a loosely-organized bloc of developing countries.

The conference, held under heavy security, took place without incident.

Scraggly clumps of desert chaparral surround what is to become the space shuttle's West Coast home on the sprawling Vandenberg Air Force Base in California. Parts of the complex, built more than a decade ago, are being remodeled and expanded as a second launchpad for the shuttle, a site from which the reusable spaceship could be sent off in different directions.

West Coast shuttle home coming to life

By ROBERT LOCKE
AP Science Writer

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — The military's dream of an orbiting space laboratory is at last coming to life here amid scraggly clumps of desert brush in a $2 billion facility that will be the space shuttle's West Coast home.

Parts of the complex were built more than a decade ago in the arid, rolling hills along the Pacific Ocean. But now it is being remodeled and expanded as a second launch pad for the shuttle, a site from which the reusable ship could be sent off in different directions than from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

To welcome the shuttle home from those flights, the Air Force is adding 7,000 feet to its 8,000-foot runway on this sprawling space-and-missile-oriented base 165 miles north of Los Angeles.

In 1985, if construction and funding go as planned, the shuttle Discovery, now in early stages of construction, will be the first orbiter to be launched here, said Lt. Col. Aubrey Sloan, deputy commander of Vandenberg's Shuttle Test Group.

SLOAN SAID the site, though on military property and under military control, will handle both civilian flights and military ones, the latter to be known as "blue shuttle." Both types of flights will also originate from Cape Canaveral.

Vandenberg was chosen as the second shuttle site because its location allows the ship to be lofted over water and into a polar orbit. Launches from Cape Canaveral send the spacecraft into an equatorial orbit.

Because the shuttle dumps its booster rockets shortly after liftoff, a coastal launch site helps ensure the boosters don't fall on people or property. On the West Coast, Sloan said, "the solid rocket boosters will fall off about 160 miles south of us," where they will be retrieved and towed to the Navy base at Port Hueneme and reused.

The Vandenberg complex will cost more than $2 billion to build and, when completed, it will handle 10 shuttle missions a year — roughly a third of the expected launches, he said.

About 400 military and government workers and 4,000 contractor employees are working at Space Launch Complex 6, known on the base as "Slick Six."

The facility was originally built for the military's Manned Orbital Laboratory, a program canceled in 1969 before the site was ever used. The 30-story gantry — a metal building shaped like an upside-down "L" — stood deserted until the Air Force decided in 1975 that $100 million could be saved by remodeling rather than starting over.

Now the site is crawling with hard-hatted workers, trucks, machines and giant cranes. Great gray concrete buildings are spread in a dense cluster, with tons of concrete flowing regularly into red metal forms as service buildings, blast walls and control centers take shape.

The focus of the site is an almost empty spot where the shuttle will someday stand on its tail and, belching fire and smoke, thunder into the sky. Beneath the pad, three huge tunnel-like pits lined like bunkers with reinforced concrete will funnel the blast, flames and steam into the hillsides.

One booster remains in ocean

COCOA, Fla. (AP) — A snapped towline and rough, wind-whipped seas hampered the recovery operations of the space shuttle Columbia's two jettisoned rocket boosters, but one of the solid rocket cylinders has been pulled into Port Canaveral, officials say.

The other booster that helped propel the shuttle into space last week remained in the Atlantic late Sunday. Officials at the Kennedy Space Center said the second booster would be towed into port near here early today.

High winds accompanied by swells up to 20 feet delayed the recovery operations, which took place about 120 miles east of the Kennedy Space Center.

Officials said the first of the 93-ton, reusable canisters was tugged into Port Canaveral early Sunday evening.

The second booster is to be towed in about 6 a.m. today, said Sue Butler, a United Space Boosters Inc. spokeswoman. The firm is in charge of the recovery operations.

The first booster had been expected to be pulled into port early Sunday but the towline broke, she said.

"The weather was absolutely ghastly, but the towline is technically designed to snap at certain sections if excessive force, such as rough seas, is applied to the line," she said.

Recovery divers from the company attached air hoses into each booster to force water from the canisters so they could float more easily.

Once the boosters are towed into port, they will be taken to hangars near Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

The two boosters will be refurbished and refilled for use on the next shuttle launch, which is tentatively scheduled for March 1982.

The boosters splashed down into the Atlantic near Daytona Beach about seven minutes after the Columbia was launched.

Gale-force winds stir Lake Washington's waters on Saturday south of the floating bridge between Seattle and Mercer Island. A similar scene was repeated Sunday as a second major windstorm hit the Pacific Northwest.

Weekend storms kill 11, eight missing

By EDWARD MILLER
Associated Press Writer

Gale-force winds and rain battered the Pacific and Atlantic coasts again today, hampering efforts to clean up debris left by a weekend scourge of storms that killed 11 people and left eight others missing.

Seattle's futuristic Space Needle swayed in the brutal winds, briefly trapping eight people in an elevator inside, while a landmark of another age — the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse in North Carolina — was threatened by rampaging coastal waters licking at its base.

The Pacific storm raked northern California, Oregon, Washington and British Columbia on Friday with only small respite over the weekend, and forecasters today renewed warnings for residents to stay indoors.

ON THE ATLANTIC side, the weekend winds that came ashore from Florida to New Jersey headed north and out to sea but at angle that put New England in their path. The storm lashed New York's Long Island today with winds estimated at 70 mph, and caused major flooding from New Jersey to Maine, the National Weather Service said.

Flooding and seas of up to eight feet were predicted for large parts of the New England coast at high tide today.

Oregon bore the storm's fury all weekend. Winds were clocked at 90 mph on the coast and five people were killed. Three others were lost at sea off the coast of the state.

A 12-year-old boy in Portland who was being knocked from his bicycle from Florida to New Jersey headed north and out to sea but at angle that put New England in their path. The storm lashed New York's Long Island today with winds estimated at 70 mph, and caused major flooding from New Jersey to Maine, the National Weather Service said.

Eight people were stranded for an hour Sunday when the elevator of Seattle's skinny, 60-story Space Needle got stuck about 140 feet off the ground as the tower swayed in 50 mph winds.

"It was like walking on a motor boat," said Margaret Becker of Pomeroy, who descended from the monument with her mother shortly before three other relatives were trapped. "You could hardly stand up. It was spooky."

The storms crumbled roads, ate away beaches and led to power outages that left millions without electricity.

In North Carolina, the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse, depicted in hundreds of paintings and listed as a national landmark, was shored up with sandbags and hunks of debris from roadways for fear it would collapse into the surf, the National Park Service said.

"THE WATER IS TOO high to see how much beach has been lost," said Charles Compher, a spokesman for Cape Hatteras national weather station.

The 111-year-old lighthouse may hold up now that the storms moved north, the Park Service said.

On the state's Outer Banks, traffic resumed on highways that were swept away in parts.

A barge bound for Norfolk, Va., carrying 400 tons of liquid fertilizer broke away off the North Carolina coast Saturday and was still adrift today.

Off Chesapeake Bay, a 300-foot tanker barge with 25,000 barrels of liquefied asphalt remained aground near Smith Island, its crew of eight taken ashore on a Coast Guard cutter. A 400-foot sister barge with 70,000 barrels of asphalt was captured and towed to port.

No escape of asphalt was reported, although one of the ships leaked fuel for a while.

Capt. James Webb of the Port of Hampton Roads, Va., said the grounded barge probably would not break up because it was resting on a sandy bottom close to shore.

The National Weather Service said the West Coast storms were the worst since Columbus Day 1962.

Two people were killed in Oregon over the weekend when trees fell on their homes and a third died of an apparent heart attack while trying to get out of a crushed mobile home, authorities said. A man was killed outside Portland in a weather-related traffic accident.

Miami fighting crime with TV cameras

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Many merchants and residents pressing the authorities to do something about a crime boom say police television cameras being installed on the streets are brotherly — not "Big Brother."

"When we were laying out locations, merchants came and said, 'Please put a camera in front of my store,'" said police Maj. Fred Woolridge, who is in charge of the $230,000 federal project.

A command post with monitors staffed by police and volunteers is being set up to watch over this resort city's business district and fight the staggering rise in crime. It is connected by phone to the police.

Miami — just across Biscayne Bay from here — is one of the six Florida cities on the FBI's latest top 10 list of high-crime cities.

Workers last week began putting 112 camera boxes atop 25-foot-high traffic signal posts. Some of the boxes will be empty. The police will not say how many operating cameras there will be.

Some merchants and residents, many of them elderly and frightened, are pleading for relief and "are demanding that they be turned on now," Woolridge said.

The cameras will stand watch around the clock on a three-mile stretch of road where tourists shoppers are preyed upon.

The setup "preys on the paranoia of the criminal," Woolridge said. "He's not really sure where he stands, whether he's being watched, or he isn't."

Woolridge said he hasn't heard one complaint and says any comparisons with George Orwell's novel "1984" don't wash.

"In '1984,' we are talking about an oppressive government watching," he said. "In this case, the public is demanding a relief from the oppression of criminals."

"Twenty years ago, I'd have been run off the Beach for trying something like this."

In "1984," the government used cameras to monitor people in their homes.

Bennett Brummer, public defender for the 11th Judicial Circuit, including Miami and Miami Beach, said the cameras apparently are legal but "the question is what impact it will have on the freedom that we cherish in this society."

"It may be necessary, like being searched before going on an airplane or searched before going into a federal building. That's not the kind of freedom we're used to," Brummer said.

However, Bruce Winick, a University of Miami law professor who has worked with the American Civil Liberties Union, said he does not think the project violates civil liberties.

"I suppose symbolically it might smack of '1984,' but to my mind, the offensive aspect of that was that it occurred in the home. I suppose if this is a public street, there wouldn't be anything more wrong with it than other law-enforcement tactics," he said Sunday.

The program originally was to begin last summer but was delayed when Miami Beach City Attorney John Ritter expressed fears it might be an invasion of privacy. This month, he received an opinion from state Attorney General Jim Smith that the cameras would not violate privacy laws and installation began.

Any surgery contains elements of risk

Dear Dr. Solomon: My pediatrician has recommended a wait-and-see attitude before scheduling my daughter for a tonsillectomy. He has said, in effect, why look for trouble if we can avoid it. What kind of trouble is he referring to? Is having your tonsils out a dangerous kind of operation? — Mrs. D.M.

Dear Mrs. M.: Any surgery carries the potential for harm. In addition to the risk posed by anesthesia during tonsillectomy, the patient may be subject to uncontrolled bleeding and bacterial infections. Moreover, the surgery involves some degree of pain and may be psychologically upsetting to the patient. For these reasons, many doctors tend to delay an operation that used to be much more common. As your pediatrician says, why look for trouble if you can possibly avoid it?

Dear Dr. Solomon: I work next to a person who is always coughing, and I'm afraid it may be contagious. My boss says he has cystic fibrosis, and I shouldn't worry. Is he right, or is there something to worry about? — Steve

Dear Steve: Cystic fibrosis is a hereditary disorder and is not contagious. In a person with cystic fibrosis, the mucus, which is usually thin and clear, becomes very sticky. This, in turn, causes respiratory and digestive problems.

Coughing helps people with cystic fibrosis to clear their lungs. Since the condition is inherited, you can't "catch" it. You don't mention the kind of work you do, but, because of the nature of the disorder, people with cystic fibrosis should avoid working in places where dust, fumes, and smoke may irritate the bronchial tubes.

Dear Dr. Solomon: The last time I went for a thorough physical examination, my doctor told me that I had gallstones. This surprised me because they've never given me any trouble. He also said he does not recommend an operation. While I would not look forward to surgery, I don't like to neglect a situation until it becomes an emergency. Do you feel that neglecting gallstones is a good idea? — Mary, Detroit

Dear Mary: There are two points I must make: First, the fact that your doctor did not recommend surgery because you have gallstones does not mean he is neglecting them. He undoubtedly has made note of the fact, and will be aware of it should a related problem ever arise.

Secondly, if a person has gallstones that are not causing any trouble, it is often best just to leave them alone. In one study at the University of Michigan, over a hundred people with gallstones that were not producing any symptoms were followed for more than 15 years. Over one-fourth of these patients still had not developed symptoms by the end of that time. For those who eventually did have gallbladder surgery, it took about 10 years for symptoms to develop.

Under these circumstances, an attitude of watchful waiting should certainly not be interpreted as neglect.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Vietnamese refugees growing restless in cramped quarters

HONG KONG (AP) — When Vietnamese refugees began arriving here in 1978, they were put up on $40-a-day hotel rooms. Now they are kept in more cramped quarters that range from former army barracks to factory buildings with tiered bunks.

This, along with processing delays, is one of the reasons given by refugee officials for increasing despair and tension among the refugees now as they go through long waiting periods for overseas resettlement.

For two nights late in October, rioting broke out in the Jubilee Refugee Camp, leaving four persons injured. The camp is a restricted one; refugees are not allowed to leave and unauthorized visitors are not permitted.

The October incidents were sparked off by the transfer of about 850 refugees to the restricted camp from a government departure center where they had freedom of movement.

The transfer was made because the refugees' departure for the United States has been delayed following a U.S. decision to reduce refugee intake temporarily in order to clear up a backlog of processing work.

The Vietnamese complained of the loss of freedom and said there were being treated "like prisoners." Refugee-relief officials say they fear the slow resettlement program could lead to recurrence of the disturbances among the 16,700 refugees still in this British colony awaiting permanent resettlement.

These refugees are housed in seven camps and the cramped and primitive living conditions there have further aggravated discontent among them. More than 50 percent of them have been here for two years.

Maurice Morgan, chairman of the Red Cross Board which runs a refugee center here, said: "When you are living in such crowded conditions and are uncertain of your future, almost anything will make you despondent." He added, however: "I don't think the violence is too serious."

Deputy Security Secretary John Heywood, on the other hand, said Hong Kong will have to review its policy if overseas resettlement quotas are lowered and the flow of refugees from Vietnam continues.

He added that the government had revised its estimates of the number of refugees who would be left in camps at the end of year to 11,000 from 9,000.

Heywood claimed the October disturbances indicated that some refugees are only "economic adventurers," who have no feeling of gratitude to Hong Kong for offering them temporary asylum. He did not elaborate.

This was not the first time that Vietnamese refugees have resorted to violence. In June, 1979, after spending five months aboard the 3,500-ton freighter Skyluck, refugees among the 2,651 Vietnamese aboard severed the anchor in an attempt to beach the ship so they could land at Hong Kong.

When marine police launches tried to stop the ship from drifting, the refugees attacked them with firebombs and bottles. Four refugees were subsequently sentenced up to 2½ years' in prison on charges of rioting.

"Desperate people do desperate things," Hong Kong's governor, Sir Murray Maclehoze, commented at the time.

Important News For Smokers:

New Merit Research Released!

New survey results prove MERIT delivers in key areas of taste, ease of switch, and long-term satisfaction.

Rigorous new MERIT research proves it.

MERIT smokers confirm taste a major factor in completing a successful switch from higher tar cigarettes.

MERIT Switch Clicks.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers are glad they switched from higher tar cigarettes. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

2 Of 3 Smokers Prefer MERIT.

In the second part of this study, new tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Steve Macko
...cancer victim

Ex-M-Cub Steve Macko dies

By The Associated Press
BASEBALL—The Texas Rangers' first batboy, Steve Macko, succumbed to "baseball-sized" cancer tumors in his lungs, Joe Macko, Rangers equipment manager, said. A former Midland Cub, Macko, 27, a utility infielder for the Chicago Cubs, had been treated for cancer since last November. Steve didn't play in 1981, but appeared to be improving with chemotherapy, his father said. However, Steve was hospitalized last Wednesday after playing seven holes of golf, his father said.

Steve Macko, a 250 hitter in two seasons with Chicago, spent 1981 on the Cubs' disabled list but when he wasn't taking treatment, he was in uniform. "He suited out every day," his father said. "He took infield practice and sat on the bench the whole year. They (the Cubs) got permission from other teams because he was on the disabled list all year," his father said. Steve baffled doctors, his father said, by taking part in spring drills.

"All he thought about was baseball. That was his life. He was happy with the Cubs. Those were his buddies and he enjoyed being there. He grew up on the field while I was playing," said Macko, who played for the Cubs and the Cleveland Indians in the 1940s and 1950s.

The younger Macko was diagnosed as having cancer in October 1980 and began chemotherapy the next month. "He was getting well, up until about two months ago," Macko said. "The chemotherapy that he was taking just quit helping him."

Steve Macko is survived by his parents, two sisters and a brother, Michael, an 11-year-old Little Leaguer. "Mike is a pitcher," said his father. "and I might add he'll be a good one."

GOLF—South African Gary Player rallied in the final round to win the Tweed Heads, Australia, tournament by four strokes over defending champion Bob Shearer of Australia. Player fired a final-round 67 for a 72-hole total of 275, 13-under-par. Third-round leader Jack Newton of Australia had a final-round 73 and wound up tied for third at 280 with countryman Wayne Grady.

TENNIS—The American women's tennis team won its sixth consecutive Federation Cup title, beating Britain 3-0. In singles matches, Andrea Jaeger trounced Virginia Wade 6-3, 6-1 and Chris Evert Lloyd whipped Sue Barker 6-2, 6-1. Rosemary Casals and Kathy Jordan took the doubles, beating Wade and Jo Durie 6-4, 7-5. Robert Van't Hof defeated Pat Dupre 7-5, 6-2 in the final of the Taipei invitational.

AUTO RACING—Bob Earl, driving a Hayashi Toyota, led from start to finish to win the Macao Formula II Grand Prix, covering the 125.4-mile auto race in one hour, 20 minutes, 25.46 seconds. Naohiro Fujita of Japan, in a March Toyota, was second in the 28th running of the annual classic. Britain's Ray Mallock, driving a Ralt RT4, was third. Fujita completed 33 laps of the twisting 3.8-mile circuit in 1:20:38.27, almost two minutes ahead of Mallock.

HORSE RACING—Saturday's Races—Willy Wank, $25, edged Kiss Chris by a head to win the $28,625 Minuteman Handicap at Keystone Race Track... Signorina Cotton, $11.20, won the $30,625 first division of the Illinois Princess Handicap at Hawthorne by 3 1/2 lengths over Missy Melissa, and My Kachana, $20.40, edged a dead heat of Maylake and Nivin's Girl by a neck to win the second division... Saintly Haint, $15, beat Buns Luez by 2 1/2 lengths to win a $15,000 allowance race at the Meadows.

By HARRY ATKINS
PONTIAC, Mich. (AP)—Detroit placekicker Eddie Murray won the game with a 47-yard field goal as time ran out, but Dallas Coach Tom Landry felt that Lions' tailback Billy Sims had done the real damage minutes earlier.

Murray's kick sailed just over the crossbar to provide the Lions with a dramatic 27-24 National Football League victory over the Cowboys Sunday and quarterback Eric Hipple joyfully wrestled him to the ground shouting, "We beat America's team!"

HOWEVER, a stop-action videotape by Entertainment Sports Programming Network (ESPN) showed that the Lions had 12 men on the field when Murray made his winning kick.

Dallas had gone ahead 24-17 on a 14-yard pass from Danny White to Jay Saldi with 2:37 remaining in the game. On the first play from scrimmage following the ensuing kickoff, Hipple lofted a bomb which Sims gathered in all alone at the Dallas 41 and raced into the end zone to complete an 81-yard touchdown play — just 20 seconds after the Dallas TD — that tied it 24-24.

"WE WERE able to rally for one drive that had us in pretty good shape, but then we went and let them hit that long pass," Landry moaned. "They were lucky to call the right play against the right defense. We had a linebacker on Sims and that was no contest."

"We knew we had to stop Sims, but we didn't stop him all day long. That was our first priority, but we just didn't do it. He won it for them." Sims, who rushed for 119 yards on 23, carries to go over the 1,000-yard mark for the second consecutive year, also scored on a 3-yard run with 15 seconds remaining in the first half. Sims has rushed for 1,000 yards this season. "I was happy we got a break for a change," Sims said. "It seems like the type of breaks we got today have been going against us lately. We were ready for (the Cowboys) today."

DALLAS quarterback Danny White completed 20 of 30 passes for 244 yards and three touchdowns, but gave up two interceptions — both of which led to Detroit scores.

"Detroit was a fired up team today and their fans helped a great deal with all that noise," White said. "The noise made it impossible to hear the signals (especially from the shotgun formation). I finally had to move back under center."

White threw touchdown passes of 10 and 12 yards to Drew Pearson and Rapael Septien kicked a 43-yard field goal as Dallas built a 17-0 lead early in the first half.

HIPPLE threw a 6-yard touchdown pass to Mark Nichols and Murray kicked a 37-yard field goal in the third quarter to enable the Lions to tie the game 17-17 after three quarters.

The defeat left Dallas with an 8-3 record and dropped the Cowboys a game behind Philadelphia in the NFC Eastern Division. Detroit, which has won all its home games and lost all of its road games, is 5-6 and two games behind the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC Central.

"It's a credit to everyone on this team to come back and beat a club like Dallas," Hipple said. "We're a better team than our record shows."

Chiefs run over Houston

Kansas City springs 'Earl' on Oilers

By DOUG TUCKER
KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP)—The words quick, tough and great dominated conversations about Joe Delaney Sunday.

The shy, soft-spoken Kansas City rookie rushed for a team-record 193 yards — tops among all National Football League runners this season — and led the Chiefs to a 23-10 victory over the Houston Oilers.

"I've played against the best — O.J. Simpson, Gale Sayers, Walter Payton — and he's right up there with them," said Elvin Bethea, Houston's 11-year defensive end. "He's great with a capital 'G.' He's strong and tough and quick. We beat on him, and he took it. He kept getting up."

"I've really surprised myself," said the 185-pound rookie, who also became the first Kansas City runner ever to post five 100-yard games in a season. "I just wanted to come in and try to do my best."

Delaney, who has 920 yards for the season, scored on a 6-yard run to give the Chiefs a 7-0 lead in the first quarter which went to 10-0 in the second period on the first of three Nick Lowery field goals.

"John Reaves, whose first NFL start the week before ignited an Oilers victory over Oakland, started for Houston, but fared poorly. Veteran Ken Stabler relieved him in the second period and heaved a 50-yard touchdown pass to Kenny Burroughs early in the fourth period to trim the Kansas City lead to 17-10.

"Stabler had me scared," said Coach Marv Levy, whose Chiefs hiked their record to 7-4 and kept their playoff hopes alive. "It's 17-3, then he hits a long bomb and it's 17-10. You could just see the confidence oozing from him."

Lowery booted field goals of 12 and 38 yards later in the fourth period to nail down the victory. Kansas City's first in three games. The Oilers fell to 5-6.

Heading into the game, Delaney was third among AFC rushers. Houston's Earl Campbell was first with 1,000 yards. Campbell, who did not play in the fourth period because of a minor injury, finished with 99 yards.

"I told our team, 'If you hold Campbell to under 100 yards we'll beat those guys,'" said Levy with a smile. "I really did."

Mustangs remember oranges

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Four years ago Southern Methodist was in Fayetteville and the Mustangs were pelted by oranges from enthusiastic Arkansas fans.

The Razorbacks soundly whipped SMU and later went on to defeat Oklahoma in the Orange Bowl.

That memory burns deep this week for Coach Ron Meyer, who takes a talented, top 10 team to the Ozarks again. Only this time SMU can win its first Southwest Conference championship since 1968.

"SURE I remember that day when we were taunted by the fans," said Meyer. "But none of the players on our current team was there that day. We'll go up there to play hard because of our current situation not because of what happened four years ago."

The Mustangs can't go to the Cotton Bowl because of probation. Should they defeat Arkansas Saturday and Texas beat Baylor the Longhorns would receive the honor of being the Cotton Bowl's host team. Should Arkansas beat SMU and Baylor upset Texas then the Razorbacks would be in high cotton.

The Mustangs, who downed Texas Tech 30-6 Saturday, are 6-1. Texas Tech is 1-1 in SWC play with the Baylor match and a Thanksgiving Day meeting with Texas A&M still on the cards.

TEXAS WHIPPED Texas Christian 31-15 Saturday but apparently lost All America defensive tackle Kenneth Sims for the rest of the year with a broken leg.

Arkansas, which survived Texas A&M 10-7 in College Station Saturday, is 5-2.

Houston is 3-2-1, Texas A&M 3-3, Baylor and Rice each 3-4, TCU 1-5-1 and Texas Tech 0-6-1.

Arkansas also could go to the Cotton Bowl if it downed SMU and Texas beats Baylor but loses to A&M.

Now, should Arkansas lose and Texas lose its last two games, guess who would be in the Cotton Bowl IF they beats Texas Tech and Rice? Yes, the given-up-for dead Houston Cougars.

EVEN THE Texas Aggies are still alive should Arkansas lose, Texas lose twice and Houston lose AND the Aggies beat TCU and Texas.

Defending champion Baylor is no longer a threat after losing 17-14 to the Rice Owls in Waco Saturday. Those are the same Rice Owls picked for the cellar who have won three games under Coach Ray Alborn.

Besides the Baylor-Texas and SMU-Arkansas matchups this weekend, Texas A&M is at TCU and Houston hosts Texas Tech.

"This is what we've worked all year for and it will be a heckuva game," said Meyer. "It's hard going to Fayetteville but as far as I'm concerned not any harder than playing in College Station or the Astrodome or Austin or Texas Stadium."

The No. 8 ranked Mustangs are 9-1, their best record since 1948.

Detroit field goal kicker Eddie Murray hugs quarterback Eric Hipple, who held the ball, after game winning 47-yard field goal as time ran out on Cowboys Sunday.

Squib kick angers Perkins

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP)—Ray Perkins, head coach of the New York Giants, was furious.

"I don't know who the heck made that decision, but I'll find out," he fumed after the Washington Redskins dealt the Giants a 30-27 overtime victory.

Perkins was angry that placekicker Joe Danelo, who had been kicking into the end zone all day, intentionally squibbed the kickoff after the Giants' final touchdown, with 31 seconds remaining, gave New York a 27-24 lead.

The near-victory turned into an overtime loss, partially because of the short kickoff. Guard Darryl Grant returned the grounded kickoff 20 yards to the Redskins' 46-yard line.

(See Zachery, 2C)

Midlander back from CFL

Up in Canada the Grey Cup playoffs are in progress and the Montreal Alouettes are noticeable by their absence, although some thought they bought the trophy last summer from the United States.

So how could a team with so much imported talent fall so flat on its face? After all, didn't Vince Ferragamo lead the Los Angeles Rams to the Super Bowl a couple of years ago? Didn't Nelson Skalbania, who collects professional sports franchises like George Steinbrenner collects millionaires, pluck first round draft choice David Overstreet right out of the Miami Dolphins hip pocket before he ever played an NFL game?

And wasn't that Tom Cosineau, the NFL's No. 1 draft pick of a few years ago, at middle linebacker for the Als? And those are only the most prominent.

JAMES ZACHERY, in Midland for the Midland-Lee game Friday night, has some theories about what happened, especially since he just completed his second season with the Alouettes.

A former all-state linebacker at Midland High on his way to squeeze in a semester at Texas A&M before next season, said, "I tried to tell them, but they wouldn't believe me," referring to the failure of Ferragamo and Overstreet to dominate the league as they would. "It's a completely different game."

Unlike some of the Americans with the Alouettes, Zach wasn't lured north by money. A late round draft choice out of A&M, James reported to the New York Jets for summer drills in 1980, had a good camp and wound up as the last player cut.

"It was a case of too much experience ahead of me. Then, too, when you aren't a low round draft choice, you don't enjoy any special privileges or benefit from any special patience. They have heavy investments in the first and second round draft choices, and will give them a chance to adjust and prove themselves.

"If you are a late round pick, you are fighting for your life from the start and when it comes to roster cutting time, they'll tend to stick with the experienced player."

SO WHEN Montreal beckoned, James reported. "Like most Americans I went up there figuring I'd show those people how lucky they were. I had a rude awakening. It's not the same game we play."

"The field is larger (12 yards wider and 30 yards longer), defensive linemen must line up a yard off the line of scrimmage and with only three downs to make first down, it means more passing," he explained. Also in the CFL only one time out per team per half is permitted and there are no manufactured TV timeouts, so the clock keeps moving. In other words, you'd better be in shape.

"It may not sound like much, but that yard off the line of scrimmage makes a big difference," he elaborated. "With the Jets, I was by my man like that," he said snapping his fingers. "Up there by the time I got to him he was waiting and ready."

As a result Zachery had to change his game. "I went from the box stance to the sprinter's stance. After this season, I feel my fundamentals are sound and now it's a case of working on my technique."

ONE OF the big misconceptions of Americans jumping the border is that the players are inferior because it's the CFL and not the NFL and they figure they'll be starters from the start because they are superior.

"But they are pros in Canada and have ability and pride. In fact, their passing game is more refined because they depend on it so heavily. Their receivers run more precise and disciplined routes. And when you come right down to it, there isn't that much difference in the ability of players at that level. It's mostly mental preparation."

The Lone Star Conference showdown between Southwest Texas and Abilene Christian turned out to be a bargain for a ticket Saturday.

Cornelback Ken Coffey nailed down Southwest Texas' second LSC title in two years with 21 seconds left in the contest when he intercepted a Loyal Profit pass and returned it 41 yards to break a 31-31 tie.

The 39-31 triumph almost assured the Bobcats, at 6-0 for the conference, a spot in the NCAA playoffs since they entered the game ranked No. 1 in Division II Abilene Christian, which entered the contest tied for 10th in NCAA polls, fell to a 4-2 league record.

Profit, who completed 23 of 44 passes for 431 yards and four touchdowns, passed for touchdowns of 19, 34 and 49 on Abilene Christian's first possessions to give the Wildcats a 21-0 lead after the first quarter. At the half, Abilene Christian led 28-24, and at the end of the third quarter, its lead was 31-24.

With 3:22 left in the game, Southwest Texas tied the score 31-31 on a four-yard run by quarterback Mike Miller, setting the stage for Coffey's dramatic finish.

The crowd of 13,000 saw the Bobcats produce 437 total yards, while Abilene Christian gained 444.

The only questions now in the LSC are second place and an NAIA Division I playoff berth for No. 14-ranked East Texas State, 4-2 in the league along with Angelo State and Texas A&I.

East Texas State needs a win at Angelo State Saturday to move up in NAIA polls and to gain a playoff bid.

Against Stephen F. Austin Saturday, East Texas State had a nine-carry, 120-yard rushing effort by fullback Ted Sample that included touchdown runs of 40 and 51 yards. Tailback Cary Noel added 123 yards and a touchdown on 23 carries.

Angelo State's Rams had problems with Sam Houston until intermission, then exploded with 28 points in the third quarter for a 38-10 victory. Quarterback Doug Kuhlmann completed 15 of 27 passes for 177 yards and two touchdowns for the winners.

Fullback Marcus Bonner had scoring runs of four and three yards and a touchdown reception of one yard to lead Texas A&I to a 49-0 win over Howard Payne. The A&I defense held the Yellow Jackets to 56 total yards while the Javelina offense gained 443 total yards.

Other games this Saturday will be Texas A&I at Southwest Texas, Sam Houston at S.F. Austin and Abilene Christian at Howard Payne.

City cagers see action this week

It may be hard to put thoughts of football on the back burner, but ready or not, teams at Midland Lee and Midland High are moving inside. Basketball is here to stay through February.

The girls kick the high school season loose on the public Tuesday when Midland High travels to meet 3A Sweetwater at 8 p.m. and Lee takes to the road to play 2A Reagan County in Big Lake at 6:15. Junior varsity outings will precede both contests. The Lee girls were 20-11 last year and co-champions in District 5-5A. MHS finished back in action also in Abilene Thursday at 5 and 6:15 p.m.

Friday the Lee Rebels opens against Lubbock Monterey with sophomore, JV and varsity games being held at 4, 6:15 and 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center, marking the home debut home debut for a Midland team. Lee was 14-20 last season, but has most of that team returning. Lee is expected to be a contender this season as Tall City teams just might dominate 5-5A like they did in most of the 1970s. The Lee girls see action Friday at Lubbock for 6:15 and 8 p.m. contests with defending state girls champion Monterey.

Saturday MHS will travel to Odessa for 6:15 and 8 p.m. games with Ector, a team which should be strong this year. The Midland High boys make their home debut at Chaparral Center Nov. 24 against Ector.

AC heads for NAIA

Texas has one playoff bound team in the college ranks with Austin College facing Moorhead, Minn., Saturday in a first-round NAIA Division II playoff game at Goodwell, Okla.

The Kangaroos shared the TIAA title with Sul Ross College, but drew the playoff assignment because of a higher national ranking than the Lobos, with whom they split during the regular season. Both finished 9-1 in the double round robin TIAA schedule.

AC finished sixth nationally while SRC was ninth.

Sul Ross kept its hopes alive Saturday with a 48-0 mauling of Trinity at San Antonio as fullback Andrew Hill rushed for 109 yards and scored three touchdowns while quarterback Larry Hill completed 13 of 15 passes for 225 yards and two touchdowns.

Meanwhile at Abilene, Austin beat McMurry College, 26-13, as quarterback Larry Schilling ran for one touchdown and passed 25 yards to Clay Oliphant for another. Ricky Turner scored from one yard out and Gene Brannum kicked field goals of 37 and 25 yards.

John Hendrix scored on a three-yard run and Dudley Woodard on a 36-yard scamper for McMurry that cut the score to 23-13 in the fourth period. However, the Indians missed two second period field goal attempts into the wind that died just short of the crossbars.

The other opening round pairings for Saturday's games are Pacific Lutheran University, Tacoma, Wash., at William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo.; Anderson College, Anderson, Ind., at Westminster College, New Wilmington, Pa.; Dickinson State College, Dickinson, N.D., at Concordia College, Moorhead, Minn.; and Austin College, Sherman, Texas, at Panhandle State University, Goodwell, Okla.

Pacific Lutheran, 9-0 on the season and riding a 14-game winning streak, is the defending Division II national champion. The Lutes' opponent, William Jewell, 10-0, is making its second consecutive playoff appearance.

A set of "The King Ranch" by Tom Lea, a pewter Noah's Ark and leather-bound dictionary and thesaurus are some of the items available at the Oak Leaf book store, 13 Oak Ridge Square, northeast corner of Wadley and Garfield streets. The store, owned by Judy Hubbard, is open 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

Oak Leaf book store has the 'best and latest'

The Oak Leaf book store at 13 Oak Ridge Square, northeast corner of Wadley and Garfield streets, is fully stocked for Christmas. Of course, owner Judy Hubbard has all of the "best and latest," including James Clavell's "Noble House" (that's from the "Shogun" author,) and the hard-to-find boxed set of "The King Ranch" by Tom Lea. However, the real specialty of the Oak Leaf is its unusually large and beautiful selection of collectors' books, particularly books on southwestern art. Ansel Adams' photography books are available, as are fine volumes of game and wildlife. See the large Audubon Society books of trees, wild animals, wildflowers, and their Encyclopedia of North American birds. Also consider oversized volumes devoted to a particular state or region, such as New England, the Rockies, etc.

A book for everyone's hobby can be found at the Oak Leaf: antique collectors; automobile, aviation, and railroad buffs; guns, motorcycles, dogs, Persian carpets! And, a big group of cookbooks, including many of the fine cookbooks issued by various Junior Leagues. Travel books and guides bring a real sense of adventure to the Christmas scene.

Choose from many delightful Christmas books for children, or give an "any time, any season" large picture book to your favorite little child.

You will want to check out the game department while visiting with Ms. Hubbard. Ask to see Backgammon II, one of the newest.

Hand crafted Christmas ornaments are of both cloth and wood; the latter can be monogrammed. Beautiful ultra suede address books, charming nutcrackers, Snoopy items (these last are on sale — dolls, clothes, the lot,) and pewter collectibles by Hudson Pewter (containing the purest metal on the market, yet reasonable in price — be sure to see Noah's Ark) are all nice for Christmas giving. On items purchased in the store, there will be a free Christmas wrap until Thanksgiving.

The Oak Leaf will custom gift wrap all of your Christmas packages. Another seasonal thing to consider now are Christmas cards. Orders from albums can only be taken through the end of this month. You can also choose from the boxed sets which can be printed in the store. The Oak Leaf offers free printing on orders of stationery — 50 sheets or more; napkins — two packages or more.

lery in Western Park Plaza on the Andrews Highway, behind the Western State Bank.

Midland Gallery has grand opening

Midland Gallery invites you to visit their beautiful new gallery and help celebrate their grand opening on Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Refreshments will be served, and a limited edition print by Dalhart Windberg will be given away, as well as several door prizes.

Gallery owners Rodney and Debbie Magee proudly present a fine selection of original paintings and limited and unlimited edition prints by Dalhart Windberg, winner of the 1979-1980 Texas Artist of the Year Award, and several other master artists.

See the paintings and limited edition prints of various established American artists who depict beauty and realism. Many of these artists' works are excellent investments whether in original form or limited prints: Robert Summers, Larry Dyke, Dennis Schmidt, Fred Stone, S.L. Humphrey, W.R. Thrasher, James Boren, G. Harvey, Bettie Felder, Robert Pummil, Betty Allison, Carol Gibson-Sayle, C. Summey, Ginger Brown, Robert Wood, Lee K. Parkison, Opal Lewis, Ken Fleisch, James M. Haney, A.D. Greer, T.W. Alston, J.W. Thrasher, Howard Burger, R.D. Enright, Nelson Rhodes, M. Caroselli, and Gary Broome.

From this large and varied collection, the Magees can assist you in choosing the perfect work of art for your enjoyment and investment.

Midland Gallery has a large selection of ready-made frames, or they can custom build a frame for any type of art. They offer next day service on framing orders in most cases. If you are in need of other services such as glass, matting, cutting, moulding or framing supplies, they can help you. They service corporate accounts as well as individuals.

Midland Gallery is a family business, owned and managed by the Magees. They would like to invite you to visit their gallery. Debbie is a 1972 graduate of Midland Lee High School and has returned home to open the gallery along with her husband, Rodney. Rodney is the framing expert and can assist you in all your framing needs.

Art themes to be featured at Midland Gallery are western, oil-related, horse racing, Indian, wildlife, and landscape. The gallery is in Western Park Plaza on Andrews Highway, located behind Western State Bank. Business hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., or call 684-8761 for an appointment.

The gallery offers a 20 percent discount on framing through November. Also, still available are the 8 by 10 inch Windberg prints, framed and unframed. The prints are no longer published in this size; once these are sold, they are gone. They would make excellent Christmas gifts, either a framed pair for grouping, or individually.

Dollar slightly higher

LONDON (AP) — The dollar gained against most foreign currencies in early trading today on world money markets. Gold prices declined.

Mid-morning dollar rates compared to late Friday:

2.2343 West German marks, up from 2.2220
1.7668 Swiss francs, up from 1.7565
5.6135 French francs, up from 5.5975
1.193 Italian lire, up from 1.1833
2.4380 Dutch guilders, up from 2.4328
1.1882 Canadian dollars, down from 1.1888
The dollar slipped against the British pound and the Japanese yen.

In London it cost $1.9250 to buy a pound, as compared to $1.9105 at the close Friday.
In Tokyo, where trading ends just as Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 226.70 yen, down from 227.20 yen late Friday.
Gold traded at $409.75 an ounce at mid-morning in London, down from $412.50 late Friday. The morning "fixing" price had been pegged at $408.25 an ounce.
In Zurich, bullion traded at about $412.50, down from $413.30.
Earlier in Hong Kong, gold fell 30 cents an ounce to close at $417.39.

Father of nuclear submarine is a survivor

By E. JOSEF HERBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Adm. Hyman Rickover always will be known to the world as the father of America's nuclear fleet, but inside the Navy, he may be remembered even more as a survivor.

Outlasting seven presidents, Rickover over the years turned back repeated challenges to his authority and protected his turf with the savvy of the wisest bureaucrat. And within his command, his word still goes unchallenged.

A deceptively frail-looking man, the 81-year-old Rickover has run the Navy's nuclear program since the first atomic-powered submarine, the Nautilus, was launched nearly 30 years ago.

Today, Rickover oversees a nuclear fleet of 127 submarines and surface ships.

The Pentagon announced Friday that President Reagan has approved Rickover's retirement and has asked him to become a "presidential adviser on nuclear science." His two-year extension on active duty expires in January.

Over the years, Rickover has received almost fanatic loyalty from those under his command, choosing officers personally for his nuclear propulsion program. But it has been Rickover's ability to gain the support of powerful allies in Congress that has allowed him to beat back past attempts to prod him into retirement.

Paul Nitze, a Navy secretary under President Lyndon B. Johnson, recalls when he asked Rickover to retire in the 1960s. Rickover refused and said his friends in Congress would protect him. That's just what happened, Nitze recalls. "He beat me."

An electrical engineer as well as a 1922 graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy, Rickover became convinced in 1947 that development of an atomic-powered submarine was possible. He submitted plans for its construction and in 1955 the Nautilus went to sea, marking the first time nuclear energy had been used to propel a vessel.

Over the years, Rickover gained a reputation not only for his knowledge of nuclear power, but for his outspokenness on a broad range of issues from the state of the nation's schools to the conduct of defense contractors and Pentagon officials.

In 1963, he enraged the Parent-Teacher Association by saying women belonging to PTA are "an infernal nuisance and ought to stay home and take care of their husbands."

He has also taken jibes at the Navy's organization and the Defense Department's civilian establishment. In 1968, he described the Pentagon as "constipated" and said it should be purged "or it will become increasingly torpid."

Defense contractors, particularly the shipbuilding companies that supply nuclear subs to the Navy, have long been a Rickover target.

Recently the contractors have responded in kind. P.T. Velliotis, general manager of General Dynamics' Electric Boat Division, said the other day Rickover "was the force...that built the nuclear submarines...but right now he has become an unmovable force. I think it is time for new ideas and new people to come in."

Rickover has had a reputation as a non-conformist during much of his 60-year career in the Navy.

In recent years, he has chosen not to wear his uniform and some who have known him say that is one of the ways he seeks to visibly separate himself from the Navy brass. His headquarters is in a commercial office building, instead of the Pentagon.

Rickover is a private man who in recent years has rarely given interviews. His public image is one of a stern taskmaster, government critic, and outspoken advocate of nuclear power. Those who know him say the image reflects the true man.

The Russian-born son of an immigrant Jewish tailor, Rickover holds a masters degree in electrical engineering from Columbia University.

In 1974, about two years after his first wife's death, he married a Navy nurse 30 years his junior. They had met at the Bethesda Naval Hospital near Washington while Rickover was a patient.

The admiral has suffered two heart attacks since 1961 and was hospitalized with a respiratory ailment in 1973.

But none of the health problems has slowed him down noticeably as he continues to put in a full workday, 20 years after the Pentagon's normal retirement age for admirals and generals.

Georgia town going for $14 million

BRASELTON, Ga. (AP) — Hundreds of people are interested in buying this town of 500 people after all, a local real-estate agent says.

"I guess we've had 200 to 300 calls since the word went out" last week that Braselton is for sale, said David Moreland of RE-MAX Northeast Inc., the agent handling the sale. "A few calls even came from Europe."

Moreland, who has set a price of $14 million for the town, refused to divulge the identities of potential buyers, but said most are individuals and businesses seeking to bring massive industrial expansion to the area.

The community was carved out of the northeast Georgia foothills in 1876 by William Harrison Braselton, whose descendants have run it as sort of a family business ever since.

But the five eldest Braselton men, an assortment of brothers and cousins ranging in age from 53 to 82, say they have no heirs to take over the holdings and that it's time to sell.

Miller is acting chairman

ODESSA — Dr. Don Miller, associate professor of pedagogical studies at The University of Texas at the Permian Basin, has been named acting chairman of the pedagogical studies faculty and certification officer for teacher certification at UTPB.

Miller will assume duties by the end of the fall semester, according to Dr. William Tanksley, dean of the College of Arts and Education, who has been acting faculty chairman since Sept. 1.

An associate professor of educational administration at UTPB since 1973, Miller's areas of specialization include supervision, personnel administration, organizational behavior, management system theory and organization theory.

He previously served as lecturer and personnel intern at Syracuse University and as principal, assistant principal and public school teacher, with positions both in the United States and Germany. He also has held the position of personnel director in public school systems.

He had consulted on several projects including a recent management and marketing survey for United Way of Midland. In addition, he has consulted on projects on humanizing education for Midland Independent School District and Fort Stockton Independent School District, on a staff development and goal setting project for Ector County School District and on an evaluation and needs assessment for Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity.

Stock market gains

By BILL DOYLE

Q. Did the new federal tax law make any changes in the rules under which a family selling its home to buy a more expensive home can postpone paying taxes on the sale profit from the previous home?

A. Yes, a relatively small change. You can now buy or build a more expensive principal residence within two years before or after the sale of your old home and postpone the tax bite. Under the old law, you had two years to build but only 18 months to buy. The new rule applies to residences sold on and after July 21 and also to residences sold before that date, if the old law's 18-month replacement period hadn't expired by that date.

This rule, which can be used by all homeowner taxpayers, defers the capital gains tax on the profit from the sale of your old home. It also reduces the cost basis of the more expensive home you buy.

Let's say you bought a home years ago for $25,000 and put $10,000 in additions and improvements. That makes your basis $35,000. Say you sell it now for $60,000, making your proceeds from the sale $25,000. You have a $25,000 profit.

Now say you buy or build a home for $80,000. Your basis on your new home is $55,000 — the $80,000 purchase price, minus the $25,000 profit on your old home on which you have postponed taxes.

If you buy or build a more expensive home a number of times, as many families do, you do this each time. If you eventually sell and buy a less expensive home or move into rental quarters, you are then required to report your profit. By that time, however, you will probably qualify for the $25,000 once-in-a-lifetime exclusion from tax on the sale of your principal residence.

All this, of course, demonstrates the need of keeping accurate records of the cost basis of every home you have ever owned.

Doyle welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Keep house sale records for IRS

By BILL DOYLE

Q. On July 21, we sold the house we had lived in for 15 years and bought a new house. My wife and I are in our 70s and expect to live in our new home for the rest of our lives. So, we wish to get the full exemption from tax on the sale of our previous home. Will it be necessary for us to produce records showing the price we originally paid, plus all additions and improvements?

A. It will be, if the Internal Revenue Service questions your return. You report the sale of your previous home by using IRS Form 2119. But, unless the profit on that sale was very large, you really have nothing to worry about.

Under the new federal tax law, anyone 55 or older who sells a "principal residence" — not a summer place or second home — after living in it for at least three of the last five years can take a "once-in-a-lifetime exclusion" and pay no tax on up to $125,000. That rule became effective for sales on and after July 21, getting your sale in just past the wire. Previously that exclusion was $100,000.

Your profit was the difference between your proceeds from the sale and your "basis." Your proceeds were the selling price, minus selling costs (real estate commissions, etc.) and "fixing-up" expenses. Your basis was the price you originally paid, plus the cost of all additions and improvements to that house.

If you had a profit of $125,000 or less on the sale of your previous home, you can exclude all of it from taxes. If the profit was higher, the amount above $125,000 will be taxable as a long-term capital gain — meaning that 20 percent will go to Uncle Sam.

On the off chance the revenuers call you in, you'll need records to verify the basis of the house you sold. When dealing with the IRS, the burden of proof is on the taxpayer. The lesson here is that every homeowner should file away all receipts — large and small — for home improvements and additions.

Magazine reports plot on Khadafy

By JOHN CUNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The government of former French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing was planning an assassination attempt on Libyan leader Muammar Khadafy and sought the Reagan administration's approval early this year, Time magazine reports.

Quoting unidentified sources in Washington, the magazine says in its current issue that a high-ranking official in Giscard d'Estaing's government presented the plan to high-ranking Reagan administration officials.

The U.S. would not have been directly involved in the assassination attempt, the magazine says, but the French asked that the U.S. give quick recognition to Khadafy's successor in the event of a coup.

Time says the plan was never approved, although U.S. officials agreed to continued discussions. The plan fell through when Francois Mitterrand defeated Giscard d'Estaing in the French presidential election in May, the magazine says.

"The French official proposed that the killing be done by a group of Libyan exiles, trained and controlled by the French," Time says. Its sources told it, Richard Allen, the national security advisor, was at the White House meeting, Time says.

Edwin Meese, counselor to President Reagan, would neither confirm nor deny the plan, Time says. But the magazine quotes State Department spokesman Dean Fisher as saying there was "no discussion of a covert plot to overthrow Khadafy."

Spokeswoman Kim Hoggard, reached at the White House on Sunday night, said, "I don't have any information on that. I don't know what to tell you."

Mitterrand government officials insisted last week they had never heard of such a plot, Time says, and "the French official has disavowed any role in the plot."

Nicholas Veliotis, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs, and Chester Crocker, assistant secretary for African affairs, denied the official made "any formal proposal of covert action" at the meeting they attended, the magazine says. They admitted the discussion involved Libya, the magazine says.

England's pleas

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — The Rev. Ian Paisley rejected the British government's plea for calm and called for a mass anti-government demonstration in response to the slaying by the IRA of a fellow Protestant member of Parliament.

"It will be Ulster's day of action — we know who we have to deal with," said the militant Protestant leader in calling for the demonstration next Monday to protest the murder Saturday of the Rev. Robert Bradford.

Paisley told his congregation Sunday there would be a "showdown" with the British government and that Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher would be "taught a lesson."

"The people we have to deal with are the representatives of a treacherous government, from the Secretary of State (for Northern Ireland) James Prior to every member of that government," Paisley said. "Those are the men who are placed in Ulster to destroy us. Those are the men against whom we must struggle."

Harold McCusker, another Protestant member of the House of Commons from Northern Ireland, called for a province-wide, one-hour strike during Bradford's funeral on Tuesday.

Paisley, the leader of Northern Ireland's Democratic Unionist Party, is a militant opponent of the agreement last week by Mrs. Thatcher and Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald to set up an Anglo-Irish council to improve relations between the two countries.

Schmidt asks for harmony

LONDON (AP) — Expressing regret over recent conflicting statements from Washington about the possibility of a limited nuclear war in Europe, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt called for more harmony among U.S. leaders.

"I would rather like to have more harmony in the concert from Washington," Schmidt was quoted as saying in an interview published today in the Times of London. "That would certainly be better for the West German audience."

Schmidt was referring to President Reagan's remarks last month about the possibility of a limited nuclear war in Europe. That was followed by conflicting statements from U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger over the possibility of a NATO nuclear warning shot in the event of a Soviet attack.
